They regarded the venture as an outright speculation. It was. But the money put Lake Shore over. It enabled Oakes to sink the shaft another 100 feet, where it came into rich ore, and build a small mill.

Great Mining Achievement.

Today, at 4,500 feet depth, Lake Shore is still in rich ore running as high as $35 to the ton, present gold price. Eventually the mine will go to a depth of 4,700 feet when present plans are carried out. But the management is in no hurry. It is milling the lowest average grade of ore in its production history, paying a heavy tax to the Federal Government, prolonging the life of the mine and making more money than ever before.

Large Ore Body Reported By Standard Gold Mine

VICTORIA—William Sloan, managing director of Standard Gold Mines, operating nine miles east of Pioneer in the Bridge River district has received word in Vancouver that an ore body, the entire width of the main cross-cut, had been intersected at a vertical depth of 350 feet.

MANY CLAIMS STAKED.

The year 1907, when the Cobalt silver rush was at its height, was one of Ontario's biggest years for claim-staking when 13,996 miners' licenses were issued by the Department of Mines, but it was eclipsed by 1927 when the number reached 15,554. The lowest mark since 1907 was 1,534 in 1918.

These gold bars from the Hollinger Mine at Timmins have an aggregate value of $112,000. This is the finished product of the mine, ready for shipment.

The Triumph of Tenacity

The Lake Shore Mine at Kirkland Lake, once a despised prospect, is today the richest producing gold mine in the Western Hemisphere.

MINES PAYDAY SEES FLOOD OF CASH RELEASED

STORES, BANKS BUSY.

Thousands of Dollars in Wages Go Out to Mine Employees Every Fortnight.

Pay day at the mines!

What does that mean to you? Miners behaving like sailors in port, a riotous evening, full police cells?

You've been reading too many magazines.

There's lots doing on pay night but it's not so obvious as all that. In the Kirkland Lake Camp it comes twice a month, on the 10th and 25th, and make no mistake about it—the 10th and 25th are big days in Kirkland Lake every month. Up in the Porcupine camp the pay-days of the various mines don't always synchronize, although a couple of months ago it just happened that McIntyre, Hollinger and Dome all hit the same pay-day and handed out $400,000 between them in the course of a few hours.

Big Payroll in Two Camps.

Timmins will remember that day for awhile. It dramatized in memorable fashion the extent of the camp's payroll. For that $400,000 was for two weeks' work. The Porcupine mines pay their workers a grand total of about ten million dollars in the course of a year.

At Kirkland Lake the payroll is estimated at $325,000 every two weeks, from seven producing mines—Toburn, Sylvanite, Macassa, Kirkland Lake Gold, Teck-Hughes, Wright-Hargreaves and Lake Shore.

That's a lot of spending money to be turned loose in two towns. A million and a half a month.

The Carnival Spirit.

Timmins and Kirkland Lake can each be described as "a man's town", and there's a lot of "high rolling" done when the cheques come through. The liquor stores, blind pigs and poker games get a big play, as a matter of course, but there are other pay day angles. Mine workers get married and have homes and wives and youngsters. Pay day means new boots for little Willie and paying the grocery bill and giving the landlord his due and paying another installment on the radio. It means just what pay day means the world over—with the exception that in Kirkland Lake and Timmins and other mining camps the money is concentrated in a small area and the tap is turned on suddenly. That makes for a holiday spirit. The average Canadian miner's wage is $1,800 a year, which is a mighty good average as compared with other industries.

Take the stores for instance. On a pay day afternoon you'll see the clerks standing around. There's always a lull before the cheques are handed out. Talk to a weary clerk late that night—for the stores stay open for that evening of all evenings.

"We weren't doing a thing until about four o'clock—and then we had to step!"

Banks Open On Pay Night.

That's one kind of payday. A big rush and then little cash business until next time. Sometimes, more characteristic of the Timmins camp, pay night business is not so much of a buying spree but the money keeps coming in until the next one and business keeps steady.

Watch the crowds on pay night. A farming town on Saturday evening has nothing on Kirkland Lake for a summer pay night. The banks open at 6:15 and stay open for an hour—a special concession granted by the government—and every bank has a line-up. Everybody in town dresses up and steps out. And next day there's a big line-up at the Post Office, too, at the money-order wickets.

Sending Money Back Home.

Some of the foreign born—just like some of the native-born—go haywire and blow the bank roll on anything from pedigreed pups to motorcycles. Many of them have families back in the "Old Country" to whom they send substantial slabs of coin. Others are building up a retirement fund back home. Still others just salt their money away in the bank until the big day when they can shuck off their oilskins, get their time, buy a ticket to Europe and go back to live the life of Riley and lord it over the former school pals back in that dear old Slobodka.

And how they can save money! One ordinary "mucker" piled up between four and five thousand dollars in five years. At $4.25 a day it is assumed that he was not among the local playboys during his stay.

Nobody knows how much money goes "back home", out of the country. It's plenty, though. Maybe $100,000 a payday?

Police Maintain Order.

The police angle on the pays? It's the day the bluecoats are on the jump. Not so many serious offences. But someone hoists a few too many and there's an argument. The police settle it. Another group may lay in a supply of "cheer" and sit around building up an edge until about 10 o'clock until they are seized with the urge to go places. And that's when

KIRKLAND LAKE IS HIGHEST GRADE CAMP IN THE WORLD

Growth in Past Five Years Has Been Extremely Rapid, Although History Goes Back to 1911—Has Many Years of Life Ahead.

Kirkland Lake—home of Lake Shore, Wright-Hargreaves, Teck Hughes, Sylvanite, Kirkland Lake Gold, Toburn and Macassa—has a history that goes back to 1911.

Although it was only a year behind the Porcupine camp in the actual production of gold, its growth from the "promising area" stage to its present status as one of the major gold fields of the continent has been a matter of the past few years.

Much of its growth has been in that period when practically every other city and town in Canada was grappling with hard times.

It isn't on the main line of the T. and N.O. railway but on a branch line, the Nipissing Central, which runs from Swastika across the Quebec border to Rouyn and Noranda. The visitor may change trains at Swastika and continue his journey on plush cushions but the majority travel the five miles over to the mining camp by bus over one of the busiest sections of road in Northern Ontario.

Kirkland Lake, in fact, is just a little off the main north-south traffic arteries and doesn't worry about the fact.

The Larder Lake Rush.

Back in 1907, during the Cobalt rush, there was a staking stampede into the Larder Lake field and the public lost so much money in that abortive boom that it gave the whole Larder-Lake-Kirkland country a black eye that wasn't effaced for years. It was largely a winter rush and much ground was staked holus-bolus, without regard for mineral possibilities or rock formation.

Acres of "moose-pasture" were unloaded on credulous investors as mining prospects. When the day of reckoning came the name of Larder Lake, adjacent to the big mining camp of today, was the signal for bitter and profane language.

Then again, certain geologists and mining engineers said the Kirkland Lake porphyries would not contain commercial gold deposits. They lived to eat their words.

Had Faith In The Field.

"Bill" Wright, a quiet-spoken Englishman, came up from Haileybury in 1911 and staked what is now the nucleus of the great Wright-Hargreaves mine. He staked it in association with his brother-in-law, Ed. Hargreaves, also of Haileybury. Unlike many other prospectors who took up ground in the field, however, Wright did not let his claims lapse.

The Tough brothers, Tom, Bob and George, and Harry Oakes, a prospector from Maine, were among those who had sufficient faith in the field to snap up a group of lapsed claims on the night of January 28, 1912. The Tough brothers had been living in a cabin at Swastika, earning a little money by working on a road from Swastika to Larder Lake, construction of which had been financed by Swastika merchants.

Albert Wende's Influence.

The Wright-Hargreaves had a struggle until a Buffalo man named Albert Wende came along and lent a hand. Wende was deeply interested in the possibilities of Kirkland and was one of the very first to realize the potentialities of the camp. He not only knew wealthy people in Buffalo but, what was more, he had their confidence. More than any other one man Albert Wende was responsible for the development of Kirkland Lake. It was he who brought a party of moneyed men in from the States in 1916 when Harry Oakes was struggling to put over his Lake Shore Mine.

These men bought stock and put up money that enabled Oakes to sink his shaft another 100 feet to hit pay-ore and put the potentially richest gold mine in North America on its feet.

Wende tried to make a deal for the Tough-Oakes but it was Clement Foster, then mayor of Haileybury, who finally put up the money to develop the property. Tough-Oakes made the first shipment of gold from the Kirkland Lake camp, late in 1912.

The first 30-ton shipment returned $400 to the ton. And yet a banker refused the property a loan on the strength of it.

Big Figures.

Teck-Hughes was another producer that had its own troubles getting under way. The main ore zone of the Kirkland Lake field was opened up there and it encouraged other outfits to continue development work. It encouraged Harry Oakes to sink his shaft under the lake and there he ran into ore that assayed as high as $1000 a ton.

These figures from a new camp would cause a terrific sensation today. They scarcely caused a ripple outside Kirkland Lake back in 1913-14.

There was a great deal of prospecting, of course, and plenty of activity in the camp. Discoveries were made on the Wright-Hargreaves, Robbins, Wettlaufer, Hunton, Wood-McKane and other properties. The latter, under new names by absorption or re-organization are all producing gold today.

The war impeded development of the new camp. Labor shortage and high cost of materials were primary obstacles. The Tough-Oakes closed down in 1918. Until 1920 the camp was in the midst of tribulation and discouragement. That year its production hit the million dollar mark.

Greatest Development Is Recent

By 1931 it had produced only $22,000,000 in gold.

By the end of 1933 it had produced a total of $154,000,000. It is now swinging along at a rate of almost $3,000,000 a month.

The richness of the ore is evident by the fact that in June of this year Kirkland Lake produced gold to a value of $2,951,009 from 166,799 tons of ore milled.

The Porcupine camp milled 301,020 tons of ore to a value of $2,546,566.

And this at a time when Kirkland Lake mines, like most other gold mines, are digging into their low-grade ore bodies!

Great Change In Ten Years.

Back in 1923, just eleven years ago, Kirkland Lake was a straggling and struggling little place of less than 1,500 people. It had a crooked, winding main street with unpretentious frame buildings, many shacks and cabins—and the mine plants.

Today it is a flourishing place of 16,000 population, fine residences, modern stores and office buildings, theatres, arena, curling rink, athletic fields, schools, churches and more cars per capita than any other town in the North.

The population has jumped more than 5000 in the past three years. It has doubled in five years.

The camp has an annual payroll of six and a half million dollars.

So acute was the housing problem when the great influx to Kirkland Lake got under way four years ago that houses were shipped piecemeal and in their entirety from Cobalt, Haileybury and Silver Centre. The latter town was dead, because of cessation of silver mining activity in South Lorrain, and buildings were torn down and shipped to Kirkland Lake for reconstruction. A number of small houses were loaded bodily onto freight cars and taken to the growing camp from Haileybury and Cobalt.

Years of Life Ahead.

Kirkland Lake is not only a rich camp but has years of life ahead of it. Discoveries in Kirkland Lake Gold, deepest gold mine in Canada, and at depth in Lake Shore and Teck-Hughes, indicate that ore bodies of high value persist far below the surface and it is not improbable that Kirkland Lake mines may yet be taking out gold from 10,000 feet below.

This year has not only seen richer production values from the big mines of the camp but an expansion of development toward the vast, west and north of Kirkland Lake proper. Bidgood and Moffat-Hall are two new producers east of Teck Township and development work is proceeding toward re-opening of old properties in the direction of the Quebec boundary. Re-opening of one property and resumption of development of others indicates that Larder Lake is to have a revival. The Goodfish Mine, north of Kirkland Lake, has been re-opened and Canadian Kirkland, Trout Creek, Baldwin, Kirkland Consolidated and Four Nations are operating west of the camp as far as the Kenogami area.

FARR WAS MAN WHO OPENED UP TEMISKAMING

Former Hudson Bay Factor Responsible for Unlocking Door.

FIGHT FOR RAILWAY

Cobalt Silver Camp Fruit of Haileybury Founder's Endeavors.

Although many men have shared in the work of opening up Northern Ontario, if any one man was entitled to the lion's share of the credit for the opening of the Temiskaming country that has given Canada so much new wealth in the past thirty years, the man was the late Charles C. Farr, founder and first mayor of Haileybury.

Mr. Farr, who came to Canada as a young Englishman, was one of the genuine pioneers of the Northland. He was an axeman with the party that surveyed the Ontario-Quebec boundary in the north; he was long an employee of the Hudson Bay Company and eventually became Factor at Fort Temiskaming. Farr left the company's service to take up land near Humphrey's Depot, site of the present town of Haileybury, and launched a vigorous campaign for developing and opening up the farming country on the west side of Lake Temiskaming.

Brought Settlers to District.

Farr had to fight the opposition of the Hudson Bay Company, which vigorously opposed any colonization because of its inevitable effect on their fur trade, but he also had to fight public prejudice which held that Northern Ontario was too cold for settlement. Farr battled stubbornly for the future of the district with which he had cast his lot. He wrote letters to the newspapers appealed to the Government, interested influential people By the year 1894 he had interested so many people that there was something of an influx of settlers. It was encouraging—but the nearest railway was at Mattawa, and Farr knew that the great need of his district was the railway. In 1895 the Grand Trunk Railway obtained a charter for the line but the scheme was dropped when the Grand Trunk got into financial deep waters.

Long Fight for Railway.

Farr's representations to Toronto had not been without effect. "I spent more weeks on snowshoes than days on a train," he often said, referring to the long journey to Mattawa that was necessary before he could reach the steel. He had many discouragements. Twice his mill was destroyed by fire. The Grand Trunk charter was dropped and another company was formed to build the line but for a long time nothing happened. Farr went to England and published a pamphlet on the Temiskaming country. He also gave lectures "and beat up recruits." He brought back with him a number of settlers whose names are well-known in the district today. The Dominion Government offered to pay Farr eight dollars a head for the immigrants he had induced to come to Canada.

"I'm fetching out my own countrymen, not a bunch of cattle," said Farr and refused the money.

At length, in 1903, the long-awaited railway construction was started. The Government had asked Farr if he would be satisfied with a grant for a land road.

"No! Put ten times that money into bonusing a railroad and you will tap one of the richest countries in the world."

He was referring to the agricultural potentialities of the Clay Belt. Even Farr, whose stubborn faith in the territory eventually had its reward, did not dream of the mineral wealth that lay awaiting discovery.

McKinley and Darragh, two subcontractors discovered silver, while blasting the right-of-way for the new line just south of the present town of Cobalt. A blacksmith named LaRose, working for another sub-contractor named McMartin, made a rich silver find on the property that later became the LaRose Mine. Before the railway even reached the Clay Belt, the great Cobalt silver stampede was getting under way. The T. and N. O carried more freight and passengers in the first year of its existence than had been expected for the first ten years. After Cobalt came discoveries in South Lorrain, Gowganda, Larder Lake. Then in 1911 came the Porcupine gold rush and later came Kirkland Lake.

An Accurate Prediction.

Although it is true enough that Farr did not know that the country he strove to open up would eventually be one of the greatest mining areas of the world he was extraordinarily accurate in his predictions. He had predicted that the railway would eventually reach James Bay, he had predicted that the Clay Belt would justify a tremendous agricultural development, and in the pamphlet he published in England he called attention to the statement of Sir William Logan that the day would come when the mines of Temiskaming would employ more men than the pine forests.

"Although these first finds," wrote Farr, referring to discoveries that had already been made by prospectors in the Temagami country and on the Montreal River, "may not prove bonanzas, at least minerals are plentiful in the country and when by fire or otherwise the district shall have been denuded of its forests, the words of Sir William Logan will be verified and mining will be one of the chief industries of Temiskaming and its neighborhood. The developments at Sudbury were made possible only by the Canadian Pacific Railway. A new railway will also be the means of developing a greater than Sudbury here."

PLANES IN NORTH NOW NECESSITY

Commercial Air Services Carry Freight and Passengers Into Remote Areas

PROSPECTORS USING AIR

Advancing the northward expansion of Canada by many years, the aeroplane has been one of the most important factors in the rapid development of hinterland mining camps during the past decade.

It is safe to say that with the possible exception of the Great Bear Lake country no part of Canada is today more "air-minded" than Northern Ontario. The 'plane is accepted as casually as the canoe, and in many instances has replaced it in the bush country beyond the steel.

From the time of the Rouyn rush back in 1922 up to the Long Lac rush of 1934 the aeroplane has played a big part in the development of every new mining camp of the past twelve years.

Aviation has speeded up progress and furthered the opening of new fields to a degree impossible to estimate. Up in the Northland a plane droning overhead scarcely attracts an upward glance if one lives anywhere near the vicinity of one of the numerous flying bases scattered throughout the country.

Government planes are on the go all summer long detecting and suppressing bush fires, engaged in photographing and mapping great tracts of country, busy in a dozen phases of activity in areas which railways and highways have not yet penetrated.

Commercial Service.

Commercial planes fly swiftly on regular schedules carrying passengers and freight to remote camps, bringing prospectors in a few hours to distant lakes that could only be reached by days and weeks of arduous canoe travel. New machinery and replacements are flown in to mining plants.

Fire rangers, police officers, Indian agents, missionaries, prospectors, mining company officials, commercial travellers—hundreds of people whose business takes them to hinterland camps and settlements make use of the aeroplane as a matter of course.

"Mercy flights" in which sick or injured people have been brought out to receive medical attention, have saved many lives. Pulp and paper companies use 'planes to cruise their great timber limits. The Northland has enthusiastically adopted the aeroplane as a necessity.

Aviation Is Unsubsidized.

Canada's commercial aviation service as a whole, although unsubsidized, is one of the greatest in the world. In no other country is commercial aviation standing on its own feet without help or subsidy in the way of airmail contracts or the like.

The Canadian Airways Company alone has flown more than six million miles and moved ten million pounds of freight by air. General Airways, Prospectors' Airways, Northern Skyways, Ltd., National Air Transport, Oakes' Airways, Northwest Aero Marine, Brooks' Airways, Algoma Aerial Transport, Commercial Airways and other flying organizations are all participating in the swift development of commercial aviation in the Northland of Canada. Early this year, Capreol and Austin organized a base at Toronto. These planes may be chartered at the harbor at the foot of Yonge street and will be flown to and from any mining field.

Back in 1922 when the Rouyn rush was in full swing the Laurentide Air Service had a base at Haileybury and introduced prospectors and mining men in general to the possibilities of aviation as an important adjunct to the mining game.

It was not, however, until the Red Lake rush in 1926 that the efficacy of aeroplanes as freight and passenger carriers into the district far from the railway was demonstrated so thoroughly that the new era in prospecting and mining development was completely accepted by the industry and the world at large. The development of the Northwestern Quebec field, of the Red Lake area, God's Lake, the Patricia district, every mining field of the past ten years has been immensely speeded up by air transport.

Aerial Prospecting.

Aerial prospecting has been a development of the past six years. The pioneers in this field were Robert Cockeram and Peter Graham, who organized Prospectors' Airways after making a successful aerial prospecting tour in 1928 With Glyn Burge as pilot, the two prospectors made 170 flights between June 1st and November 1st, covering a distance of 17,000 miles They carried a sectional canoe, sleeping bags, tent and other equipment and their flights took them into Northern Manitoba above The Pas, into the Patricia district and various parts of Northern Ontario and Quebec Much of their flying was over unexplored territory and they covered more ground in a season than they could have covered by ordinary prospecting methods in many years

Gilbert LaBine's discovery of radium and silver deposits at Great Bear Lake was a direct outcome of a flight over that country when he noticed favorable formations from the air in 1929 and went back next year to make his big find.

Since that time many prospectors have made use of the aeroplane for detecting formations and for getting into new fields quickly. Similarly, when they have prospected an area and decide that it will not repay staking, the aeroplane enables them to go on into new country without waste of time.

Happy Landing in Northern Loveliness

Aviation in Northern Ontario has had a remarkable record of safety. There are many air bases and refuelling depots and countless bodies of water reduce the hazard of forced landings.

MATHESON AREA GETTING BREAK BY GOLD PRICE

BORDEAU ON T. & N. O. ROAD

Several Abandoned Mines Are Now Being Re-opened With Profit.

Another old mining field that has had a "shot in the arm," and is now enjoying a revival under the benign influence of $35 gold and intensive development work by a number of big-league operating companies in the Matheson area, scene of sporadic development attempts in former years, but now apparently coming into its own as a producing camp of promise.

Like the Matachewan and Temagami fields, which were also prospected and explored many years ago and then neglected until recently, the country from Matheson, on the T. & N. O Railway, eastward to the Quebec border, is receiving for the first time the benefits of intensive development backed by strong mining capital.

The old Lightning River country, the Painkiller Lake area, the Matheson sand dunes, old properties and workings in Munro, Beatty, Hislop, Garrison Townships and the Abitibi Lake country, have been the scenes of great activity during the past summer.

Big Companies Interested.

Hollinger Consolidated, McIntyre Mining Corporation, Consolidated Smelters and other leading mining companies are interested in the field. Hollinger, which is also interested in the Matachewan and Long Lac areas, has extensive holdings in Hislop Township, between Ramore and Matheson and is installing shaft-sinking equipment after a diamond-drilling program that is said to have given encouraging results. McIntyre Mining Corporation and Premier Mines have optioned ground adjoining the Hollinger option.

Hollinger's entry into the field and the serious interest being taken by other leading operating companies has stimulated tremendous activity in the area on the part of prospectors and development companies.

Old Mines Reopening.

The old Croesus Mine, which produced rich ore back in 1916, is being dewatered in preparation for a resumption of milling operations and a program of underground exploration. The old Parker Gold Mine in Lightning River, is said to be on the point of resuming operations with new financing. Other mines of another day such as the Hislop, Munro and Gold Pyramids, are involved in current deals with a view to their reopening. The Blue Quartz Mine is again producing.

The Matheson field has long been regarded as a favorable gold country from a geological standpoint and although there was considerable development work in the area after the Porcupine discoveries, none of the properties were ever worked to any great depth The great Matheson fire of 1916 destroyed most of the mine buildings in the area and killed activity until the present revival was launched.

New Gold Mines

Northern Ontario has contributed heavily to this year's tremendous expansion in the gold mining industry in Canada. It is estimated that nearly 80 gold mills will be operating in the Dominion by the end of 1934. As many as 45 new gold mills have either been completed or are now in course of construction since the first of the year.

The police court line-up after payday is not so large when one considers the extent of the population, and minor offences are the rule. Sometimes the lads, who plead guilty to celebrating payday too extensively haven't any money left with which to clear themselves with John Law and they're given credit until next payday.

The list of bad debts on that score is non-existent, which proves that plenty of honest men can get themselves into police court.

Paynight is carnival night. Everybody comes down town. The movie houses are packed. Aggregate business in the stores is heavy—but there are a great many stores. Every merchant will tell you that there are too many, especially in his own line.

GUNNAR GOLD has several faces now in ore, with a total length of over 400 feet up to the end of August. Slashing had revealed a width of approximately ten feet on the first level. Lateral work is now progressing at the 4th level at 800 feet in depth.

POWER STRIDES AS MINING MEN FIND NEW ONES

Enormous Development of Electrical Energy Has Followed Mine Prospector.

FIRST PLANT NEAR COBALT.

H. E. P. C. Has Given Great Service to Mining With Line Extension.

Great steel towers straddling the undergrowth and extending for miles across the Northern skyline, huge dams holding in check the swift waters of Northern rivers, greater power plants humming with life, dozens of sub-stations where vast supplies of electric energy are centralized—one of the most picturesque and vital phases of the rapid development of New Ontario, has been the amazing growth of the power industry.

With inexhaustible power resources at hand in the countless streams and rivers of the North, development and extension of power facilities have kept astride of the rapid progress of the mining industry.

System is Growing Rapidly.

The two go hand in hand. The mines must have power, and as new fields are discovered, new areas opened up and as new mines come into production the tentacles of the power system reach farther and farther afield.

The whole course of mining development in the Northland can be followed by following the course of power development, from the construction of the early power plants on the Montreal and Matabichouan Rivers in the early Cobalt days to the present extension of transmission lines into the newer Quebec goldfields into Matachewan, into the Long Lac area and even to the furthest north mining developments of the province in the Pickle Crow country of Patricia district.

Canada Power Big System.

The Canada Northern Power Corporation, through its two provincial subsidiaries, the Northern Ontario Power Company and the Northern Quebec Power Company, has built up a system representing an investment of over $33,000,000 with gross annual earnings to close on $4,000,000. The great Quinze power development on the Quinze Rapids north of Lake Temiskaming and power plants on the Montreal and Mattagami Rivers in Ontario, supply electricity to mining camps and municipalities throughout the whole Northeastern Ontario and Northwestern Quebec field from the Porcupine through to Cadillac.

Hydro Extends Operations.

The Ontario Hydro Commission, with the mammoth 100,000 h.p. Abitibi Canyon development, its power sources on the Wanapitae, Nipigon and English Rivers and another in construction on the Albany, did not enter the business of supplying power to mining companies until 1929 but has made great strides in the past five years and is rapidly extending its operations in camps old and new.

The high-tension lines of the Canada Northern Power Corporation from the Quinze extend 125 miles westward to serve Kirkland Lake and the Porcupine camp and 60 miles east of Noranda to serve the new goldfields of Quebec.

Hydro acts as agents for the municipalities in the Thunder Bay system and on behalf of the government in its other developments, and has just signed a ten-year contract with the Canada Northern Power Corporation to assure an ample supply of power for its growing activities in the eastern section of the North Country. It also has a contract with the Abitibi Power and Paper Company for power to fulfill mining company contracts in the Sudbury district which it also serves through its Wanapitae development recently purchased.

First Plants Near Cobalt.

Electric power development in the mining country had its inception in the days of the Cobalt camp when the Northern Ontario Light and Power Company was formed to take over compressed air and electric power plants built by private interests on the Montreal River and the Matabichouan River.

With the discovery of the Porcupine gold mines the system was extended by construction of two power plants on the Mattagami River, near Timmins Charlton to supply power to the Kirkland Lake camp in 1916 and subsequent developments necessitated extension of transmission lines from the Cobalt plants. Another plant was built at Indian Chutes, on the Montreal River, to cope with the ever-increasing demand for power to the growing gold camps.

In 1924 the Canada Northern Power Corporation took over the Northern Ontario Power Company and the Northern Quebec Power Company, operating them as subsidiaries, and the Quinze development gave a great new supply of power for the Noranda field and the older camps of Kirkland Lake and the Porcupine.

Hydro Entered Field in 1929.

Hydro entered the Northern power picture so far as the mining camps were concerned when a station was built in 1929 on the English River at Ear Falls to supply power to the Red Lake mining field, 44 miles distant.

Power was first delivered to the Howey Mine early in 1930 and now extension of facilities to other mining developments in the area is under way. Another power plant is being built on the Rat Rapids at Lake Joseph to serve the Pickle Crow Gold Mines and the Central Patricia Gold Mines over a 20-mile transmission line.

Incidentally, Hydro's decision to invade the Patricia country has removed

STAKED BY E. HORNE

Development Swift When Rich Ore Deposits Became Known.

A note of respect, even of reverence, creeps into the voice of every dyed-in-the-wool Northerner when he mentions any one of the following names — Hollinger, Lake Shore, Frood or Noranda. And the history of none of these great mines is more packed with the stuff of romance than the history of Noranda, king of all Quebec mines, richest copper-gold property in the world.

Edmund Horne, a prospector of the old Cobalt school, was the discoverer of Noranda. Although the great mine itself is a development of the past ten years, it is more than twenty years since Ed. Horne first went into the Rouyn country. Mr. Horne was backed by a Cobalt syndicate when he made his first visit in 1911 on the strength of rumors of gold finds east of Rouyn and although he discovered nothing of consequence the formation on the west shore of Osisko Lake interested him so much that he made two subsequent trips in 1914 and 1917, locating bodies of mineralized rhyolite that seemed to warrant further exploration.

Syndicate Backed Horne.

Horne was prospecting on a shoestring basis and in 1920 he interested a group of New Liskeard business men who formed the famous Tremoy Lake Syndicate and sent Horne and R. J. Miller, as his partner, in to stake ground. It was not until doing work on the property in 1921, however, that values of any consequence were obtained. One assay ran as high as $32 to the ton. Horne then staked 160 additional acres and in 1922 he and Miller added 480 more acres to their original holdings. bush fire that swept the country near Horne's camp nearly cost the prospectors their lives but after the fire Horne discovered a projecting ridge that was rich in sulphides.

Jack Morrison, an experienced engineer, went in to look at Horne's show and took samples that assayed from $10 to $75 a ton. It was Jack Morrison who was instrumental in putting the Horne property over. He interested an American Mining Company who sent an engineer to Haileybury. When the engineer found that the property was 100 miles in the bush he refused to any farther, turned back and let one of the richest mines in the world slip through his fingers.

Morrison later interested the Chadbourne-Thompson people, who had taken an option on Tommy Powell's gold claims in the area. The Powell discovery had started something of a rush into the field. Up to this time no one but Horne and Morrison had taken much stock in Ed. Horne's find, but when the Chadbourne-Thompson interests began serious exploration and development of the claims in 1923 the wealth of Noranda was at last revealed and the existence of an enormous copper-gold deposit was eventually brought to light.

Development Was Rapid.

The swift development that followed is almost without parallel in the history of Canadian mining. Late in 1927 the smelter was "blown in" and copper first poured. The twin towns of Noranda and Rouyn that rose as if by magic from the Quebec wilderness are two of the busiest places in the North Country to-day Noranda controls its own townsite. Rouyn just across the lake, is a separate entity. In the early days of '24 and '25 Rouyn was a mining camp of the old school. Even to-day it has a shaggy, devil-may-care picturesque quality lacked by Noranda, its smarter, more up-to-date neighbor which boasts a hotel and theatre that would do credit to any city.

There are two railway lines, the T. and N. O. which links the camp with Kirkland Lake and Swastika by its subsidiary, the Nipissing Central, and the C. P. R. which has opened up the eastern Lake Temiskaming country with a line from South Temiskaming. Two interprovincial highways have been built.

Great Production Record.

Noranda last year smelted 1,010,629 tons of ore, concentrates and refinery slag. It produced 65,008,731 tons of copper, 284,675 ounces of gold and 510,739 ounces of silver. The high percentage of gold and silver in its ore has enabled it to continue copper operations in spite of the present low price of the base metal. The capacity of the concentrating plant has been increased from 2,000 to 3,000 tons a day. Noranda has mined five million tons of ore to a value of $70,000,000. Its gold ore reserves are estimated at more than 23,000,000 tons and copper reserves at a billion and a half pounds. It has continuously followed a policy of expansion during the years of the depression. Its smelter has a potential capacity of 100,000,000 tons a year and its earnings in 1933 increased by $800,000 over the previous year. Noranda is soon to start marketing selenium and telerrium, two new by-products, selenium is used in the glass, rubber and steel industries while telerrium is used for improving the quality of lead piping.

STRAW LAKE BEACH, a new enterprise operating property at Straw Lake in the Rainy River district of Ontario, has sampled a length of about 600 feet where the gold values average $28.02 per ton across an average of 13.4 inches. It is believed by the operators that the richness of the ore may compensate for the narrow width.

NORTHWESTERN QUEBEC CAMPS FORGING AHEAD

Astonishing Progress is Made in Many Townships in Five Years.

PRODUCTION GAINS

Power and Transportation Facilities Extended to New Properties.

The rapid growth of mining development in Northwestern Quebec within the past seven years to a point where the province now occupies second place among the gold-producing provinces of Canada is one of the fascinating chapters in the mining history of the Dominion. Copper and gold deposits in the Temiskaming-Abitibi country have been discovered and developed with amazing speed and it can be said of the Northwestern Quebec field as it was said of Porcupine and Kirkland Lake a few years ago that the surface has only been scratched.

Quebec's gold-mining history goes back a century, when placer deposits were discovered on the Chaudiere, but only in the last few years has the province contributed extensively to the gold production of the country. In 1926 the total production value was $76,070 but in 1927 when the first production figures from Rouyn were recorded it jumped to $172,214 Since that time progress has been consistent, jumping from more than a million dollars production in 1928 to a grand total of almost eleven million dollars last year. Figures for 1934 will show a substantial increase. Northwestern Quebec has produced more than $60,000,000 in gold, copper and silver within the past four and a half years, according to Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Mines, and has paid out $16,500,000 in dividends. The annual payroll amounts to $6,000,000 and the mines give employment to 4000 men while at the same time affording a market that has justified rapid development of a great agricultural area. It has likewise justified extension of railway, highway and power facilities into a vast area that might otherwise have remained undeveloped for many years.

Noranda, greatest copper-gold mine in the world is the kingpin of the field and the Rouyn area is the leading centre of production but no less than a dozen separate areas across the northern mineral belt are either in production or active development for a distance of more than 100 miles. With the extension of power lines into the central districts and with the all-important factor of the high gold price to justify intensive development the mining industry throughout the whole field is taking tremendous strides.

In 1933 eight mines contributed to gold production—Noranda, Siscoe, O'Brien, Granada, Beattie, Bussieres, Greene-Stabell and Mathews, now the Perron Gold Company. This year the Sullivan Mine has gone into production in the Siscoe area, the Aldermac is increasing its plant capacity, the Waite-Amulet has resumed base metal production in a small way the McWatters will be producing at an early date and mills are being erected or planned for the Arntfield, Canadian Malartic, Thompson Cadillac and Lamaque. Development work is proceeding on a score of other properties in the Rouyn, Siscoe, Duparquet, Bourlamaque, Cadillac, Pascalis, Malartic, Chibougami, Beauchatel and Tiblemont Townships. Many of the operations now in production have conquered difficult metallurgical problems due to the base metal content of ore reserves and their experience will stand in good stead to other developments facing similar difficulties. Enormous reserves of copper and zinc are only awaiting better prices on the world market to boost Quebec's mining production to even greater figures.

Tunisia has a mining boom.

Ontario Has . . .

The richest gold mine in the Western Hemisphere, the Lake Shore at Kirkland Lake.

The richest active gold mine in Canada, in point of total production—the Hollinger, at Timmins.

"This May Pan Out All Right, Joe"

While one prospector crushes a sample his partner is panning the pulverized rock. A good showing of gold in the pan will mean the staking of claims and perhaps some day the existence of another gold mine in the Northern bush.

PROSPECTOR IS ADVENTURER OF VARIED TALENT

Must be Combination of Cook, Guide, Explorer, Geologist, Optimist.

HOW MINES FOUND

Hardship and Discouragement Must be Endured by Seekers of Secrets.

Prospecting, to the uninitiated, is one of the most fascinating and romantic occupations in the world. It appears to offer dazzling rewards for very little risk and effort. A summer holiday in the woods and—if one is lucky—a fortune! What could be sweeter?

Unfortunately it isn't quite so simple as all that. Much is heard about the prospectors who have struck it rich. Little is heard about the others who go on from year to year, making little more than a bare living and hoping for the big find that will put them on Easy Street.

Experience counts in prospecting just as in any other calling. Amateurs have discovered mines by sheer chance but in the long run it is the trained prospector, the man who knows the bush and who knows the rocks, the man trained to endure all the hardships and vicissitudes and disappointments of a prospector's life, who makes the majority of finds.

Companies Retain Prospectors.

The big mining companies are always on the lookout for new properties. They have the capital and the ability to develop the ground. It is usually the ambition of a free-lance prospector to interest one of the big outfits in his claims. The mining company may send experienced engineers out to examine the property and if their reports are favorable may take an option on the claims. If further investigation by way of diamond-drilling, etc., seems to indicate that the claims will repay active development the option will be taken up.

The big companies themselves retain experienced and reliable prospectors on salary and every new mining rush will find the old-line companies swiftly represented in the field by men equipped and ready to stake promising ground.

Financing a Trip.

The prospector's season lasts from break-up to freeze-up, roughly from late in May until early October. His first concern before he hits the trail with his partner—for prospectors seldom travel alone—is to get a grubstake. Unless he has private means to finance a summer in the bush he must raise enough money to pay for transportation, supplies, equipment, recording fees and incidental expenses. Usually he knows exactly where he plans to go. Perhaps he has wind of a possible rush to a new field. Perhaps during a previous season he has observed a favorable rock formation on the shore of some northern lake but has not had time to investigate it further. Perhaps, by studying maps and geological reports and talking to other prospectors he has decided that a certain unprospected area offers good possibilities.

A few friends in his home town may form a syndicate, each man investing $50 to $100, depending on the size of the syndicate, and grubstake him for the season. Perhaps, on the other hand, some syndicate may approach him. However the grubstake is raised it is usually upon an arrangement that the prospector and his partner will be provided with transportation and supplies and that they will be paid wages for their work and accorded an interest in the ground they stake. Sometimes these arrangements are very casual—a scribbled agreement on the back of an envelope, a mere verbal understanding.

The Prospectors' Equipment.

The prospector and his partner have their own equipment. They have a canoe and outboard motor, cooking utensils, a tent, blankets, tools and clothing. Their expedition may take them far from civilization and may involve long portages through rough country. The airplane, of course, has revolutionized the prospecting game in recent years and nowadays many prospectors fly directly to the scene of their season's work. A journey that might take several weeks is thus completed in a few hours. Whether he travels by air or not, the prospector's job is to take along only such equipment as is necessary, packed in the smallest possible space, with the lightest possible weight.

If he can afford it he has a silk tent, which is more expensive than a canvas shelter but is lighter and occupies very little space. Each man carries about three blankets and a change of clothing. They pack mosquito bars, pack sheets, a first aid kit and fishing tackle. Their cooking outfit consists of frying pans, pails, tin plates, pannikins, knives, forks, etc. Their tools are light camp axes, hammers, a gold pan, mortar and pestle and a moil. Water-tight match containers and fly oil are also essential. They carry about a month's food supplies, including flour, salt, bacon, tea, coffee, beans, pepper, butter, evaporated milk, baking powder, sugar, dried fruit, rice, barley, etc., to a weight of about 200 pounds. The indispensable personal equipment for each man is an axe, knife, compass and match-box. A magnifying glass is carried for examining ore samples.

The Indispensable Canoe.

Thus equipped, the partners set out. Perhaps they have a long train journey before they reach the "jumping-off place." Eventually their canoe is loaded and put into the water. The canoe is to the prospector what the horse is to the Arab. The North Country is a maze of lakes and streams and one can travel anywhere with a canoe—not forgetting the portages. Sometimes a portage is a mere trail of about fifty feet around a waterfall or a short stretch of rapids. Sometimes it is a dismal, wearying hike of several miles through muskeg or heavily timbered country. In fly-time, during June and July, with the hot sun glaring or a dreary rain falling, a long, hard portage will test the endurance and the vocabulary of the toughest old-timer. If you have ever carried an 18-foot canoe up a treacherous, rocky slope in the rain you have had a slight taste of the sort of thing the prospector must accept as being all in the day's work.

If it is simply a "blind" trip into new country, the prospectors keep their eyes opened for favorable rock occurrences. The rocky shorelines of lakes and rivers often reveal formations that repay close investigation. This is not a technical exposition and geological terms are often confusing to the layman but it is enough to say that the prospector looks for places where the older rocks have been intruded by younger rocks. He looks for a "contact" of granite or porphyry with greenstones of sediments. Along the shores then, on the trails across country, and in camp, he is continually examing the rock formations. The partners may make camp for several days in a promising area and go on again if, after closer investigation, they decide it will not repay further effort.

At Home in the Bush.

Eventually they make a more or less permanent camp. A good prospector is usually a good bushman. He can perform miracles with an axe. Once he has chosen his campsite, close to the water and preferably on a point where there will be a breeze to keep the flies away, with plenty of wood close at hand but at a respectful distance, if possible, from heavy timber that might be blown down upon the camp by a storm, it is not long before he has chopped and trimmed tent-poles and pegs, and erected his tent. His partner, in the meantime, has built a fireplace of rocks, has lighted a fire and is busy chopping up firewood while the water is boiling, the handle of the pail looped over a green bough extending over the blaze. Balsam boughs are spread over the floor of the tent, blankets are unpacked from the pack sheets. Prospectors usually make camp with a view to having a couple of hours of daylight if possible.

They examine the rocks and here is where experience counts. The rocks tell a story to the trained prospector where the layman would see nothing. Contacts are sought, moss and overburden

TWO THOUSAND FEET BELOW IN MACASSA MINE

GOLD LIKE PEANUT BUTTER

Many Processes Before Ore is Finally Converted Into Bullion at the Surface.

Long passages carved out of solid rock—an elevator—they call it a "cage"—that wastes no time from surface to lower levels—men dressed in rubber overalls and smocks—rock blasted in piles in passages called "drifts"—the pressure of air on your ears as you descend—one ladder after another as you climb down "manways" from drift to drift.

That's a visitor's impression of a mine. Of the Macassa, Kirkland Lake's newest producer, to be exact.

If you are from "down below," as they call Old Ontario up in the North Country, it's probable that you haven't the vaguest idea of what a mine is like. Perhaps you think the gold is there in sheets to be peeled off. It isn't.

Down 2,000 Feet in Macassa.

The Macassa has been milling ore only since last October. You enter the cage. The door clangs. The cables move slowly and the cage begins its downward progress, gathering speed swiftly until at last it is plunging down the shaft with a clamorous roar. The descent slackens, the cage comes gently to a stop. You step out into the shaft station at the 2000-foot level, under gleaming electric lights and walk down the "cross-out," a tunnel leading into the rock. "Drifts" are similar tunnels leading out of the cross-out.

Along drifts, then down ladders in the eerie gloom of tunnels sloping deeper into the rock, down these "manways" until you are 2,475 feet below. There is gold, or has been gold, along all the drifts traversed, for they have been blasted out—"drifted" is the term, with the vein.

Like Peanut Butter.

But the gold isn't the yellow, shining stuff of the jewelry stores. A smudged brown, like peanut butter, describes it better. And you swing your miner's acetylene lamp close to the drift's roof to spot it by the glitter that answers the flame.

You come to drifts that are being readied for "shooting" some time in the week. And there you see the reason for the half-circle effect that features the proof of every drift. The "shots" of dynamite are put in half circles at intervals plotted to blast out that exact semi-circle. Mining out a drift is a succession of setting off these shots in the semi-circular formation.

Down to the Ore Cars.

When the rock is blasted down, the "mucker" comes in. He clears out that rock, always working from the top, piling the rock into chutes leading to a lower level, which is kept clear and where it is released from the chute into waiting cars hauled by electric locomotive. But it isn't sent to the surface right away. The ore is dumped down an "ore pass" that leads to a crusher, where the rock is broken up before loaded into the "skip," or ore elevator, for its journey above ground.

Hazards of Underground Work.

There are hazards to mining. Sometimes shots of dynamite fail to explode. The machinemen mark these places carefully. If they become a little careless, as men working with explosives sometimes do, they might shove the pneumatic drill too close to the unexploded charge—and there'd be more than rock in the drift.

"Loose" is another hazard. When a drift is not mined for a time the terrific pressure from above and the sides make it "slough off," makes the sides spread out and that, of course, leaves rock or ore on the walls above where the miner works, ready to fall.

At the Macassa 120 men are working clearing out Mother Earth's hoard. Since last October the mine has refined $800,000 worth of gold. The neophyte, making his first tour of the workings wonders how they know just where to shove these drifts. In the case of the Macassa they sunk their shaft and the Kirkland Lake Gold Mines, to the east of the Macassa, "drove" the bottom level on contract. Then it was a case of Macassa extending tunnel from their shaft to meet what Kirkland Lake Gold had done.

SUBWAY STATIONS AND EXPRESS ELEVATORS IN BIG MODERN MINE

Underground Workings of Frood Are Marvels of Engineering Skill—Efficiency and Safety Are Keynote of Operations in World's Richest Nickel Property.

An intriguing description of the Frood Mine, greatest nickel-copper mine in the world, is contained in a little booklet, "The Story of Nickel," published by the International Nickel Company of Canada. The Frood, located just outside the City of Sudbury, was discovered by Thomas Frood, a wood ranger in the employ of the Crown Lands Department, a settlement awarding him the location after a dispute with a fellow-prospector who also claimed the discovery in 1885.

The Frood, says the booklet, symbolizes the latent power of this great Canadian mining enterprise. One's first impression is that there must be, indeed, great riches below to justify so large a plant above ground. The buildings are obviously not built to-day for use to-morrow and scrapping the day after. Through and around them runs the company's standard gauge railroad with its own ore cars and electric locomotives. Above them towers the main shaft house, 165 feet high, and we are told that at the 2800-foot level of the mine this shaft is 2200 feet away from the ore body. One reason is that the vein tilts at an angle of 65 degrees to the northwest as it plunges into the earth from the surface out-croppings. The other reason is that, as the mine will be worked for generations to come, the management can afford to place the above-ground development where it can have the maximum convenience and efficiency.

Half-a-Mile Underground.

Our objective is the 2,800-foot level—more than half a mile below. If this is to be our first experience so far underground, a preliminary visit to the hoist house is reassuring. The interior has all the impressive simplicity of a power plant, but in place of dynamos gigantic drums gather in and pay out steel cables which slant upward through the lofty ceiling to the shaft head a hundred yards away, where they bend over wheels and plunge vertically into the main shaft. At the end of each steel cable dangles a cage of about the dimensions of the elevators used in city garages. Back in the hoist house the operator, a mere Lilliputian, sits on a raised platform before a pair of drums. A bell strikes its message; he pulls a lever. The drums turn—swiftly, perhaps, but they by no means whirl. Yet the cages at the ends of the cables race up and down the shaft at the rate of 2,000 feet a minute.

We get into a cage. To a depth greater than the height of the Empire State Building we drop through blackness; then, with the 1,800-foot level, the lights at the openings of the various working levels flash by at intervals of 200 feet. As we come to a stop as 2,800 feet the feeling has become an obsession that we really ought to be suffocated and completely crushed by the myriad tons of rock and earth above us. But the cage door swings up and we walk out into a place that is quite reminiscent of a London underground station. To be sure, there are no tiles, but the walls are painted white and there is more than ample headroom. As far as the eye can see tracks run off through a capacious tunnel frequently lit by overhead lights. On a near-by siding stands an electric locomotive and its string of six-ton ore cars.

Tremendous Ore-body.

We start our walk along the tracks to the ore-body 2,200 feet away. The roadbed is smooth and dry. As we reach the vein the main transverse tunnel goes off at right angles through the ore. Naturally, the ore removed in making this north and south drift has been used; otherwise, for a thousand feet or more along the drift the ore has not been touched. Mining is restricted to operations at the north and south ends, and another generation will be old enough to visit Frood before this 2,800-foot level has been completely stripped of its ore.

Tracks lead off through a side drift which is narrower and dark but still has ample headroom. We follow along until a ladder rises up perpendicularly at the side. We climb to a platform, turn, climb a similar ladder to another platform, turn, and climb again to emerge forty feet above the main floor of the 2,800-foot level. Here we are in a "stope" where the ore is actually being mined. A stout plank floor has been laid and massive timbers—a million feet of lumber are consumed in Frood every month—support the ceiling which, with its seven-foot headroom, seems to lunge down at us between the supporting timbers. The helmets with which we have been equipped as protection against falling rock becomes the personification of an empty gesture.

Nickel is King.

This is the front where the miners drill and blast and start the ore on its way to be refined into the various metals which it contains so abundantly and for which the world has developed so many different uses. Working full time with its modernized processes and equipment on current grade of ore, the company can produce 180,000,000 pounds of pure nickel a year. In so doing it has an indicated by-production of 240,000,000 pounds of copper, 40,000 ounces of gold, 1,500,000 ounces of silver, and 300,000 ounces of the platinum metals. These production figures give this Canadian enterprise a practical world monopoly in nickel, a place second only to Russia in the platinum metals—platinum, palladium, rhodium, ruthenium, and iridium—and an important position in copper. But it is to be remembered in following the ore from mine to markets, that nickel is king; copper and even the precious platinum metals are among the "impurities" which must be eliminated.

The first step in elimination is done in the "stopes" where the miners sort out the rock which is broken down along with the ore. This rock has an immediate use as a filler which is packed in behind as the cut into the ore-body advances. Were this not done the handing wall of heavy but structurally weak rock would settle down on the miners. Indeed this matter of support is so vital that rock for filling is brought by the trainload from the satellite mines to keep Frood strong.

From Floor to Surface.

From the stope floor the ore is dropped down chutes to bins above the tracks on the 2800-foot level. Here it is dumped into the ore cars which storage-battery locomotives collect from the side drifts and make up into heavy trains which the stronger trolley locomotives haul to the main dump on the level. There a car unloader spills the ore out into a crusher in the pit directly below the tracks.

The crusher breaks up the larger lumps and feeds to an ore pocket connecting with the ore skips. These skips are ten-ton affairs which whisk the ore to the surface at 3000 feet a minute.

We follow at the more leisurely pace of 2000 feet a minute—the express elevators in modern office buildings make only 1200 feet a minute—and find upon reaching the rock house in the shaft head that the ore is being fed into a belt conveyor for inspection and rock elimination. It is then dumped into another crusher, further broken up and loaded into heavy ore cars for shipment to the smelter.

Stack is 510 Feet High.

From Frood we turn toward a chimney in which even the roundest and jolliest Santa Claus conceivable to childhood would get lost. It is the main stack of the Copper Cliff smelter a few miles away, a hollow mast of brick 510 feet high and 45 feet in diameter at the top. This gargantuan wind indicator has been picked up on clear days by aviators more than 80 miles away.

At the base of this stack cluster thirty acres of buildings composing the mill, smelter, and Orford separation plant. Even the smelter, which is as high as a sixteen-story office building, seems dwarfed until in due course, we climb to its top. But we start at the mill where the ore comes in from the mines on elevated tracks and is dumped into bins above more crushers. At this point the mill rolls up its sleeves and proceeds to turn the chunks and lumps of ore into something as fine as coral sand. Coarse crushers feed into finer ones, and they in turn into the rod mills. Then a battery of selective flotation tanks make a rough but effective separation of the copper and the nickel sulphides. From then on there are two products.

The Eternal Triangle in Temagami

The tripod of the diamond-drilling outfit is a familiar sight in newly-opened mining fields. This diamond-drilling crew is at work on the Cuniptau property in Temagami and results of the drilling campaign justified development of a mine.

LUMBER TRADE STRUGGLES BACK

Wood Products Industries Have Had Bitter Fights for Existence.

INCREASED CUT

New Ontario is really Old Ontario to the lumber trade. The shantymen have been penetrating its fastnesses for many years.

They were there in the waning days of the fur trade. They were there before the first settlers on the land and before the miners. An axeman for a lumber company operating on the western shore of Lake Temiskaming brought back samples of silver from South Lorrain long before Cobalt was discovered.

They have to go farther and farther afield for big timber and good white pine nowadays. But the lumberjack still remains a picturesque figure on the Northern Ontario scene. He is a fixture. The Northland, with its myriad lakes and rivers, its limitless timber resources, will always have a place for him.

The lumber business is picking up this year. It picked up a little last year. For a while it was dead on its feet.

Hard-Hit By Depression.

No industry in the Northland was hit harder by the depression than lumbering and the pulp and paper business. The latter was caught in the financial maelstrom that sucked many top-heavy mergers to disaster and ruin. The lumber business facing tariff walls, tight money and a cessation of construction activities was left with huge supplies on its hands.

In four years the output of Ontario sawmills dropped to one-sixth of the 1929 production value.

In four years the production value of Ontario pulp and paper mills dropped to less than half the 1929 figures.

It was, to many Northern Ontario towns and villages, a major disaster akin to an earthquake, a flood, a fire or a famine.

There are ghost towns on the north shore of Georgian Bay today, towns once busy and populous, where the blank windows of empty houses stare out over deserted streets, mill towns, abandoned when the mills closed down.

"Distressing Conditions"

Here is the situation in the matter-of-fact language of a Lands and Forests Department report:

"The general decline in building trades, the tightening up of the money markets, the American tariff on finished lumber, are important factors in the distressing conditions of the lumber industry. The uncertainty of the last few years prompted most of the large operators and many of the smaller ones to discontinue, in whole or in part, their bush operations and to rely upon their yard entries for future calls. The retailers in turn, disturbed by the indifferent markets and doubtful fluctuations, hesitated to rehabilitate their stocks, placing upon the wholesaler or original producer the responsibility of filling small sized and detailed graded orders. In most cases the annual overhead charges covering insurance, interest calls and other necessary demands, have inevitably been assumed by the operator, which in normal times would be covered by a spread amongst dealers and tradesmen in lumber products.

Faced Double Handicap.

Where companies of long and well established connections have been compelled, only after determined efforts, to close their concerns, they are faced with a serious double handicap of disintegrating their skeleton working

TEMAGAMI RUSH MAY RESULT IN NEW PRODUCERS

Area Prospected Before Discovery of Cobalt Again in Picture.

PROMISING FINDS

Cuniptau, With Platinum and Nickel Ore Reserves, Plans Program.

The scene of rapid and intensive development since the first of the year, the Temagami area just south of Cobalt is one of the new fields on the Ontario mining horizon. And, like several "new" fields, it is actually an old area undergoing a revival, although present operations in the district are being carried out on a scale that gives promise of a permanent camp. Cuniptau Mine, with an estimated 360,000 tons of $13 platinum-nickel ore to a depth of 200 feet, is the leading operation in the field and bids fair to be the first active producer when present plans for construction of a mill are carried out. Manitoba and Eastern, sinking a shaft on its property south of the Cuniptau holdings, is a promising gold prospect and a score of other developments are in progress throughout the Cedar-Net Lake area after a winter staking rush that sewed up every acre of ground over an extensive territory.

Fire Rangers' permit figure indicate that more than 300 men are working in the Temagami field this summer. The two major operations employ 85 men in all and the activity in the district has been of considerable effect in reducing unemployment in the Cobalt region, most of the men having been picked for their experience in mining. Besides the payroll of the camp, the aggregate of money spent on supplies and equipment in Temagami, Cobalt and Haileybury has meant a great deal of extra business.

Prospected Years Ago.

Although Temagami appears to be just now coming into the limelight it is actually one of the oldest prospected districts in Northern Ontario. The late Peter Ferguson, who had prospected for gold in California, staked the first claims in Temagami as far back as 1885, when the district was unsurveyed. His son, Peter Ferguson, Jr., is at present working a group of claims just a few miles from the old original block. Mattawa and Renfrew people were interested in the gold prospects of the Temagami field in the late eighties and nineties, notably the late Dan O'Connor, then known as "The King of Temagami." The discovery of Cobalt swung interest away from the Temagami country northward, although in the old Cobalt days the Sterling Mine conducted operations on the site of what is now the Manitoba and Eastern property. During the war years there was some mining of arsenical ores in the district but for the most part Temagami prospects have been neglected until recently, overshadowed by the magnitude of developments in the areas farther north. The original Cuniptau claims, as a matter of fact, were staked by Harry Watkins of Haileybury in 1910, while the International Nickel Company still holds a block of claims staked many years ago, adjoining the property now being developed by Long Lac Adair Mines.

Close to Highway and Railway.

Good transportation facilities and easy access to power when developments justify extension of near-by power lines are encouraging development factors. Cuniptau, to which a Government road is being built to link the property with the Ferguson Highway, is only three miles from Goward, on the T. and N. O. Railway, while the Manitoba and Eastern and other properties are even closer. Progress in the field has therefore been remarkably rapid, considering the fact that very little work was done prior to the first of the year.

Although the Cuniptau, where the shaft is already down to 200 feet, is a platium-nickel property, other developments in the field are gold prospects. Long Lac Adair Mines, south of the Manitoba and Eastern, Temagami Gold Syndicate, on the east side of the railway, Temagami Gold Mines, Central Temagami Gold Syndicate and numerous other outfits have been conducting stripping and trenching operations all summer and several diamond-drilling programs are planned. Properties on which work is being done are in Strathy, Cassells and Chambers Townships.

LAKE SHORE in paying $1 per share in dividend and bonus Sept. 15 reflects the plan of Harry Oakes, president, to distribute profits to shareholders accordingly as they are earned. Total payments of $3.50 per share, or $7,000,000, is indicated for the current year, while officials believe the outlook for 1935 is still better.

MINE DEVELOPMENT HELPS

Port Arthur and Fort William, the Twin Cities at the head of the Great Lakes, are two Northern Ontario communities that came through the past four years with perhaps as little distress as any other cities in Canada. At the present time, with the remarkable expansion of mining developments in Northern Ontario and improvement in the woods products industries, the Twin Cities are forging rapidly back to conditions of normal prosperity. With the Long Lac, Red Lake, Patricia and Lake of the Woods districts all taking part in the phenomenal mining progress of the past year, the Twin Cities are enjoying a substantial share of the new business.

Pulpwood and Paper.

The operations of the NRA, and other factors of recovery in the United States were felt immediately in the district, where large woods contractors conduct their operations; and the employment of men in the pulp woods since the middle of last summer, and in increasing numbers during the past winter has helped very materially in providing employment. The largest pulp and paper plant is now operating to capacity; and a newsprint mill is employing 175 men, with the possibility of doubling its production as the situation for marketing its product continues to improve with general conditions. About 3,400 men were employed in the woods tributary to the head of the lakes this winter, and 285,000 cords of pulpwood and 200,000 railway ties and other types of timber were cut.

Grain Handling.

In grain elevator storage, Port Arthur embraces the larger half of the 91,000,000 millions of bushels at the Canadian Lakehead; and the prospect for handling a large amount of grain this season is developing, with 54,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat already sold, and other developments taking place on the export market.

Package freight business was fairly good last year, and this activity is expected to be improved this season, as the stocks in the Canadian West have been undergoing depletion for the past four seasons. Hundreds of men receive benefit from handling of such freight. Railway activity generally is also improving, with the betterment of business conditions throughout the Dominion.

Hydro-Electric Power.

Domestic and industrial light and power have been employed at cheap rates in the Twin Cities for many years. The greatest development has been made upon the Nipigon River east of the Lakehead; and this supply (130,000 h. p.) is now located about halfway between Port Arthur and the promising gold mining developments between Nipigon and Long Lac. Already one mine is operating with energy from this system, another has entered into a contract for the supply for a 200-ton mill, and others are coming along in a most promising way and will require further hydro-electric energy.

Mining Developments.

For twenty years in its earlier history, the district practically lived upon its silver mines; and again a strong company is taking over several of these properties and will undertake renewed development. It is in gold mining, however, that the substantial promise of the near future lies. West of Port William one hundred miles, a gold mine has been operating for over a year, with a payroll of one hundred and thirty men and another is coming into production, while promising prospects are numerous. East of Port Arthur, in the Little Long Lac area, the Northern Empire is operating, Little Long Lac is in production, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Dik-Dik, Bankfield Hardrock, Longacre, and many other properties are being developed and tested. Port Arthur hardware, clothing, grocery, boots and shoes, hotels and other businesses are already feeling the improvement contingent upon the opening of these mining fields.

Tourist Business.

As many as 37,500 American visitors have already come into the Lakehead cities in one season, over the International Highway at Pigeon River, and although this number was greatly decreased during 1932 and 1933 considerable improvement has taken place this season. Tourist business brings welcome summer activity to many stores, hotels, restaurants, garages, and numerous other businesses.

Agricultural.

In agriculture, although not much in evidence from the passenger trains that pass through the district, the areas around the Canadian Lakehead are making substantial strides. Ten per cent. additional land is cleared every year. Large quantities of butter are being developed. Eggs are almost sufficient for the demands of the market. Potatoes are being shipped out. There is still, however, a market for $2,000,000 more agricultural production for the supply of Lakehead needs.

In addition to present highways the Trans-Canada connection westward to the Prairie Provinces and the Pacific Coast, will be opened in the autumn of 1934. This highway is also being rapidly extended eastward. Magnificent passenger boats upon which rates for transport of autos have recently been reduced, will meanwhile make the trip across Canada of great interest and variety of experience.

It is gratifying to note that the Government Employment Service in Port Arthur has recorded placements of 8,423 persons in the year ended Oct. 31, as against 4 735 in the same period last year. This means that general conditions are decidedly better.

CENTRAL PATRICIA will take in added mill equipment during the coming winter with a view toward increasing mill capacity from 50 to 100 tons per day by the coming spring.

are removed from the rocks in the search for mineralized veins. Oxidized rock is given particular attention. Quartz veins, particularly if they are of substantial width and can be traced for any considerable distance, demand examination. Occasionally "free" gold is discovered and this is cause for excitement. Ordinarily gold is found in association with pyrite.

Sampling and Staking.

Samples of promising rock are roasted in the camp fire overnight to drive off the sulphur. In the morning, if sufficiently roasted, they are broken up in the mortar to a powder and panned. This consists of putting the crushed rock into a small pan which is held under water and shaken until only the heaviest material remains on the bottom of the pan. If the sample has a good gold content the specks of gold are left at the bottom of the pan in association with other heavy material.

Should panning of gold samples from a quartz vein reveal good gold showings the prospectors will stake their ground. Each man has a miner's license which has cost him $5, and his license entitles him to stake three claims for himself and six claims by proxy on behalf of other license holders. Two men are therefore entitled to stake as many as eighteen claims but unless they have a remarkably promising showing they seldom stake to the limit. There may be better ground farther on. In unsurveyed territory a claim consists of 40 acres. A post, No. 1 post, is erected at the northeast corner, a line is blazed to No. 2 post at the southeast corner a distance of 20 chains being paced or measured off. Other posts are erected at the other corners.

The mining license entitles the prospector to two coupons per claim, each coupon good for a free assay at the Provincial Assay Office in Toronto. These assays are made from grab samples, i.e., samples of rock picked at random, or channel samples. The latter are samples from channels cut across the entire width of the vein and give a good indication of average values in the mineralized zone.

Recording the Claims.

The claims are recorded at the nearest recording office of the mining division in which they are located. They must be registered within 15 days from the date of staking. An extra day is allowed for every 10 miles distance of the claim location from the recording office. After that the law requires that assessment work be done on the property. Thirty days' work must be done on each claim within three months after recording, except in the winter season. Staking of nine claims would require 270 days' work of eight hours a day in the first year. A crew of half a dozen men could therefore do the necessary assessment work in 45 days. The work would consist of trenching—uncovering the moss and overburden from mineralized veins and tracing them across country—and test-pitting. With pick, shovel, drill and dynamite, pits are sunk at intervals in the vein and assays taken of the rock beneath the surface. Before a patent is finally issued, 40 days' work must be done on each claim for each of the next four years, plus an extra ten days. The total of 200 days' work work per claim may be completed in less time however.

When the work is completed, a patent is issued by the Government on payment of $2.50 purchase money per acre in unsurveyed territory and $3.00 an acre in surveyed areas. Recording fees are $5 per claim when staked by the licensee and $10 per claim when staked by proxy.

Making a Mine.

When assays are favorable and preliminary assessment work reveals promising ground, diamond-drilling may be undertaken. A contract may be let to a firm specializing in this work and diamond drills are bored through the rock to considerable depth. The cores are taken from the hollow drills and the resulting assays give a comprehensive idea of the possibilities of the ore-body at depth. By this time, of course, the expense of the whole undertaking has probably gone beyond the financial abilities of the original syndicate and they have formed a company and sold units of shares to raise money with which to carry on development work, or the property has interested an outside company which has taken an option on the claims and thrown its own men and equipment into the development program.

From the day the prospector leaves town in the spring to that day, perhaps years later, when an actual producing mine stands as a monument to his efforts and perhaps bearing his name, he has known many discouragements. The early histories of many of the big producers of the present day are checkered with disappointments. Claims have been allowed to lapse and have later been staked by other prospectors and have made good. Options have been dropped on properties that have become mines under new interests. Financing efforts have failed and companies have been wrecked. A few—a very few—have had comparatively clear sailing, when promising surface indications have been vindicated by sensational discoveries at depth. And, on the other hand, there are many abandoned head-frames in the North Country standing guard over deserted shafts into which thousands of dollars have been flung without return.

HAZARD OF BUSH FIRES REDUCED IN LATE YEARS

Organization of Forestry Branch Covers Wide Area in North.

AIR FLEET IMPORTANT

Campers and Lightning to Blame for Majority of Outbreaks.

Although bush fires, which have claimed many lives and taken a tremendous toll of the timber wealth of the province in past years, are still a summer menace in the North Country, especially when dry weather continues for any length of time, the danger of a devastating blaze such as the Porcupine Matheson or Haileybury fires is not now nearly so great as it was ten years ago. Northern Ontario has learned costly lessons. The Forestry Branch works on the policy that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Northerners, especially those who have known the appalling fury of a big fire, have been educated to take every precaution when in the bush. Experienced campers and prospectors take good care to see that camp-fires are thoroughly extinguished before they leave. Settlers are careful about slash-fires, even when they are authorized by a fire ranger's permit. Signs at portages and camping spots throughout the bush impress the warning that a smouldering cigarette stub or a carelessly tended camp-fire may start a devastating blaze. But fires do start and often mysteriously in regions where no traveller has been seen.

The whole country is policed by fire rangers in the summer months. These men work out from central depots under the supervision of district chiefs. Local headquarters are well equipped with hose, pumps, shovels, axes, trucks—all the paraphernalia of fire-fighting in the bush country. Forestry towers are stationed at strategic points on mountains or in high country, where lookout men scan the field for miles around. An incipient blaze is spotted and the location is checked on a map, the information then being telephoned to the nearest district office. Airplanes working out from various Northern Ontario bases are constantly flying over the country and watching for the tell-tale smoke-clouds that indicate a blaze getting under way. Fire rangers and fire-fighting equipment can be carried into remote districts by the planes.

Air Bases and Fleet.

Fire-fighting by air has been developed to a high degree of efficiency and to the good work of the Provincial Air Service can be attributed much of the success in keeping the menace at a minimum. Planes work out from 15 bases, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury, Oba Lake, Remi Lake, Biscotasing, Twin Lakes, Sioux Lookout, Goose Island, Kenora, Fort Frances, Caribou Lake, Port Arthur, Orient Bay, Whitefish Lake and Ignace. There is also a base in Algonquin Park. Air Service shops are maintained at Sault Ste. Marie and the strength of the air fleet is 21 machines, consisting of five transport aircraft, one light transport aircraft, one photographic machine and fourteen light Moths for patrol work.

The light detection machines must supply swift and accurate detailed information as to the location and nature of forest fires while the freighting machines must have sufficient carrying capacity to land an effective fire-fighting crew or unit near the site of the fire in the first trip. Last year's report of the director of the service, however, stressed the fact that light patrol craft have been pressed into duty on transport work owing to a shortage of heavier machines and recommended replacement of light patrol planes with light transport machines.

Covers Big Territory.

The Forestry Branch maintains headquarters in 12 Ontario Districts covering a territory of 98,500,000 acres, the largest of which is the Oba District with headquarters at Kapuskasing. Each, according to its size is staffed by a District Forester, a Forest Assistant, Chief Ranger and Deputy Chief Rangers. There are also Fire Inspectors in some localities. District headquarters are maintained at Sioux Lookout, Kenora, Fort Frances, Port Arthur, Kapuskasing, Cochrane, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury, North Bay, Parry Sound, Pembroke and Tweed and there are 40 divisional headquarters. The Branch has cut down its personnel considerably in the past three years. In July of 1930 it had as many as 1,235 men employed. The highest number last year was 841, with a minimum of 94 at the first of the season in April. The ranging staff was reduced by twenty per cent.

Radio stations are operated at 29 points throughout the North Country, as well as three portable sets.

Causes of Bush Fires.

That lightning is responsible for a large number of fires is shown by the fact that of a total of 1919 fires last year no less than 465 were set down to this cause. Campers' fires were held responsible for 489 fires, indicating that a continuous campaign of education and propaganda is still needed to curb the fire menace from this source. Settlers, railways, logging operations, mining operations, road construction and prospectors are listed as responsible for others while the ubiquitous smoker was held to blame for no less than 258 blazes in the bush. Most of the fires, more than 90 per cent. in fact, covered less than 100 acres.

Incendiary fires have been reduced. The official report remarks that this was "possibly due in part to the deterrent effect of several prosecutions for this offense in the last year or two and in part to reduced wages paid to extra fire fighters."

The trick of starting a fire with the idea of getting a job fighting it is not new in the North.

A SLIGHT ERROR

From a reputable American mining journal, issue of October 9, 1886:

"The 'mountain of copper,' near Sudbury, in Ontario, certified by Sir George Stevens, loses its importance as we hear more about it. We understand it is a large body of pyrrhotite, carrying stringers of copper pyrites through it. We have seen some of the ore, selected specimens of which carry from 8 to 13 per cent. of copper. No silver or gold was found in it, though claims have been made that it contained these metals in large quantity. The copper is not abundant in the ore, and the magnetic iron pyrites are worthless for the production of acid, the 'mountain' is likely again to bring forth very insignificant offspring after its labor."

SYLVANITE has brought its mill addition into full play and is handling ore at a rate of over 10,000 tons per month.

REAL OLDTIME GOLD RUSH IN LONG LAC AREA

IMMENSE ACREAGE STAKED

Scores of Properties Are Now Under Development — Little Long Lac Mine is Leader.

Whether the Little Long Lac field in Northwestern Ontario is another Porcupine in the making remains to be seen. But it is a fact that developments in the new area during the past year have been of a character to justify optimism.

Certain enthusiasts have emerged from the Long Lac hinterland talking feverishly to themselves and muttering such phrases as "bigger than the Porcupine," "greater than Kirkland," and so on. These are large orders indeed but Northerners who remember the skepticism that greeted the first news from Kirkland Lake, Rouyn, Great Bear Lake and other mining fields, have become chary of sniffing at the future of any new field.

Certain it is that the Long Lac country, east of Port Arthur, has been the scene of a great staking rush in the past twelve months. Equally certain is it that a tremendous amount of development work is now under way and that at least one producer will soon be in operation, with every reason to believe that there will be several other mills and shaft-houses on the horizon before another year has gone by.

Thousands of dollars are being spent freely, several score companies and syndicates have been formed to work properties in the field, a townsite has been laid out at Geraldton and, in general, the Long Lac camp seems to be swinging rapidly along the normal course of other Canadian gold camps that have reached large-scale production.

Field Covers 150 Miles.

Operations extend eastward in the territory served by the Canadian National Railway from Nipigon to Long Lac in five areas known as Beardmore, Jellicoe, Dik Dik, Little Long Lac and Big Long Lac for a distance of over one hundred and fifty miles. Excellent transportation facilities by air, water and rail have helped speed up development of the new area that has progressed in less than three years from a dormant wilderness to a scene of roaring activity.

Consistency of the extent and value of the commercial veins discovered in the Long Lac country has been remarkable. It is this factor that prompts many experienced mining men to regard Long Lac as a great permanent camp in the making. The Little Long Lac Mine, soon to be in the production stage, is working a vein regarded by the "Northern Miner" as one of the richest ever found in Ontario and the extent of the ore-body has not yet been fully established. Diamond-drilling operations on many other properties in the field have shown the existence of mineralized ore zones of great promise and high ore values.

Little Long Lac Is Leader.

The Little Long Lac Gold Mine is the "king-pin" of the new camp. With a 200-ton mill going into operation, a shaft down 700 feet and proving that the vein increases in width and value at depth, with experienced mining men at the helm, with a power contract guaranteeing Hydro "juice" at the cheapest rate ever secured by an Ontario mine, with plenty of money in the treasury and the stock up over the seven dollar mark, Little Long Lac is in an enviable position.

One mine does not make a camp, just as one swallow doesn't make a summer, but one mine can go a long way toward making a camp as it gives the leadership that encourages intensive development of other properties.

Mine Discovered in 1932.

Tony Oakland and Tom Johnson, two prospectors who knew the country well, went on a prospecting trip down Little Long Lac in June, 1932. Oakland had explored some locations on the lake several years previously and while investigating one of these they found some fragments of quartz in the water close to the shore of the lake. The quartz contained free gold and when the two men followed up the quartz showings on the shore they promptly staked out the famous claim T. B. 10560, nucleus of the present mine. Fifteen claims in all were staked.

Alan Barton, a mining engineer in Port Arthur, saw some of the quartz samples from the Oakland-Johnson claims and was impressed to such an extent that he got in touch with his associate, Joseph Errington, well-known Canadian mining man who developed the Errington Mine near Sudbury. Mr. Errington came in and looked at the property. He lost no time in drawing up an agreement and making a deal with Oakland and Johnson, on behalf of the Sudbury Diamond Drilling Company, in which Mr. Errington is heavily interested.

Consequent diamond drilling operations revealed a vein of exciting possibilities. The ore shoot was 600 feet long and went to a depth of 400 feet and contained $30 ore for more than 500 feet. Today, with a shaft down to 700 feet, the ore runs as high as $50 to the ton, present price. There is sufficient indicated ore to supply the mill for five years and lower levels will be opened up when the power line is through.

Other Properties in Field.

South and eastward of the Long Lac Mine are the Long Lac Lagoon, Mosher and MacLeod-Cockshutt properties, the latter sinking a shaft to 700 feet. Hollinger Consolidated controls 80 per cent. of the Albert Johnson claims east of Little Long Lac. To the north and west are the Lafayette, Longacre Long Lac, Lake Maron, Jellicoe, Wells Long Lac, Oro Plata, Bankfield, Magnet Lake and Algoma properties.

Plator Long Lac, Hardrock, Lac Development, Garnet Long Lac, Kilforan, Dunlop Consolidated, Mat-a-Lac, Roche Long Lac, Gascon, Connell, Central Long Lac, Langmuir, Novak, and Central Swayze are other developments east of the lake.

Still farther east, on Big Long Lac, are the properties of Long Lac Adair, Trafalgar Long Lac, MacFarlane Long Lac, Rea & Smith, Big Long Lac and others.

To the extreme west are the Buffalo Beardmore and Newmont Northern Empire properties near Beardmore Station and the Dik Dik area lies to the north of Jellicoe Station. There are numerous other operations in the field.

Great Activity This Summer.

Long Lac, Hardrock Station, Geraldton, Bankfield Station, Nezah Station, Jellicoe, Jackpine and Beardmore are C.N.R. points that have seen great activity during the past summer, as jumping-off places and unloading points for freight and supplies. Port Arthur business houses have benefitted materially from the activity in the mining field.

Geraldton, where a townsite has been surveyed, bids fair to be a flourishing town in the near future, being in close proximity to the major development in the area. Prospectors from all over Ontario have thronged into the district since the breakup and it is estimated that more than 3,000 men are now actively employed by the dozens of companies and syndicates now rushing developments programs.

From Beardmore eastward to Big Long Lac a great modern gold rush is in full swing. And unless all signs fail a great new gold camp is rising swiftly in an area that was little more than a name two years ago.

TIMBER TRADE STRUGGLES BACK

organization or their permanent nuclei developed and brought up to a state of efficiency during a long course of operations and also of losing their business contacts, the continuation and permanency of which are so vital to stability of trade.

The reduced cutting operations and general stagnation in the lumber industry are obviously reflected in the revenue figures for the last five years, which are as follows:

1930	2,685,527.66
1931	3,041,127.42
1932	2,105,507.85
1933	1,309,586.23

These figures include returns from the sale of timber, comprising bonus and dues, ground rent, fire protection charges, transfer and mill license fees.

It will be seen that from these sources the revenue the past year is just thirty per cent. of what it was four years ago at the end of the fiscal year, 1929, about the time the financial debacle struck the world."

How Production Struck.

Back in 1929 the total production value of the sawmill and pulp and paper industries amounted to $110,363,075. Sawmills contributed more than thirty million dollars of this and pulp and paper industry close to eighty millions.

In 1930 the total value had dropped to $85,799,469. Sawmill production had dropped ten millions and pulp and paper by fifteen millions.

In 1931 there was an almost identical decrease and total production figures slumped to $61,073,643.

In 1932 sawmill production hit a low of $5,004,741. Pulp and paper production dropped to $40,082,740. Total production went down to $45,097,482.

Last year total production went even lower, down to $43,421,864. Pulp and paper production hit a low of $37,663,148.

But the sawmill production saw an increase. Slight, it is true, but an increase. It jumped $745,000 over the 1932 figure.

Doing a Comeback.

This year it will be higher. The sawmill industry is doing a comeback. There were men in the woods last winter who hadn't had a day's work in the shanties for three years. There were men on the drive to whom the drive had become a thing of the past.

As a matter of fact, the lumber companies had a hard time finding experienced men this spring. Good men who knew how to handle a pike-pole and peavey. Wages went up. A first-rate riverman could write his own ticket.

British Market Opens Up.

The Ottawa Conference has had a great deal to do with it. Better times in Canada have had a great deal to do with it. Prosperity in the mining industry helps lumbering because the mines use an enormous amount of timber. It is estimated that they'll use two and a half million dollars worth this year alone. Hardwood sales are increasing in England, for interior trimming. The British market for lumber is opening up. Less than 15 per cent. of Great Britain's timber needs are homegrown.

The pulpwood industry is improving and leading companies are again contracting for pulpwood. This is a boon to the Northern settler, who had hard sledding when this market went back on him, because many settlers depend on this source for their winter income. For those clearing land in new areas it is, in fact, almost their only source of income until they harvest their first crop.

The forest products industries are coming back. New life is seeping back into Northern towns and villages depending on the sawmills, into those once-prosperous pulp and paper mill towns where relief supplies were distributed in wholesale quantities in the black years.

Coal prices in London are soaring.

HEAVY EATERS

Life at the Sudbury "camp" was simple, during the early days, and the place was not contaminated by the usual vices. A few miners, and perhaps some others, occasionally got "lagered up" but no damage was done.

To a youngster the most important place seemed to be James McCormick's Boarding House of happy memory. One wag was heard to say that every guest who ate there had an appetite "like a rat-tail file." "Jim McCormick's boarders could eat the horns off an ox," said another. Well if there was any sickness in the camp no one had discovered it.

NICKEL INDUSTRY BUILT UP PEACE-TIME MARKET

Faced Critical Situation After the War But Is Now in Strong Position—Many New Uses for Product Developed—Only Small Fraction of Dominion Output Remains in Canada.

The progress of the nickel industry in the past dozen years reads like a romance. And it is a romance, the story of an industry that deliberately set out to make itself more useful to the world and find new markets to replace a great market it had lost.

During the war, munition and armament manufacturers took nearly 90 per cent of the world's nickel production. They now take less than 5 per cent of a normally large production. Industry takes the rest. By research experimentation and merchandising, nickel found and developed its own markets in peacetime and is now in a stronger position than ever before. More nickel is now used by world industry than at the peak of wartime consumption. Only a small fraction of the total production remains in Canada. The market is world-wide.

"Were nickel a product largely absorbed within the Dominion," says Robert C. Stanley, President of the International Nickel Company of Canada, "the industry would still be an important factor in the Canadian picture. But it derives real significance from its export position. As such it does not merely stimulate the circulation of money within Canada; it definitely brings into the country every year new money to add to the wealth of Canadians and to increase the Dominion's buying power in world markets."

Won Peace-Time Market

Nickel did not inherit this new peace-time market free and clear of all strings, however. It had to win the business in its own right, and it had to develop that market into a world-wide demand before it could reach the stature of a world industry. Several important factors have made success hard won. The first is that industry, as a whole, is conservative in its attitude toward new materials and specification. Another is that nickel must meet on its own merits the competition of other alloying metals, such as chromium, vanadium, magnesium, maganese, aluminum and silicon.

During the first two or three years after the war the situation remained confused. The new production which have been created by the demand for ordnance and armament was in a mad scramble with the older producers for a market which no longer existed. Then, in 1922, Robert C. Stanley was promoted to the presidency of The International Nickel Company. He saw in the light of modern industry for better materials and improved performance a constructive opportunity for nickel, which was more diversified and lasting than its old market for the destructive uses of war. To this end he inaugurated a policy of active research an daggressive development. A laboratory was constructed at Bayonne, New Jersey, for experimenting with new alloys of nickel and for solving the difficulties experienced by industry with the alloys already developed. A staff was built up of metallurgists who had had practical experience in the key industrial and engineering fields. These men carried the gospel of nickel directly to the foundry bosses and shop foremen, and put the latest scientific knowledge about the metal on the shirt-sleeve basis of helping to work out production problems on the job. Bureaus of nickel information were established in the principal industrial centers of the world (the latest having just been organized in Tokio) to serve as clearing houses for the dissemination of scientific and technical information about nickel.

The Humble Kitchen Sink

When we star to follow the metal into industry we find that it has gone in surprising directions and to unexpected distances. Take so homely a subject as the kitchen sink. While civilization has been marching on to electric washing machines, mechanical refrigeration and gas and electric ranges, the sink has remained the Cinderella of the kitchen. Since enamel sinks were developed in 1876, nothing has been done to improve this household necessity until "Monel Metal" sinks were brought on the market, embodying in their design improvements which only an age of alloys and machines could produce.

The growing vogue for white metals as decorative trim has spectacular examples in the Empire State Building in New York and the Whitehall Theatre and the Savoy Hotel in London, which are sheated with tons of stainless steels with their nickel content of eight per cent by weight. Similarly, the T. Eaton store in Toronto makes wide use of "Monel Metal," there being more than 250,000 pounds of this nickel-copper alloy in this one installation. Nickel-silver plumbing fixtures, silver-bronze grilles and other decorative trim in banks and hotel lobbies all carry their percentages of nickel. Indeed, even chromium plate has as its base a heavy plating of nickel.

Everyone Uses Nickel

It is safe to make the general statement that, although the average citizens may go through the years without ever consciously buying nickel, every person in every industrialized community the world over is attended by nickel day and night. The keys to our front door and to our automobiles contain nickel. The textiles which we wear and on which we sleep were bleached and dyed and frequently are laundered in equipment containing nickel. The heating elements in our toasters, percolators and electric ranges are of a special nickel alloy. Every message by cable or telephone depends on one or another nickel alloy, and every metal part of a screen grid tube (upon which modern radio reception depends) is either pure nickel or an alloy containing more than 50 per cent nickel. Automobiles, steam and electric locomotives, steamships and airplanes are now designed to make good use of nickel steels, nickel cast irons, nickel bronzes, and brasses, nickel silvers and special nickel-copper and copper-nickel alloys.

Packers, canners, bakers, dairymen, brewers, vinters and distillers use pure nickel, Monel metal, Inconel or some other nickel alloy to protect their products from contamination during processing, as do restaurants, hospitals and other dispensers in the serving of food. Sugar is refined, salt is prepared and coffee is ground in machinery which includes one or another nickel alloy. In making soap and in preparing vegetable oils for food uses, pure nickel is the catalytic agent.

The petroleum industry, from the drilling equipment through the pumping of the oil to the cracking of the gasoline, is an increasingly heavy user of nickel alloys. Tons of Monel Metal are going into the concrete foundations of Boulder Dam and into the great valve sets for the four control towers there, and other tons of the same alloy were used in building the Assuan Dam on the Nile. Nickel steels are going into the anchorages for the world's longest suspension bridge, and a special nickel iron alloy is being developed to make spring scales instruments of precision.

SOURCE OF INCOME.

Although Ontario collected profit taxes of $515,000 from the mines in 1932, according to The Northern Miner it will collect approximately $2,000,000 this year.

MINES USE TIMBER.

Ontario mines will use timber to the value of $2,500,000 this year, according to Hon. Charles McCrea, former Minister of Mines.

LAND SALES.

A total of 917 sales of land for agricultural purposes in Northern Ontario were made by the Lands Department last year and there were 602 free grants. Most of the sales were in the Clay Belt and 80 per cent. of the free lands grants in the province were in the North country.

THINKS CANADA WILL DOMINATE NORTH AMERICA

British Writer Scoffs at Suggestion Dominion to be Absorbed by States.

OPPOSITE IS LIKELY

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 13 (CP)—"Nothing leaps more certainly to the discerning eye, than the inevitability of Canada's destiny as Queen of the Americas," declared Col. Sir Thomas A. Polson, K.B.E. C.M.G., writing in a recent issue of the Saturday Review.

Col. Polson, a former member of parliament, scoffed at suggestions that sometime in future Canada would be absorbed by the United States. He declared the contrary was much more likely.

"Those who make this suggestion of a North American union dominated by the U.S.A., "he wrote, "fail to perceive the comparatively small importance of the economic aspect compared with those facts of national sense, stability, maturity and unexplored material possibilities, in every one of which the advantage is so decidedly with Canada that anyone capable of looking 50 years ahead must see her as the dominating country of the Americas."

Economic Union Only

The union of the United States is predominantly economic, said Col. Polson. He illustrated the delay in the U.S. entry into the war as a sample of the difficulties confronting anyone who wishes to make the United States as an entity, and cites the difference between the two vast partners in North America:

"When the United States had at last declared war, President Wilson thus addressed his Atlantic fleet: 'None of you have had any experience of modern warfare; therefore the least of you knows as much as the highest. And I would like suggestions from any officer of the Navy, no matter how humble his rank, regarding the conduct of our war at sea.' Three years before, in the early August of 1914 Canada had cabled to England, simply and efficiently, that she was with her 'to the last dollar and the last man'."

The Imperial dominions have inherited national sense and the links of Empire have nurtured it, while the new lands have at the same time bestowed on them a new, strong freedom, he wrote.

Not Canada's Fate

"It is not the fate of Canada, with her slower, deeper growth to go up like the rocket and come down like the stick.' She has no negro problem, nor has one of her cities become a bye-word throughout the world. Toronto and Montreal cannot claim the fame (?) of Chicago or the political scandals of New York. Instead of these, Canada possesses in her eastern provinces a sturdy, rooted population of men to whom the ancient virtues of civitas' are not unknown. Her history has not been, like that of her neighbor, simply a long series of 'booms' and 'depressions', with their resultant social instability, and her vast natural wealth has even yet been but partially explored.

"The ultimate fate of the United States has yet to be outlined, but that which is looser and less stable cannot absorb that which is rooted and has permanency and lacks not one whit of the former's material power. Were a reverse of such a situation suggested, it would be less surprising; and England's daughters may well inherit the Mother Country's capacity for surprise, last-minute, but enduring triumphs."

Then other levels were put in and from those drifts "raises"—just another name for another kind of tunnel—were made either up or down to open up new ore-bodies. Always the ore is worked into chutes and taken out on the little railway.

The Muscular Muckers.

You come upon a group of "muckers" working in a section of the drift that has just been blasted out. Muscular fellows, these. A steady dip—fill, shovels—raise as they go about the job. They can shovel a lot of ore in a night at that gait.

You ask who directs all this work. The engineer is the moving force in the first place. His orders go on to the mine captain, who sets the tasks for the different workers.

At all times the engineer knows what's what, for reports are made every day and a map is turned in to show how much this or that ore paid.

To the initiate that map, with its ore values clearly set out, means a lot. If the production of the mill should be stepped up, ore from a rich section can be taken out. If production is a little ahead of schedule some low-grade ore can be shot up to regulate it.

Must Keep Reserves Ready.

The mill is the important thing. Reserves must always be kept in such a state that there is ore to keep the mill running. With the Macassa that means they've got to have 200 tons of ore ready every day, for that's the capacity of the new mill.

From Mill to Refinery.

At the mill you see how gold can come out of those chunks of rock you saw underground. Huge grinders take the rock that has already had preliminary crushing underground, and mince it up fine. Rotating steel balls in a steel cylinder grind the ore in the ball mill process.

There are various recovery treatments but the cyanide treatment is used at the Macassa mill. It is the general practice in Kirkland Lake and Porcupine. Various mills have variations in the general process, based upon their particular recovery problems.

The cyanide treatment simply means that the gold is dissolved in a cyanide solution during the grinding process, then "agitated" and thickened. It is then filtered. The solution goes to the gold precipitation unit where zinc dust precipitates the gold from the solution. Then it goes to the refinery where the final purification by fire takes place. Finally a gold brick is poured.

The pouring takes place only as often as there is enough ore for a brick, which isn't every day, but the rest of the mine work goes on seven days a week, three shifts a day, with only two shut-downs a year—Dominion Day and New Year's Day.

WORLD TURNS TO SUDBURY FOR NICKEL

Great Improvement Reported by Companies During Past Year.

WEALTH OF FROOD

Two Big Producers Control Tremendous Annual Nickel Output.

Although the fact that the Sudbury district produces more than 90 per cent. of the world's supply of nickel is by now an old story to Canadians, it is difficult for the average person in Ontario to realize the actual extent of operations in the Nickel Belt. It may not be quite so generally known that the Frood Mine is perhaps the richest single ore deposit on earth and that the International Nickel Company conducts the largest mining and metallurgical operations in Canada. Gold mining commands public interest to such an extent that the gargantuan developments in the Sudbury Basin are apt to miss the share of attention they deserve.

Both the International Nickel Company and the Falconbridge Nickel Co., the two big producers in the Sudbury field, are prospering and expanding as the world emerges from the depression period and as demand for their platinum and nickel is on the increase. Falconbridge in 1933 doubled its 1932 production and is now working at capacity, handling 750 tons of ore a day. International Nickel milled almost a million tons of ore last year from Frood and Creighton Mine and in the first quarter of 1934 had an operating income of $7,463,766, almost seven times better than its operating income for the first quarter of 1933.

The refinery of the Falconbridge Company is in Norway and has been enlarged to an annual capacity of 12,000,000 lbs. of nickel. The International Nickel Company has mines at Creighton Mine and Frood Mine, a smelter at Copper Cliff, a smelter at Conisson, a refinery at Port Colborne, Ont., refineries at Acton, England, and Clydach Wales, rolling mills at Birmingham, England, and Huntington, West Virginia, and a research laboratory at Bayonne, New Jersey. It is one of the world's greatest industrial organizations. In Canada alone it spent $12,000,000 in wages, freight, supplies and equipment last year. It employs 5000 men in its Canadian operations.

Nickel Consumption Greater.

Sales figures obtained from the International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, show that the Canadian consumption of nickel, as distinct from Monel Metal, is 300 per cent. greater during the first six months of this year than during the same period last year. This percentage of increase is considerably greater than the total world industry is utilizing nickel to an enlarged extent in alloy steels and alloy irons.

Previous to the depression Canadian steel mills and iron foundries were rapidly becoming familiar with the greater strength and wear resistance of steels and irons containing small percentages of nickel. But during the depression years, purchasers were insistent upon low prices, and the slight additional cost of the nickel frequently proved a barrier to its use.

More General Uses.

During the past two years, however, most purchasers of iron and steel have been educated to the fact that the desirable properties imparted to the iron and steel by the addition of nickel are worth much more than their slight additional cost. As a result, purchasers of machinery, equipment and parts are in many cases specifying the use of nickel in the materials they purchase.

The remarkable increase in the Canadian consumption of nickel can no doubt be attributed to some small extent to a revival in industrial activity. But it is apparent that such a sizeable increase can only be accounted for by its more general use in nickel alloy irons and steels in practically all branches of industry.

Falconbridge Operations.

The Falconbridge operations are of comparatively recent origin and the mine was purchased in 1928 by the Lindsley interests. It produced 6000 tons of nickel last year and has ore reserves estimated at approximately three million sons. The property is on a branch of the C.N.R. 14 miles from Sudbury.

the last obstacle in the way of development of the gold mines in this area. It is undertaking to improve transportation facilities on the Root river, so that the mines may take supplies in to their properties throughout the year instead of over winter roads. The mining companies have already paid half the cost of the improvement, which is estimated at $100,000

Extends Lines to Long Lac.

Hydro has also extended its lines from the Nipigon development, a distance of 70 miles, to the Northern Empire Mines in the Beardmore-Jellicoe area and is extending this line another 70 miles eastward into the Long Lac country.

It delivered power this summer to the new Matachewan area and will also serve the new mining developments in the Matheson district. It is also entering the Porcupine field. The Abitibi Canyon development, now owned by the Hydro Commission, has an ultimate capacity of a quarter of a million horse-power.

International Huge Company.

The International Nickel Company was originally an amalgamation of the Canadian Copper Company, of Copper Cliff, and the Orford Copper Company of Bayonne, N.J., using the Orford refining process. In 1929 it amalgamated with the Mond Nickel Company, which had for years refined its product by a process invented by Dr. Ludwig Mond one of the greatest industrial chemists of England, and father of the late Lord Melchett. This amalgamation was one of the most important events in the history of the nickel industry for it merged the world's two greatest nickel companies at a time when the industry had recovered from post-war depression and had devised hundreds of new uses for its products. A gigantic construction program covering development of the Frood Mine, construction of a concentration plant, new smelter and copper refinery at Copper Cliff, additions to the Coniston smelter and a new surface plant at the Levack Mine was immediately launched.

The Frood Mine, which once changed hands for $50,000, has estimated ore reserves of 220,000,000 sons of high-grade nickel-copper, wish platinum, gold and silver in addition. Since 1920 Canada has produced $20,000,000 worth of platinum, all of it from the Sudbury area, and the rate of production is increasing with the production of nickel although the price of platinum has dropped from a high of $120 an ounce in 1925 to $36 an ounce at present.

KIRKLAND GROWING.

The assessment of Kirkland Lake in 1923 was only $775,000. The growth of the townsite within the past few years is shown by the fact that this year the assessment of the township of Teck, in which the camp is located, is $4,440,302.

McKENZIE T— LAKE ran into some exceptionally rich ore late in August in the north drift at the 350 ft. level. For several rounds the gold content had averaged about three ounces of gold to the ton over a width of more than six feet.

T. & N. O. LINKED WITH PROGRESS OF THE NORTH

Railway Built to Serve Settlers Now Extends to James Bay.

OPENED AREAS OF WEALTH

New Homes for 70,000 People Since Construction of Line.

Inevitably, the traveller making his first trip into the north country exclaims, "Why, I had no idea it was like this!"

Certainly the north has a variety of wonders and well repays a visit. The beauty of Temagami, the sombre ruggedness of Cobalt, the prairie-like sweep of the Clay Belt, the stirring activity of Kirkland Lake, the bustle of Timmins, the great mines, the pulp and paper mills, the lumber camps, flourishing towns and growing villages—to the traveller from the settled south it is like stepping into a new world.

The history of the T. and N. O. Railway has been one of probably unequalled success in the opening up of new areas of wealth as it proceeded with its construction. If it had been entirely dependent on the settlement of the land for its support progress would have been slow and unremunerative. Before the objective of the Clay Belt was reached, the remarkable silver district of Cobalt was discovered, attracting prospectors from all parts of the world, and enlisting the wealth of Canada and the United States in its mines. This discovery was made in 1903 and from that time until 1931 silver was produced at an average rate of 1¼ tons for every working day, with a total value of two hundred and sixty million dollars ($260,000,000).

THE GREAT CLAY BELT

At the head of Lake Temiskaming at New Liskeard the railway enters the Clay Belt, and two hundred miles of the line traverse the fertile agricultural land. The total area contains about sixteen million acres, (16,000,000) and this is being rapidly settled in the vicinity of the road; mixed farming, dairying and livestock farming being the basis of the agricultural undertakings. Clover thrives particularly well on these lands for livestock, and northern grown seed is in great demand in the south.

At mileage 178 the height-of-land between the Ottawa river and the James Bay water-sheds is crossed, where two zones of mineral enrichment run east and west from Ontario into the province of Quebec; a total length of 550 miles—about equally divided between the two provinces—and these zones include the Porcupine and Kirkland Lake gold districts in Ontario, and the copper-gold Rouyn area in Quebec. In addition these districts contain many more prospective gold and copper prodqeers. The Nipissing Central Railway—a subsidiary of the T. and N. O., runs east from Swastika on the main line to Noranda—about sixty miles—serving this rapidly expanding rich mineral area.

Gold Mines Make History.

Active operation of Porcupine area gold mines was commenced in 1910, and has produced over three hundred and forty million dollars in gold ($340,000,000) to October of 1933. Kirkland Lake Mines came into production about 1917, and the camp is credited with a gross recovery of some one hundred and fifty-five million dollars ($155,000,000) to above date.

Gold Mines are making new history in the territory served by the T. and N. O. New fields of importance have been opened up and will in due course produce added wealth for the province. Since the inception of the road, the wealth produced by Northern Ontario mines to end of 1933, approximately the following:

Porcupine golds	$341,981,957.00
Kirkland Lake	154,898,563.00
Cobalt, etc., silver	250,271,857.00
Total	$756,152,377.00

and have paid in dividends during period to April, 1934, $266,660,482.00, or in excess of a quarter of a billion dollars of new wealth.

If we consider this mineral output alone, disregarding the vast assets in agriculture, timber, pulp and paper, we find that the outpouring of new mineral wealth from the mining camps along the T. and N. O. Railway into the trade channels of the province has repaid the people of Ontario many times for the capital expended on the railway. The total wealth produced by the natural resources along the T. and N. O. has been the greatest single factor in the prosperity of the province of Ontario in the last quarter of a century.

The railway is kept in a high state of efficiency, the equipment will compare favorably with the best on the continent and the Ontario Government has a self supporting asset of which it may justly be proud.

New Homes For 70,000.

The construction of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway not only resulted in the opening of the silver mines at Cobalt, the gold camps of Kirkland Lake and Porcupine and the Clay Belt, but it was instrumental in introducing seventy thousand people to new homes. The population of Temiskaming in 1902 could be numbered in the low hundreds. A few lumbermen, a scattering of settlers on the Ontario side of Lake Temiskaming, an odd Hudson Bay post, a wandering missionary or two and the native Indians comprised the inhabitants. The coming of the steel changed all of that. There is no question about the impetus the silver discoveries of Cobalt gave to the rapid settlement of the district. Pople literally swarmed up the line; many did not even wait for the steel to be laid, but anticipated its arrival by taking the steamboat route via Mattawa and were settled in the established communities before the railway had its stations up. This condition persisted during the period of construction to Cochrane. The prospectors crowded the trains to each new "end of steel" taking to the bush eagerly in the hope of making a rich discovery and opening a new camp. The presence of the mine hunters in large numbers, drew incidental population, created new business, caused the construction of new towns, some of them temporary in nature. But always the railway benefited.

Prospector Comes First.

In this connection it should be said that the T. and N. O. Railway has since its earliest days co-operated in every possible way with the prospectors and mining companies. Special consideration has been given to the nature of their operations; special rates have been established on the transportation of canoes and other baggage. Standing orders, well understood by train personnel, permit the stopping of trains at points where there would ordinarily be no halt. In other words, the ordinary railway regulations are in a measure suspended so far as the prospector and miner are concerned. There has been, it is pleasing to record, close co-operation on both sides and a thorough sympathy between the railway and the miner has been firmly established.

The willingness of the company to assist in the development of northern resources is evidenced in the construction of branch lines, the lengthiest of which extends from Swastika in Ontario to Noranda, in Quebec. Another runs from Englehart to Charlton; another from Porquis Junction to Porcupine and Timmins and one from the same point to Iroquois Falls; a fifth from Earlton to Elk Lake and a sixth from Cobalt to Silver Centre The Swastika-Noranda branch as well as the Cobalt -New Liskeard street car line is under the operation of the Nipissing Central Railway, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the T. and N. O. Railway.

In all its undertaking, Northern Ontario is only in the infancy of its growth, and with its great opportunities in potential wealth in farm, forest and mine, one can look hopefully forward to increased national interest in its future upbuilding and achievement, with which the welfare of the T. and N. O. Rly. is inseparably associated. Undoubtedly added discoveries and new fields of endeavor will materially add in the future to the prosperity of the country at large.

North Bay The Terminus.

When the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway commenced operation in 1905, North Bay was little more than a village. It is now a city, and one of the most important railway centres in Ontario. It is the most important distributing centre north of Toronto, and is designated as "The Hub of the North". In addition to being the southern terminus and headquarters of the T. and N. O., it is also a divisional point for the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway—railways radiating from it north, south, east and west. In addition to the large machine shops, repair shops, round houses, etc., of the railways, there are saw mills, shingle mill, planing mills, machine shops, brick making plants, ice cream factories, creameries, wholesale houses and numerous other industries. It is also the district headquarters of the Bell Telephone Co. Electric light, heat and power is supplied by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario. It is an important tourist centre, being the gateway and outfitting point for Temagami, the French River, and other tourist resorts in Northern Ontario. North Bay has two newspapers, many fine schools, including a Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, a Provincial Normal School, churches, bank, excellent hotels, golf courses, theatre, etc. Leaving North Bay, the route of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway runs through a district of lake land, river and forest, which provide a good fishing, deer and moose hunting in season.

Temagami 79.1 Miles.

Lake Temagami is in the centre of the Temagami Forest Reserve (50 by 60 miles) approximately 1,000 feet above sea level. Its southern extremity is 47 degrees north latitude, insuring a delightful summer climate, clear, warm days and invigorating cool nights. Altitude and latitude combine in giving a clear, dry rarified atmosphere.

Excellent fishing is to be had and, while Temagami is a region which appeals to the camper, there are a large number of permanent camps and hotels admirably situated at various points on the lake where tourists can enjoy every modern comfort and convenience.

These camps and hotels specialize in outfitting guests for camping-out trips away from headquarters, supplying canoes, tents, blankets, provisions, cooking outfits, etc., and guides if required.

Cobalt 104.1 Miles.

Cobalt will be of interest to the tourist and visitor as the centre of the silver mining industry. Some of the mine buildings may be seen on the hillside across the lake from the railway. Cobalt is also an important distributing centre.

Haileybury 108.7 Miles.

The district town of Temiskaming south, ideally situated on the shores of Lake Temiskaming. Bathing beach, golf course excellent hotel accommodation, schools, hospital and other public buildings.

New Liskeard 113.9 Miles.

Earlton Jct. 129.9 Miles.

The centre of a rich farming district. Elk Lake, 26.5 miles from Earlton Jct., is situated on a branch line. Elk Lake is the gateway to the Gowganda and Matachewan mining districts.

Englehert 139.8 Miles.

The centre of a rich farming section. Good schools, hospitals, churches, banks and a divisional point for the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

Swastika 165.8 Miles.

The gateway to the famous gold camp of Kirkland Lake and the copper gold of Rouyn-Noranda

Kirkland Lake.

Kirkland Lake is on the Nipissing Central Railway, 5.7 miles from Swastika. Here are located many of the world's most famous gold mines and other promising gold properties. Fine schools, churches, modern rink, and is also an important distributing centre for the surrounding mining district.

Rouyn-Noranda.

Rouyn-Noranda, the terminus of The Nipissing Central Railway, 59.9 miles from Swastika, is the centre of the rich gold copper area. Here is located the famous Noranda mine with its modern smelter, the chimney of which is over 400 feet high. Churches, schools, modern rink, excellent hotel accommodation.

Matheson 206.2 Miles.

A thriving town in a rich farming section. Considerable mining development is being done in the immediate and surrounding district. School, churches, hospital, bank.

Monteith 219.1 Miles.

Monteith is the centre of a farming district. Here is located the Northern Academy School instituted by the Ontario Government.

Porquis Jct. 225.7 Miles.

The junction point for the Porcupine Gold Camp of South Porcupine, Schumacher and Timmins, also for Iroquois Falls.

On a branch line 7 miles east of Porquis Jct. on the Abitibi river is located the model town of Iroquois Falls, the home of the giant pulp and paper mill of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company This is one of the lowest cost production mills in Canada, with a daily capacity of 630 tons of paper.

Porcupine Camp.

South Porcupine, Schumacher and Timmins comprise what is generally referred to as the "Porcupine Gold Camp" and are located on a branch line running 33 miles west from Porquis Jct. At South Porcupine is located the Dome Mines; Schumacher, the McIntyre Porcupine, and at Timmins, the Hollinger Consolidated, each employing a large numbers of men. Since its discovery in 1909, this camp has paid in dividends over one hundred million dollars, which in itself has more than justified the building of the railway. Timmins is also an important distributing centre with excellent hotel accommodation and a nine hole golf course.

Cochrane 253.6 Miles.

Cochrane is an important railway centre, being a divisional point for the T. and N. O., as well as a junction point for the Canadian National Railways, which also has shops, roundhouse and other divisional facilities located here. It is located in a potentially rich agricultural area and is the county town of the Cochrane district. Due to its location it is an important distributing centre to points north, south, east and west.

At Island Falls, north of Cochrane on the Abitibi River, the Abitibi Power and Paper Co. have developed a water-power of 60,000 horsepower which is transmitted to their mills at Iroquois Falls.

Abitibi Canyon.

On the Abitibi River at the Canyon near Fraserdale, 70 miles north of Cochrane, is the great Abitibi power development where a dam 250 feet high backs the water of the river for 24 miles, flooding out five intermediate rapids. It guarantees 275,000 horse power and is one of the great power developments of Ontario.

At the Moose River Crossing, 142 miles north of Cochrane, the greatest difficulty in the construction of the James Bay Extension was encountered. At this point, the river was naturally divided into two channels by Murray Island. The distance between the east bank and Murray Island, approximately 1400 feet, was bridged by a trestle and filled, about 300,000 cubic yards of material being required.

The bridge proper over the west channel is 1,836 feet long and has two ninety-foot and fifteen one hundred and ten-foot spans. The sixteen piers and two abutments required some 14,500 cubic yards of concrete and were built during the winter to make possible the prosecution of track laying the following summer. Work on the structure was started Autumn of 1930 and the girders were in place in the summer of 1931. At the west end of the bridge is another fill about 2,000 feet long which required some 126,000 cubic yards of material. Steel was laid to tidewater of James Bay at the end of August, 1931, and the terminus named "Moosonee".

Moosonee 439.8 Miles.

The townsite of Moosonee was planned and laid out under the direction of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission. Station and other necessary terminal facilities were erected preparatory to the formal opening which took place in the summer of 1932.

PACIFIC COAST MINES PROMOTE

Its mill, too, is crushing 400 tons of ore a day and its annual output is valued at $2,000,000, with dividend payments commenced at the opening of 1934 being held at the rate of $600,000 a year.

The success of these two mines has naturally focussed considerable attention on this Bridge River district. Dozens of other properties are now being actively developed there and within a year at least two more mills will be at work recovering the precious metal.

INTENSE ACTIVITY.

In much the same manner every other gold field in the province has become the scene of intense activity.

In the famous old Cariboo district where countless millions in gold were taken from the streams and rivers in the Cariboo gold rush of 1862 lode mining is advancing steadily, with a mine known as Cariboo Gold Quartz the leading producer. Many of the large companies, such as Newmont Corporation of New York and the Britannia Mining & Smelting Company, are developing properties here and meeting with considerable success.

New producers are springing up in many parts of the province. Mines which last year were either idle, unfound or in process of development are now contributing their share to the new wealth of British Columbia.

Among these are the Dentonia and Providence in Greenwood; Relief Arlington, Reno, Kootenay, Belle, Queen and Gold Belt in the Sheep Creek district; Goodenough and Yankee Girl in the Ymir district; and Vidette, Grange, Nicola, Twin Lakes, Nickel Plate and Windpass in other sections.

An indication of how these new producers are swelling the total of production is seen in the output figures released by the Provincial Department of Mines at Victoria covering the first six months of 1934, Gold production of the province in that period is valued at $5,028,124, or almost double that of the first six months of 1933 and more than that of the entire twelve months of 1932.

The slowly rising price of silver and the base metals too is contributing towards the general rehabilitation of the province, evidenced by the fact that the value of combined mineral production for the first six months of 1934 was $20,697,984, as against just over $12,000,000 for the same period in 1933.

These advances have meant the employment of more men in the industry; the decrease of unemployment relief cases; better business for machinery manufacturers, wholesale grocers and supply houses and a substantial increase in governmental revenue from larger taxation payments from the producing mines.

DEATH KNELL IS RUNG FOR YOUNG

Cy's Weakness on Bunts Sends Major League Veteran to Showers.

ALL WASHED UP.

PEOLI, Ohio, Oct. 13. (CP).—Cy Young's waistline and the bunts of a kid baseball team have caught up with him at last.

One of the greatest pitchers of all time—with a perfect game to his credit in which no player reached first—Cy has been given his last release.

The Peoli All-Stars they call them, a gang of kids 12 to 15 years old, and it was a kid with a face full of freckles who sent the great Cy Young to the showers for the last time.

Bunted Out of League

Cy has reached his alloted three score and 10, but it wasn't the long Bears that finished him, nor a fading eye, nor a brittle arm. The boys in the batter's box bunted him out of the league.

The All-Stars, organized this year, needed a pitcher and sought the services of the veteran major leaguer. Cy dug out his old mitt and spiked shoes, loosened up the arm that had won many a thrilling big loop game, and took the mound for "dear old Peoli."

"Those kids we played took a hefty cut at everything I tossed to 'em," Cy declares, "but the old arm had plenty of stuff in it and I won a couple of games."

Then one afternoon Cy's expansive waistline betrayed him.

"I was in the fourth inning of a tight game," Cy relates, "and the first youngster up accidentally bunted. The ball came trickling out toward me and I tried to bend over to field it, but couldn't reach it."

"The kids were quick to notice my helplessness on bunts," Young said. "I'm telling you no pitcher ever had so many bunts poked at him as those youngsters rolled at me.

SILVER ADVANCE NOT AFFECTING COBALT MINES

Only Two Big Mines Producing in Famous Northern Camp.

SOME HISTORY

Small Scale Resumption Probable With White Metal, 50 Cents.

With the price of silver climbing close to the half-dollar mark there is revival talk in the air of the old Cobalt mining camp. Already there have been a few cautious announcements to the effect that arrangements are being made for the re-opening of this or that mine. There has been encouragement for operators working old properties on lease.

But whether fifty-cent silver or even sixty-cent silver will mean a big comeback for Cobalt is another matter.

In the early days, when Cobalt was one of the famous mining camps of the world, the price of silver was only 50 cents. Why, then, shouldn't Cobalt do a quick comeback now? For the simple reason that in the old days the ore was high-grade and easily mined. Now it's lower-grade and harder to get. Reserves have been depleted.

Two Mines Survive.

Silver operators are awaiting some sort of assurance that the 50-cent price will be permanent and that it won't do a nose-dive just as soon as they have spent a lot of money dewatering old properties and getting ready to go to work. There is at present one producing mine in Cobalt proper and one in Gowganda. Both are owned by the M. J. O'Brien interests, of Renfrew. The O'Brien, in Cobalt, and the Miller Lake-O'Brien in Gowganda, have been producing silver since the first days of the camp. They have never closed down, not even when silver was at a low of 24 cents an ounce.

The Castle-Trethewey, in Gowganda, and the Keeley, in South Lorrain, are two of the mines that may possibly reopen if it appears that there is to be a steady market for silver at 50 cents. As for Cobalt itself, Nipissing Mine is said to have considerable supplies on hand, mined but unsold when the price was low. Mining Corporation flooded its workings and abandoned its Cobalt property in 1932. Any resumption of operations in the camp proper will doubtless be on the part of operators working on lease. Smith-Cobalt, a new company, is working ground near Cross Lake, where the O'Brien people made a discovery that has lengthened the life of their mine.

The Cobalt camp consists of the town of Cobalt itself and the country surrounding, Silver Centre and the South Lorrain field which lies southeast of Cobalt toward Lake Temiskaming, and the Gowganda camp to the northwest.

Discovered In 1903.

In 1903, when two sub-contractors named McKinley and Darragh, discovered silver while blasting out the right-of-way for the T. & N. O. Railway, the total value of Ontario's silver production was slightly less than $10,000.

McKinley and Darragh, and then a blacksmith named LaRose, made the first finds at Cobalt, which was at that time known as Long Lake. The Cobalt rush, one of the most spectacular of all mining stampedes, developed. Within two years Ontario's silver production had jumped from $10,000 to $1,500,000.

Enormous Production.

In 1906 it rocketed to three and a half million and put Ontario in first place among the silver-producing provinces of Canada. For twenty years the Cobalt camp held that place for Ontario. From 1906 to 1926 it was never headed. In 1912, it peak year, Cobalt produced silver to a value of $18,000,000. From 1903 to 1930 it turned out pure silver at an average rate of one to three-quarter tons for every working day. From 61 mining companies came a total production valued at $275,000,000.

Only when Cobalt's production fell off while the Sullivan and Premier Mines in British Columbia attained increased output did Ontario yield the palm to the coastal province.

The average price of silver during Cobalt's life has been in the neighborhood of 65 cents an ounce. When the price of silver hit the toboggan a few years ago and went below the 30-cent figure it meant that a correspondingly higher grade of silver must be found. Costs could be cut so fine that low-grade silver could be mined at a profit when the price was below the average but there was a limit. As a matter of fact, the life of the camp had been extended by the grace of post-war prices when silver rose to a peak of $1.37 an ounce in 1920 and enabled old mines to work their low-grade ore, a situation akin to the gold situation today. Back in 1924, the Coniagas Mine was treating ore that contained only nine ounces of silver to the ton—and showing a profit.

Life of Camp Prolonged.

Decreased production in the parent camp had been countered by an increase in South Lorrain and Gowganda and the approaching demise of the old camp was further averted in 1928 with the development of an increased demand for cobalt. The demand was largely due to a newly discovered use for the metal in an alloy of tungsten and chromium known as stellite.

Abandoned rock dumps around the camp soon became valuable because of the cobalt content in the underground workings again waste. Old mines were leased and saw activity. The big operators cashed in on the new demands.

When the depression came along the price of silver went down and so too went the the price of cobalt. The Nipissing Mine was the only mine to pay dividends in 1930 and 1931. It finally suspended in March, 1932, and last year the big mill on the property was destroyed by fire. Only the O'Brien and the small lease-holders remained.

Silver Is a By-Product.

Cobalt, as the great old-time mining camp, is finished. The municipality itself still has substance. It is still the doorway to the mining camps and is a distributing centre of importance. With the development of the Temagami field to the south of the town this year there has been a revival of mining interest. The higher price of silver will probably mean a modest sort of comeback, by way of working old properties. Small operators can take advantage of the facilities of the government testing laboratory at Cobalt and pool their shipments. The new Minister of Mines has given his assurance that the laboratory will not be closed.

It is an odd fact that one of the silver mining industry's biggest competitors is the gold-mining industry. Silver mines are responsible for only 10 per cent. of the world's silver production. It is, in the main, a by-product. Copper mines produce 37 per cent. and gold mines 31 per cent. of the world output.

So, in the long run, it would seem that the higher silver price will be of greater benefit to Noranda, Kirkland and Porcupine than to Cobalt.

MINES DEVELOP BIGGER MARKET FOR THE FARMS

CROWDS SWARM MARKETS

Average Turnover at Kirkland Lake Market is About $3,500 Weekly.

What does a mining camp mean to the surrounding country?

Take Kirkland Lake, for instance. Go down the line a piece to the south and you hit the "Little Clay Belt." farming area. What does the mining camp mean to the people there?

It means a market.

Before Cobalt was discovered the North was boosted as a great potential agricultural area. But people said, with reason, that farmers can't live by buying each other's potatoes. Transportation costs would eat up the profits.

They went ahead and built the railway anyway. The mining fields were discovered. Miners must eat. So the farmers had their market right at hand and more farmers came in and more farm lands are still being cleared. Truck gardens and chicken ranches, for instance, are money-makers near a mining camp.

The Market Train.

Market day is a picturesque feature of mining camp life. It's the big day for the folks from out of town. In the winter they're up by lamp-light, up all night maybe, getting their produce ready for the market train. They crowd aboard, everybody with crates and boxes and baskets and bundles. The gossip of the week is exchanged as the market train rumbles on through the gloom of early morning, stopping every little while to take on another squed of burdened market people.

In the summer many of them come to market in their own cars. But the train in winter is chuckfull of life and color.

Crowds of Purchasers.

Saturday morning is market morning. Right from the time the vendors arrive at six o'clock until the market opens officially at 8 o'clock and from then until two o'clock, closing time, there are crowds.

Mining camps have big transient and unmarried populations. There are many boarding houses and restaurants. Market prices are cheaper than store prices. Watch a foreign-born boarding house keeper at the market. You won't fool her on quality—at least, not more than once. And she'll haggle over price down to the last copper. Why not? That's the custom back home. The market people understand this. A real good argument over a nickel, spiced with plenty of broken English, is refreshing and good for the soul and all part of the fun of market day

Big Average Turn-over.

The average turn-over at Kirkland Lake market is about $3,500. Some vendors share in the aggregate more heavily than others. One might make $100. Another will make less. One man brings in 500 pounds of beef every Saturday and has never been known to take any back home.

And then the market people do their shopping. Money keeps in circulation. In these years of lean prices for farm produce the mining camp markets have meant a lot to those Northerners who farm in New Ontario.

THE CLAY BELT.

The Clay Belt of Northern Ontario is one of the greatest expanses of fertile territory in Canada, extending westerly between Ontario and Quebec for 350 miles and containing millions of acres for future development.

CHAPTER 3

Inspector Thomas Lee was stepping briskly from a car filled with plainclothesmen when Callaghan and Dan reached the front door. He was a tall, broad-shouldered man, his hair slightly gray. Enormous and handsome, belying his 50 odd years, he looked for all the world like a picture-book defender of the law. Behind him came Timothy Blade, with his thin, white face and long angular body, head of the police beat for the Evening Sun.

The inspector returned Callaghan's respectful greeting. "Where's the body?" he asked professionally. Dan winced.

"Upstairs, sir," replied the patrolman.

"Take us up." To the plainclothesmen who had arrived with him, he directed, "Watch the entrance."

Callaghan led the way followed by the inspector, the reporter and Dan. He unlocked the door, stood aside for the two newcomers to enter, then followed with the caretaker. Lee knelt beside the body as Callaghan had.

He shook his head at the reporter when he arose. "Dead for hours, I'd say. But the coroner'll be along soon. . . . Here you," he interrupted himself. "Callaghan! What's the matter with you?"

Callaghan was staring at the floor near the body, shaking his head in stupid surprise and unbelief. "The gun, sir," he stuttered. "It's gone. It isn't there."

At his words, Dan pressed forward to look over his shoulder. "It can't be gone. It can't be. We was here all the time," he insisted to the inspector.

"That's right, inspector," pleaded the patrolman. "We were right here til we went down to meet you."

Lee shrugged his shoulders and sighed, as though aggrieved. "Anybody beside you two come in?" he asked in the voice of a parent to an ignorant and careless child.

"No, sir, not a soul."

The inspector went to the head of the stairs. "Sergeant," he called.

"Yes, sir." One of the stouter figures at the door detached itself and lumbered up the stairs.

"Put a man on the front door and another at the back," ordered the inspector in a quiet voice. "The other two of you search the House for someone in hiding. He's probably got a gun."

He re-entered the office and closed the door. Tim Blade had taken down a raincoat that hung near Reeves' desk and had covered the body with it. Lee seated himself at Jamieson's desk and drew out pencil and paper. Tim lounged near by, his laziness dissipated by the sharpness of his eyes.

A curious friendship existed between these two, begun in the days when Tim was a cub and Lee just a member of the bureau. Lee was slow, honest, with a tenaciously groping mind that was frequently puzzled. Tim's keenness came from an erratic, darting brain. In addition he was blessed with a disconcertingly sharp judgment. They made a perfect team. Thus the two worked together.

Neither Tim's superiors nor Lee's minded. Both of them got results from the combination. Nobody kicked but Tim's competitors. Lee made short work of them. "When you can keep your word as well as Tim," he shouted at them, "and don't go printing everything you think you see, maybe we'll play ball. Until then, you'll be satisfied with what I give you, see?"

Now the two settled down to the business of examining Dan. "What's your name?" asked Lee.

"Dan. Dan McManus. Everyone calls me Dan."

"Tell me what happened."

"Well, sir," began Dan, "I came into the House like I do every morning. I clean the offices then. And I came upstairs and ——"

"What time was that?" interrupted Lee, busy with his pencil

"It must have been maybe 15 minutes past seven. I was late, you see," Dan admitted.

"Would you mind telling us why you were late?" This from Tim.

"Well." The witness hesitated. "It sounds kind of foolish. But my wife didn't feel very good this morning so I made her some breakfast and took it in to her." He looked ashamed. "I don't often do it, but she's a good wife, so sometimes I ——"

"Indulge her. Quite right, Dan," encouraged the reporter. "And then?"

"Well, then, I walked on down here and came in. First I went down to the basement and got my cleaning things. Everything was still. I don't think there was anybody else in here then. After that, I came up here and started in cleaning on Henderson's office. That's down at the end of the hall in back. When I got that done, I opened this door and I found him," ended Dan in a low voice.

"But what did you do after that?" insisted Lee.

"I came up, sir, and looked at him and found that he was dead. Then I locked the windows—I forgot to tell you they were open, sir."

Lee got up and walked to the windows. "Open, eh?" Then he beckoned sharply to Tim. A fire escape, easily reached from one of the window sills, led to the ground.

That simplifies things," he said.

"Not necessarily," disputed Tim. "Callaghan says he locked the windows. The gun was in here then."

Lee considered that. "We'll remember it, anyway," he insisted. "Go on, Callaghan."

Tim smiled. Lee loved facts, collected them on a case as a child collects marbles. He never questioned their relevancy.

"I locked the windows," repeated Callaghan, "and we came out and Dan here locked the door. I saw him do it," he added hastily as Lee turned suspicious eyes on Dan.

"Then I told him to take me to a 'phone and we went to an office up front and Dan unlocked it. After I called you, we went back into the hall and I took Dan's key to the offices. There's just one key to all of them, sir, so he says. Then we waited in the hall for you. And that's all."

"Were you both in the hall all the time?" questioned Lee.

"All the time. I stood in front of the door and he," indicating Dan, "was mopping the floor."

Tim had lost interest in the examination and was prowling about the room. Now he stopped before the door by Reeves' desk.

"Where does this go, Dan?" he asked.

"That's to the washroom next door."

"Did you lock that, too?"

"No, sir, that's never locked. The key's lost, I guess. Nobody's ever seen it since we moved in."

Lee chuckled loudly. "O. K., Tim. It might've been done that way, sure enough," he approved.

Tim turned in surprise, and shook his head. "You're one up on me, inspector. Blue print it. That's how what might've been done?"

"Though you were leadin up to it—stealing the gun, I mean," Lee explained. "The murderer is either in the building or sneaks back in while they're 'phoning and hides in the washroom. He's got a key, unlocks the door, goes for the gun, steps back into the washroom and when they come down to meet us, dashes out the back way. There is a back stairs, isn't there?" he asked of Dan.

"There's a back stairs, all right, but it couldn't of happened that way. I'd of found him when I went into the washroom."

For Sunday, October 14

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of sudden and entirely unforeseen events, changes and possible disruptions, which may be expected to wield a far-reaching effect on the future life and destiny. This radical stirring and abrupt commotion may involve great activity and excitement, with energy, enterprise and high pressure moves dominating the situation. Real financial benefits, with popularity and prestige may ensue, but beware slander and gossip.

Those whose birthday it is are encouraged to embrace great, unusual and worth while openings and opportunities for adventure, high ambitions and important projects, these suddenly precipitated and having a most powerful influence on the future life. New environs, interests, prestige and standing are pressed, but be on guard against trivial gossip and ill report.

A child born on this day may be adventurous, efficient, original and independent, with high initiative and ambitions. It should reach high station in unusual fields of endeavour.

For Monday, October 15

Monday's astrological forecast is not a generally propitious one, holding portents of regrettable incidents, hazards and not trifling losses in business projects and especially finances. There is an exaggerated impulse to large and worthless schemes and propositions from strangers or through unorthodox sources, which must inevitably end in loss, failure and disappointment. Friends may be involved, although private associations may offer some comfort and compensations.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year calling for control restraint and conservation in the use of funds, lest wild impulses to utopian, impracticsl and wild schemes, projects and "come-on" propositions from strangers carry them away, dissipate their substance and undermine their standing. Private affairs compensate.

A child born on this day may have a tendency to large ideas and unstable adventures, plunging into perilous projects and wild schemes to their own loss and the detriment of their friends.

MILLBROOK

A practical talk on "The Trained Nurse" was given at a party last week when the senior girls of the W.I. branch were being entertained in the home of one of the older members, the daughter of the house, herself a graduate nurse of two years' standing, who had been born and brought up in the community, giving the information by special request of the guests. The party was arranged for the purpose of meeting the "information hunger," as one of the girls called it, in respect of the profession of nursing, while their former chum, the graduate nurse, was at home for a brief vacation."

Replying to the question, "Is a trained nurse a Registered Nurse?" the information was forthcoming, "Yes, in Ontario that is true. Perhaps I had better explain a little more fully. A Registered Nurse is one who has passed the test set by the Examining Board, acting under the authority of the Act Respecting the Registration of Nurses, and anyone who has graduated from an approved training school for nurses is eligible to write on the examination."

"Now you are going to ask 'What is an approved training school?' and here is the answer: Every hospital training school in this province is an approved school, providing it meets certain set standards. These standards require that a nurse be given theory and practical work touching on the care of the sick, under qualified instructors and experienced supervisors. Of course the instruction must be given in a systematic way, so that the nurse-in-training, when she completes her course, will have definite and sufficient knowledge covering the various diseases and their care.

Learning by seeing and doing is what the hospital must afford opportunity for, and if it is itself on a small scale, and has not patients of a sufficient variety and number to supply material, for the nurse's study, it is required to provide this opportunity by affiliating with other hospitals. Outside the small hospital it is generally necessary to afford special services so the class in training may have experience in learning the care of communicable diseases, tuberculosis, mental infirmity and other maladies."

A question from one of the eager-faced listeners regarding health brought the reply that a young probationer in Ontario hospitals, must have good health and a strong constitution. "Physical examination by a competent physician invariably takes place within six months after you enter the training school, and this will include an x-ray of your chest and lungs. This in addition to the examination that precedes your application to enter. For those of you who are so anxious to take up this profession—and of course I think it is the best there is—can secure all the necessary information and help by writing, personally, to the Inspector of Training Schools, Department of Health, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, and your letter will have prompt and courteous attention."

Assurance was given that the nurses' residence is sanitary, with all proper facilities for allowing each one to apply the principles of personal hygiene, and upon further questioning the "nurse hostess" added the fact that registration enables nurses to keep in touch with each other through the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario.

"Our province is divided into ten districts, each with a chairman, and this official will gladly give any information requested to each nurse in the district over which his jurisdiction extends."

Much further knowledge was gained while the group was seated about the tea table, when the formal part of the gathering had been brought to a close, and it was quite a grateful party of girls who shook hands with the hostess and her daughter when making farewells, and extending hearty thanks for the hospitality, and the practical talk, enjoyed.

LIFFORD LINE

Diet For School Children

The subject of the school child's diet fills a large place in a mother's mind. Often careful watching is needed to prevent slighting of breakfast for fear of being late for school. Surely proper bed time hours would result in the child being able to rise in time to eat and enjoy an adequate breakfast. The whole day goes better for such preparations for the body cannot work well if it is craving food. Should hunger be absent the appetite should be tempted by some means. A help in providing a cheery atmosphere is a gay table cover though it may only be oil-cloth since oil-cloth in soft bright colors is as easily obtained now as white.

Variety in fod is also advisable. If we cannot afford much fruit, vegetables can be used in greater amounts. A glass of canned tomatoes, when ripe ones are not available, with pepper and salt is quite as tasty and healthful as orange juice. The menu should include something hot, such as a hot cereal or hot milk or cocoa to drink. It is well to give the child a substantial dish such as eggs, especially if he takes his lunch to school. Fresh fruit is very desirable but dried fruit stewed and canned fruits are suitable substitutes. When a child refuses his helping of cereal it is a signal to serve raisins with it. Children usually enjoy a helping of honey, jelly or jam.

Packing lunches for a child who must carry a meal to school requires constant thought to avoid being monotonous. If the contents of the lunch box never vary, lack of appetite is sure to follow.

The container is important, tin being best. A tin pail with a handle is frequently used and is suitable if a few small holes are made for ventilation to prevent the food's flavor being injured. A little tin kit brightly painted with the child's favorite color is often a delight. It may be fitted with thermos bottle, cup, serviette, small glass jar with screw-on cover, spoon and fork. If a hot dish is not supplied at school then the thermos bottle for hot cocoa or soup is well worth the cost. Crepe paper serviettes are cheap requisites of a dainty lunch and waxed paper cannot well be done without. The wax papers saved from cereal boxes are fine to wrap up sandwiches and pieces of cake. In canning and preserving time small bottles and jars can be filled and the contents used to supplement the baked apples, stewed prunes or salad which can be carried to school in wax paper cups or custard cups but preferably in little jars with tight covers to prevent leaking. Cold cream jars are worth saving for this use.

A shelf in the pantry for lunch materials is a great help. Here one can keep cookies, sandwich filling prepared before hand, fruit, a few nuts or chocolate bars for an occasional treat.

Sandwiches are the great standby in the school lunch and as the child generally likes to eat at recess, it is wise to put a sandwich or cookie on the top of the rest of the lunch where it can be reached easily. When possible it is best to not always use white bread in sandwich making and to vary the fillings. In this the wisdom of having the filling prepared beforehand is shown, for having each sandwich different is more tempting as well as better from the point of food value. Occasionally we may use a cookie cutter or a paper pattern with a sharp knife to make fancy shapes. Fancy bread such as raisin bread, is moist and can often take the place of sandwiches.

When making desserts at home for the family, a little extra can be made to put in the individual containers in the lunch box. A turnover or saucer pie is enjoyed by the children old enough to be allowed pie. Some kind of fruit, some food which needs chewing and a bottle of milk are necessary in each lunch box.

A light lunch after school is often considered permissible. Of course nothing is considered better than bread, butter and milk but occasionally a treat is given. A pretty mug and plate and a gay little pitcher for milk makes the lunch orderly as well as attractive.

"When the children ask for "something nice," it needs to be something they will enjoy while at the same time it must be good for them. If you do not wish them to have pastry crust line the buttered pie dish with thin buttered bread and fill with custard or well-sweetened applesauce and bake.

After school cake makes use of either white or brown bread toast left from breakfast. Crush the dry toast with a rolling pin and put one and a half cups of crumbs into a bowl, then add the same amount of flour and a pinch of salt. Mix together and rub in two tablespoons of shortening. Add a cup of sugar, 2 tablespoons molasses, 2 well beaten eggs and 1 teaspoon of baking soda stirred in a cupful of sour milk. All the milk need not be used, only enough to make the mixture slightly thinner than ordinary cake mixture. After baking and cooling this cake may be iced.

Bran cookies are just right for lunches. Cream together one-half cupful of butter and one cupful of brown sugar, add two tablespoons of cream, two eggs well beaten, two and one half cupfuls of bran, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted with enough flour to make the dough the right consistency for rolling out. Sprinkle the cookies with grated nutmeg or cinnamon and sugar. Do not place them too closely together on the pan as they spread in baking. Bake in a hot oven.

Apple bread is highly commended for its healthfulness. After peeling and coring, boil a dozen good-sized apples until tender. Mash them while still warm in twice their amount of flour and add yeast in proportion. Knead without water as the juice of the apples should make it soft. Let rise for twelve hours then make into loaves and bake until light.

Supper for children is a meal which demands considerable attention in planning it. If they can have a warm substantial dinner then the evening meal needs to be proportionately lighter. But if a lunch has been carried to school, supper must supply hearty food, yet light enough to follow the rule of not over-working the digestive system at night.

Hot sandwiches are excellent as are also nourishing soup with vegetables, eggs cooked in endless variety. Vegetables served with butter or milk, fish or meat occasionally.

Moliere, the name assumed by Jean Baptiste Pequelin, was the greatest dramatist and perhaps the greatest writer of France.

ROSENEATH FAIR LAST OF SEASON

erably to the exchequer; several sideshows reported their biggest "take" in weeks; a long row of refreshment and lunch stands appeared to be working toward profits, crown and anchor games got a little play, but the "roll down" boys, and there was a considerable squad of them, found more than the weather chilly. Several of them were noticed during the afternoon to be forced to the extremity of trying to inveigle even elderly women into the "cover the spot" game in which metal disks are used to cover a round painted spot on the playing board.

Of Course—The Exhibits

The primary agricultural aspects of the Fair, its actual background, focussed attention on some outstanding classes, best cattle, light horses, poultry, sheep, swine, grain, seeds, and domestic products. A reminder of last winter's sub-zero record was found in the smaller display of apples, and the dairy cattle, heavy horses were up to the average.

A new cattle shed that cost $350 stood out as the year's addition to the permanent exhibition plant, and the cattle ring was moved to the west end of the grounds, affording more central space for the midway.

Race Track Accident

The only marring incident of the afternoon was an accident in the first heat of the 2.25 class race in which Wilfrid Smith of Weston, a driver, suffered a broken nose, deeply cut lip, and a wound over one eye. Two racing gigs were put out of commission for the day, and two horses were severely shaken up, one of them retiring with gash in right flank.

Smith was on the seat behind "Arlie Patch" owned by VanAlstine of Port Hope, and was leading the field at the first turn. In some manner the horse fell just as it was turning into the back stretch. Smith was thrown heavily over the prostrate horse, and "Kate McClure" owned by H. Ingram of Lindsay, and driven by Sted Craig, trailing closely, drove over and went down in another heap.

Smith was bleeding freely from facial wounds, and had to be taken to the office of Dr. Sam Ryan for treatment.

Mayor Carr's Address.

Before calling upon Mayor Carr, of Campbellford to declare the fair formally opened, Fred Slade announced that he had received at noon a telegram from W. A. Fraser, M.P., who was in Montreal on business, expressing his regret that he could not be present, and wishing the directors a successful day.

Mayor Carr conveyed the regrets of Hon. Duncan Marshall that the pressure of departmental business prevented him from attending the fair.

"Hon. Mr. Marshall also asked me to assure you that his department takes a lively interest in such fairs as this at Roseneath, and that the entire administration is behind him in everything that can be done to improve the conditions of agriculture in this province," Mayor Carr said. "We all realize that it is most important that our producers should receive every encouragement that is possible, because as their conditions improve the whole country is affected by their increased purchasing power. If that purchasing power can be increased, our economic problem will be eliminated.

"You elected the Hepburn administration to curtail unnecessary expenditure and taxes, and in three months our annual expenditure in this province has been reduced by $3,000,000. I believe the people generally would like to see further reductions in the months that are ahead. Of course, when expenditures are cut, there is bound to be criticism, because somebody's toes are stepped on. But, the administration has endeavored from the outset to fulfill the mandate which the electors gave them."

Mayor Carr briefly referred to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph which he stated had deteriorated in recent years from the high standard it had formerly established. An examination was in progress for the purpose of restoring the prestige of the college.

"I declare this fair open, and I hope that you will all have a pleasant and instructive afternoon," Mayor Carr concluded.

The Horse Races

Four races on the afternoon's track card provided ten heats, featured by Louis Bennett, of Port Hope, taking the free-for-all with "Ginger Grattan", and adding second money with his "Walter Stone".

At Norwood the veteran horseman and driver was content with second money in a performance that disappointed his followers. He found the local track to his liking yesterday, and marked up one of the fastest miles, assuming that the double trip around the oval is a full mile, seen here in many years, when he took the first heat in 1:59.

The results were as follows:

Free-for-all:

"Ginger Grattan", Bennett, Port Hope—1, 1, 2, 1; "Walter Stone", Bennett, Port Hope—3, 4, 1, 2; "Catherine Grattan", Orr, Belleville—2, 3, 4, 4; "King Pluto", Craig, Smith's Falls— 4, 2, 3, 3. Time: 1:59; 2:02; 2:02;2:02.

Over at Norwood "King Pluto" romped away with first money, but the eastern horse folded up behind the Bennett pair yesterday for third money, his best heat being the second when he finished in the second hole.

2:19 Class:

"Richard Hall", Caldwell, Port Hope—1, 1, 1; "Arnie Grattan" Hillock, Belleville— 2, 3, 2; "Tod Grattan", Sutherland, Peterborough—4, 2, 3; "Mollie L", Mullen, Goderich—3, 5, 5; "Tillie the Great", P. Dunford, Peterborough—5, 4, 4. Time: 2:06; 2:03; 2:05.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.
(By Victor Eubank, A.P. Financial Writer.)

NEW YORK, October 13 (A.P.).—The inflationary balloon appeared to have been at least partially deflated to-day and stocks and staples yielded some of their recent gains under speculative week-end profit-taking. Equity trading, however, dwindled appreciably on the decline, transfers in the brief session approximating only 385,000 shares. The close was easy.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Oct. 13 (CP) — Declines held the upper hand among securities on the Montreal Stock Exchange at the close of to-day's abbreviated session.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol "B" lost a point at 78½, while Wabasso Cotton was off the same amount at 20. Brazilian Traction at 11⅞, and Canadian Pacific Railway at 12½ were both down ¼. International nickel eased off at 24¼.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol "B", Lake of the Woods, Canada Cement Common and Preferred, Canadian Car, McColl-Frontenac, and St. Lawrence Paper Preferred were down fractions.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS.

TORONTO, October 13 (C.P.). — The industrial share market of the Toronto Exchange moved at a more leisurely pace to-day with the effect of profit-taking showing here and there over the board in mild price recessions. Narrow losses were more plentiful than gains at the close.

All the interlisted issues were influenced by a softer tone on the New York Board, Brazilian, C.P.R., International Nickel, and Ford A dropping ⅛ to ⅜ each and Consolidated Smelters easing down a point to 138.

In the beverages Canada Bud and Walkers Preferred held to the up side against slight recessions in Canada Malting, Walkerville, Walkers Common, Distillers Seagrams, and Industrial Alcohol A.

TORONTO MINING.

TORONTO, Oct. 13 (C.P.).—Following several days of advancing prices, profit-taking had an innings in the closing session of the week on the Mining Board and prices were shaded moderately. The silvers changed hands in heavy volume, all at the expense of quotations.

Lake Shore, Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves weakened 10 to 25 cents each, while Bralorne and Pioneer held steady to strong. Secondary golds were trimmed 3 to 10 cents each, the losers including God's Lake, Gunnar Gold, Central Patricia and Little Long Lac.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterboroughs Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

Jack Graham,
Fraserville, Ont.

You are a keen quick thinker, but not always as open as you might be. This characteristic is due in part to the fact that you are nervously inclined or shy about expressing all the thoughts which come into your mind.

On the other hand, you may find yourself being hasty in your remarks and perhaps cutting, when in reality you had intended to be nice and kind. However, as this is typical of your nature, you cannot help it. But you can train your mind to do and say the right thing at the right time.

You have excellent characteristics, but do not make the best of them. Your capital letters show rather a versatile disposition which is no doubt a detriment to you because it makes people think that you are not sincere.

You ask about physical development and I would certainly advise you to join a gymnasium and swimming class if possible, for you do not appear to be very strong. Your mental development will take care of itself as you gain physical strength. No occupation of a definite nature presents itself in your writing just yet.

Imelda Cleary,
Peterborough, Ont.,
R.R. No. 1.

Your handwriting reveals a delicate refinement. You are well poised and gracious. You emanate a friendly spirit and inspire the utmost confidence. Your extremely tall upper loops delineates a leaning towards the romantic and idealistic.

You have vision and imagination. You are dignified, optimistic and ambitious. You are cheerful and daily love a good time.

Although you are an idealist at heart....You are careful and practical.

You do not let your plans and dreams carry you away from the daily grind. Your artistic and systematic nature lends an even balance to your noteworthy character.

You should always dress in colors which inspire you, because your gentle sense of well being needs self expression through your manner and dress.

Teaching, nursing or writing might interest you, because you are typically a mental person. You have many artistic characteristics too, and no doubt make the best use of them.

John A. Willan,
Fraserville, Ont.

Your handwriting as it slopes so far forward, illustrates an affectionate nature, but I am afraid that you are not very firm. Your disposition is a rather nervous one, and you should not undertake anything too strenuous for your physical strength.

You are romantically inclined, and seem to like to build castles in the air, then if your plans or dreams do not materialize, you feel very much upset.

There is a natural desire for self expression noted in your writing, but you seem afraid to allow yourself the gratification of this talent, though you do desire praise for the work which you feel is well done.

Buying and selling should appeal to one of your nature because you require more change of environment than most people.

Try to build up your physical strength and I feel sure that you will soon notice a gain in your business or work, for a cheerful person is an asset to any firm.

I think the above answers all your questions, but I am sorry that I cannot use your pen name. However, if you care to write again under your own name, and give me your month, year and date of birth I might be able to assist you further by ascertaining your fortunate month, day and number.

Dorothy L. Scott,
57 Brunsell Ave.,
Toronto 9, Ontario.

Your handwriting depicts you as one with a great deal of artistic temperament. You have a decided tendency to create your own art.

You radiate a spirit of beauty about you and about your home. You have a predominating characteristic, that compels people to notice you wherever you chance to be.

It is the upright carriage and well chosen clothing. You simply abhor loud colors, and you show discriminating taste in every way.

You invariably lend your hand to assist wherever charity is necessary. Your heart is over-flowing with goodness. You do not gossip ....you have learned not to let your right hand know what your left is doing.

You are true to old friends, but not averse to making new ones. You love meeting people and seem to be at your best when in the company of many others, who are striving like yourself to do good.

Rosilla Blundred,
2 Elm Avenue,
Toronto, Ontario.

Your handwriting delineates you as having a very temperamental disposition. Your sense of proportion is quite well developed but yet you seem to be frequently upset and nervous and when you are, things in general seem to be distorted.

You are a little self-conscious, but quite dignified and ambitious, and you have sufficient talent to ensure success in any line of endeavour, preferably where you could have the opportunity to express yourself through your own ideas.

Your mind is keen and clever. Your hands are essentially busy. You do not like to have much idle time at your disposal. You are observing and unobstrusive, fond of good times, and music has an appeal which you cannot define at times, yet sometimes you do not care to even hear it.

You seem to be rather set in your ways and decided in your opinions. There is a leaning towards social good times, but not as a steady occupation. You possess a desire for the utmost cleanliness of person. You appear to be well poised and refined.

Your birthsign is Scorpio the Scorpion, you are ruled by Mars. Tuesday is your lucky day, and January and July are the best months for important undertakings. In answer to your last question, I must say in all honesty that handwriting does not predict the future as in fortune telling, but if you desire a change, make one.... by constantly striving for better things. Your very ruling planet, Mars denotes courage.

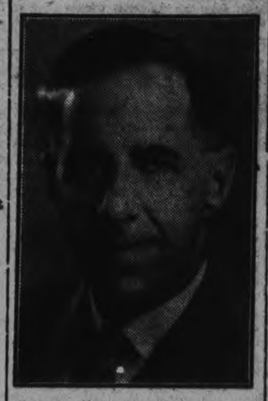
Leading Producer



A. E. PIPER

District Supervisor of the local Ordinary Branch of the London Life Insurance Company, has been one of the Company's leading producers for the past twelve months, according to an announcement which has come from the Company's Head Office.

Mr. Piper has many friends in this vicinity who will be pleased to learn of, and to congratulate him industry into such a crazy and imon his success.

Jellicoe, a Sleepy Railway Town, Booms Suddenly.

RUSH BEGAN IN JUNE

An overflow and aftermath of the Long Lac rush, the Sturgeon River staking bee of the past summer has been one of the most spectacular mining episodes of 1934. From Lake Nipigon eastward through the Sturgeon River country for a distance of more than 20 miles to the Port Arthur branch of the Canadian National Railway, the country has been staked solidly in a four-mile belt and an abandoned wilderness has been transformed into a scene of feverish activity.

Prospectors prominent in the Little Long Lac field have been in the forefront of the Sturgeon River rush, which began early in June and was in full swing during August. Scores of interesting and promising finds have been made over an extensive area north and south of the river, many of the big companies are now in the field prepared to explore ground under option and dozens of smaller outfits and syndicates are building camps and sending in crews to do assessment work.

Rush Began in June.

Two prospectors named Green and Brennan made the first find on the Sturgeon River in 1931 and staked claims, but did not follow up their discovery. It was nt until Charles W. Taylor of Haileybury, and Rene Maloney went into the area early in May of this year and made two finds, one of a particularly spectacular nature, that the real rush developed. Early in June scores of prospectors were staking on the strength of the Taylor-Maloney strikes and news of other finds came with such regularity that the rush soon reached stampede proportions.

The Sturgeon River is crossed by the Port Arthur branch of the C.N.R. at Mileage 24¼, six miles east of Jellicoe, and most of the prospectors went in by canoe, running several bad rapids in the course of the journey to Twin Falls, near where Maloney made his first find. Numerous parties lost their outfits and supplies and several freight canoes were dumped, but fortunately no lives have been lost. Other prospectors came in by plane, landing on the small lakes in the area, and now airplanes are busy freighting supplies, lumber, and machinery in to the various camps that are being hurriedly thrown up.

Jellicoe Is Busy.

Jellicoe is the headquarters of the stampede. It was at one time a railway town, before the C.N.R. diverted its main line trains through to th eTranscontinental from Long Lac to Nakina, but in recent years has seen little activity.

Now its limited accommodation is overtaxed, hundreds of tents have sprung up, old railway buildings are all occupied, stores and restaurants have opened up, and carloads of supplies are pouring into the town. Freighting is done by canoe and airplane, as the river is too swift and narrow in places to permit of using heavy craft and barges, but an old lumber road from Nesah is being extended to Windigok Lake, scene of some of the recent finds, and it will be used for winter travel.

Most spectacular of the discoveries to date has been that of Tom Brown and Jack Woods on the Sturgeon River Gold Mines property at Barnum Rapids, adjacent to Pete McDonough's Tomac claims and the U.S. Smelters' property. The Sturgeon River Gold property has been optioned by Conigas. Len Brookbank's promising find at Windigokan Lake in being developed by the Connell interests, and the Karl Springer Exploration Company will develop the original Maloney find as well as other claims staked by Maloney and Edwards. Claims staked by Charlie Taylor in three separate areas of the field in the west, south and east are controlled by the Oliver Severn Syndicate.

Casey-Contact, McVittie-Graham, Minefinders, Prospectors Airways, and other outfits are also prominently identified with the new field.

Visible gold has been found freely on many of the properties but staking of properties has been the main concern during the summer, and as yet active development work is still in the preliminary stage. It is assured that intensive diamond drilling and exploration program will be carried on during the winter on numerous properties.

PAST GRAND SIRE VISITS DISTRICT

I.O.O.F. Lodges Are Given Visit by Brother Powley.

CANDIDATE INITIATED.

On Thursday evening, Peterborough District No. 44 I.O.O.F. was honored by a fraternal visit from Past Grand Sire Bro. Powley, who is assisting to carry on the work of Grand Master Bro. W. A. Black of Renfrew, who is confined to his home through illness.

It being the regular meeting of Peterborough Lodge No. 111, Peterborough Lodge acted jointly with the districts as hosts for the occasion. The meeting opened at 7.30 p.m., with Bro. Rowe presiding.

Bro. Powley and Bro. C. E. Wiley, D.D.G.M. of District No. 44 were introduced by Bro. G. Evans, and were given a very cordial welcome to Peterborough district by the N.G., who in his remarks regretted very much the absence of the Grand Master and pointed out that Bro. Black could not have sent anyone to take his place who would have been more suitable than Ontario's own Past Grand Sire. It was resolved to forward a letter to Bro. Black regretting that he was unable to be present and wishing him a speedy recovery from his illness.

The initiatory degree was conferred on one candidate by Peterborough Lodge and immediately after Bro. Powley was called on for his address of the evening, which was very enthusiastically received, Bro. Powley giving for his subject some of his experiences while officiating as Grand Sire, pointing out the great work the Order is doing in other parts of the world. A very hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker for his inspiring address.

Immediately following the meeting the brothers retired to the dining room where a splendid banquet had been prepared by a number of members of the Rebekah Lodge. After the banquet the following toasts were proposed and responded to: The King; Grand Lodge; Our Visitors; and the Degree Team. Hearty votes of thanks were then tendered to the orchestra, which was under the leadership of Bro. R. Dyer, for their valuable services and to the committee from the Rebekah Lodge for the wonderful banquet, after which the evening was brought to a close by all joining in singing the National Anthem.

Extending for five miles through the trees a wall of flame recently destroyed trees on 10,000 acres of forest near Dragulgnan, France.

POINCARE DIES SHORT ILLNESS AT PARIS HOME

Shock of Marseille Assassinations Believed to Have Hurried the End.

WAR-TIME PRESIDENT.

Knew King Alexander Well and Was Life-long Friend of Barthou.

BY JOHN EVANS

PARIS, Oct. 15.—(AP)—Raymond Poincare, the last of France's great war leaders, died quietly at 3:30 o'clock this morning.

The war-time president and "savior of the Franc" 10 years later was 74 years old.

The shock of the Marseille assassinations may have hurried the end. M. Poincare grieved over the disastrous event, for he knew King Alexander well and Louis Barthou was his life-long friend.

Poincare will be given a national funeral Saturday immediately after President Lebrun's return from Belgrade to attend Alexander's funeral. The body will lie in state at the Pantheon until Saturday noon when it will be taken to the Notre Dame Cathedral for services, then returned to the Pantheon for Premier Doumergue's funeral oration.

After a military display the body will be taken to Sampigny for a private burial at Nubecourt.

Not Seriously Ill

Death came at his home here after a short illness which doctors thought was not serious. The elderly statesman had expected to leave shortly on his annual winter trip to the Riviera.

Although virtually in political retirement since he resigned as premier in 1929, Poincare had just been reelected to a departmental council seat after a spectacular physical comeback. Doctors two years ago gave him up for lost.

"He was just worn out," they said today.

All last night his wife and friends watched with him. He was conscious but an extension of his paralysis still his voice. He died in a silent room as a cold and windy rainstorm rattled the windows of his Paris home.

Poincare's last written words constituted a newspaper article he had dictated about Barthou. He worked until the last seeking to finish his memoirs.

His body lay on a brass bed in the library among the books that had been his greatest friends and comfort. Beside him were a Sister of Charity and Mme. Marguerite, his nurse during his several grave illnesses since his resignation five years ago.

Near his head was a vase of holy water in which a sprig of box-wood was placed.

Poincare worked until the last writing memoirs. Along with occasional newspaper and magazine articles, at the foot of his bed is the table where he wrote.

Pages of his written manuscript remain as he left them, while all about the library are books of reference and documents. He was painstakingly accurate in everything, always checking facts although his marvelous memory enabled him to memorize almost word for word even a long speech simply by writing it.

Health Broke

The statesman's health broke under the strain of driving through parliament a ratification of the United States-France debt accord of five years ago. His simple life and strong constitution enabled him to survive a number of dangerous attacks, but he never regained full vigor.

After his withdrawal came the world economic crisis, Germany's cessation of reparation payments. Dissension in this country with the bloody February riots and political and social turmoil which caused him deep sorrow.

President Albert Lebrun and Mme. Lebrun remained for half an hour. The president, who leaves to-night for Belgrade to attend the funeral of King Alexander, bowed before the body of the elder statesman whose advise he had often sought and his tears flowed freely.

Lebrun told what had never been published—that when Poincare came to Paris the President often visited him, discussed his problems and took Poincare's counsel.

SEARCH EUROPE FOR ASSASSINS OF BALKAN KING

GUN GIRL SOUGHT.

Hideouts in Paris Searched—French Border Closely Watched.

BY ROBERT PARKER

PARIS, Oct. 15.—(AP)—A search of all Europe for Dr. Ante Pavelich and Gustav Perec, named as Balkan terrorist chiefs by confessed fellow conspirators of the assassin Petrus Kalemen, was begun today to stamp out what police call a "gang of international assassins."

Fears for the lives of Yugoslav government leaders spurred the search for "higher ups" along with three fugitive members of the "suicide squad," including a beautiful Slavic gun girl, associates of Kalemen.

Yugoslav officials have revealed the real name of King Alexander's assassin was Vlada Georgieff Tchernocemaks, a notorious Macedonian terrorist and associate of Ivan Mihailoff, whom they held responsible for several previous assassinations.

Broadcast Photographs

Photographs of Pavelich and Perec were broadcast to police of all countries in Europe after a conference between French and Yugoslav secret service chiefs. Yugoslav terrorism of recent years has been attributed to the band of Belgrade officials.

Heavy Snowstorm Hits Great Britain

French-Canadians In Cornwall District Demand Apology From Mr. Justice Makins

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 15.—(CP)—Unless an apology is forthcoming from Mr. Justice Makins of the Supreme Court of Ontario for the disparaging remarks concerning French Canadians he is alleged to have made from the bench the matter will be carried to the floor of parliament, leading French Canadians declared today.

The French speaking citizens of this town and along the St. Lawrence River are highly indignant and have already forwarded a protest to Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and Minister of Justice Hugh Guthrie. The protest took the form of a resolution passed unanimously at a special meeting of the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

During the trial last week the judge is said to have become impatient at the inability of some witnesses to speak English and to have declared if he had his way no one who could not speak English would be given a vote. He is also said to have intimated to one witness that a night in jail might improve his knowledge of English.

Joseph E. Chevrier, prominent business man and former mayor of Cornwall is one of the leaders of the attack on the judge's stand. He said a competent interpreter was present in the court and if that was not enough for a judge there should be a requirement that all judges be able to speak the two official languages. A judge who would deny French Canadians their rights as citizens, he said, could not command the utmost confidence in his impartiality.

French and English speaking citizens live in amity along the shores of the St. Lawrence, said Mrs. T. E. Lussier, local president of the Federation of French Canadian women. It ill became a high public servant to come into a community and disrupt accord among all classes of citizens.

CATHOLIC MEN PROFESS FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST

Holy Name Rally is One of Largest Ever Held in Diocese.

DE LA SALLE BAND.

Rev. E. M. Meacy Preaches Sermon in Church of Sacred Heart.

A long double file of Catholic laymen of the city and district, comprising the northern section of the diocese of Peterborough, marched down George Street Sunday afternoon publicly professing as members of the Holy Name Society their faith in the divinity of Jesus Christ.

At the church of the Sacred Heart the large assembly of men overflowing to the basement and out to the lawn where broadcasting equipment enabled them to assist in the religious devotions, renewed their pledges of loyalty in the service of God, the Church and their country.

Kneeling and with right hands raised, the members repeated their avowal of fealty as slowly recited from the pulpit by Rev. V. J. McAuley, parish priest of Ennismore and diocesan director of the Holy Name Society. It was the solemn climax of the annual rally of district branches of the society. His Excellency Bishop Dennis O'Connor occupied a red dais in the sanctuary, where many of the members of the diocesan clergy knelt. A surpliced boys' choir had seats outside the chancel railing, and the first eight rows were reserved for officers and cadets of De La Salle College, part of whose bugle and drum band had come from Toronto for the occasion.

Color was merely incidental and fortuitous, and also unobtrusively attractive,—prelatial red and pastoral white and black, blue uniforms of the Cadets with their capes of dull gold lining, and yellow chrysanthemums and green foliage on the alter.

The even ranks of men in the church pews, with the others in the basement and on the lawn reaffirmed their belief in Jesus Christ and the teachings of the Catholic Church, promised to give good example by regular practice of their faith, and, continuing in unison, declared: "In honor of His

Bushworkers Demand Higher Wages and Shorter Hours.

IN SAULT AREA.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct 15 (CP)—Pulp-cutting operations in 17 camps of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company on the Algoma Central Railway line north of here to-day were virtually at a standstill as half the 1,000 workmen employed were on strike for higher wages, shorter hours, and the right to form camp grievance committees.

Quiet reigned in the ranks of the strikers, and meetings they held stressed the need of conducting an orderly walkout. On the shoulders of one lone provincial constable, George Taylor rested the task of combating any disorder arising.

In the Sault, efforts to bring about a strike among the 800 employees in the Abitibi Company's paper plant failed yesterday. A meeting of the Papermakers' Union passed resolutions declaring bushworkers now on strike were not affiliated with the union or with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and therefore it would be contrary to the by-laws of the union to support them.

The strikers are concentrated in the city, at Hawk Junction, 150 miles north of here, and along the railway right-of-way as far as Franz.

BOY IS BURNED STARTING FIRE WITH COAL OIL

BODY BLACKENED.

WINCHESTER, Ont., Oct. 15. — (CP)—Burned from head to foot when a can of coal oil exploded in his arms yesterday eight-year-old Lorne Cassidy died today.

While his parents were out in the yard on Sunday, the youngster attempted to start a fire in the kitchen stove and to make it burn quickly poured the coal oil on the wood. Hot coals in the bottom of the stove ignited the liquid, and caused the can of oil to explode in the lad's arms. Enveloped in flames he dashed to the yard tearing at his clothes. His father hearing his cries tore the burning clothes from the child's body.

Most of his body was blackened from burns as the coal oil had soaked into his clothes.

His condition was so critical that it was impossible to have him removed to hospital, it was stated.

PORT ERIE, Oct. 15 (CP)—Mrs. Susan Campbell is owner of an old painting resurrected from an attic here with other keepsakes. A well-known Buffalo authority is seeking to trace the origin of "J. Wallace," whose signature appears at the bottom, together with the date 1356.

The painting, in its old hand-carved frame upon further examination bears evidences of being a portrayal of styles of the Fourteenth Centry, when the Black Prince was the Sir Galahad of the times. A yeoman appearing in it is dressed in blue breeches and red jacket, with a sweeping flat-brimmed high crowned hat, as he drives kine to a typical English brook.

Coal Miners On Strike In Pit 1,000 Feet Underground Are Determined To Die

PECS, Hungary, Oct. 15.—(AP)—Convinced there was "no more hope for them" a member of the Hungarian parliament emerged today from the black pit where for 108 hours 1,200 miners have been self-entombed, striking for more pay.

"I expected a terrible catastrophe in coal mines any moment," said Janos Esterguiyos, Democratic Socialist, parliamentarian, who, descended into the mine in an attempt to mediate with the infuriated men.

"What I saw down there will be the most terrible remembrance of my life," he said. "The miners have become absolutely insane from their awful experience.

"They are determined either to commit suicide by wrecking the pumps, or to blow up the mine. There is no more hope for them."

The more violent of the hunger-crazed men have been tied to posts by their comrades to prevent them from killing themselves, said Esterg Lyos.

"The trade union no longer has any control over the men. Utterly exhausted, they are huddled down there in the heat, lying on the dirty, water-soaked bed of the mine with huge chunks of coal for pillows.

Some are unconscious. Nearly five days without water to drink has parched their throats, and they could not eat if they had food. In their agony and thirst and hunger some of them utter sounds like tormented animals."

Foley and Three Others Were to Have Sought Change of Venue.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 15.—(CP)—Mr. Justice J. C. Makins today sentenced Vincent Foley, London lawyer, to four years in Kingston penitentiary on two charges of conversion involving $10,315. Foley pleaded guilty.

Foley's plea of guilty to charges that he converted to his own use $9,315, as alleged by Miss Bernadette Young, and $1,000 as alleged by "Mr. F" came as a surprise during a hearing in which he and three others were to have sought change of venue on charge of conversion and extortion.

Foley was sentenced to four years on each charge. Sentences will run concurrently.

Mrs. Mae Turnbull pleaded guilty to a charge of conversion of $10,000, the property of "Mr. A." The plea was accepted and sentence will be imposed.

Frank Taylor, Sr., pleaded guilty to theft of $1,000 by conversion from "Mr. A." Sentence was deferred.

Crown Attorney Norman Newton announced in court all further charges against Foley, Mrs. Mae Turnbul and Frank Taylor, Sr., except the charges being heard today would be traversed until the next court.

Rose Taylor and Frank Taylor, Jr., and Mrs. Turnbull then went to trial charged with extortion of $200 from "Mr. D."

Sir Guy Standing Made Own Fortune by Selling Left Over War Equipment.

TOOK UP ACTING.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 15. (AP)—If it had not been for the Great War, Sir Guy Standing might not have been able to take up acting as a hobby.

He is well nown for the excellence of his paintings and his adventures in the British Navy, for which he was knighted by the King. But he said to-day that when the King's sword descended on his shoulders, he had but $40 in his pocket.

Sir Guy, after the war, observed miles of United States tanks, tractors, automobiles and other equipment lined along the Rhine. He formed the Motor Organization, Ltd., set out to buy this equipment and sell it to Europe, which was trying to rehabilitate itself.

When the transaction was completed Sir Guy discovered Britain had a like amount of left-over war material it would have to get rid of. Such competition would ruin his company, so he managed to buy this equilment as well. It took nine years for the company to sell and clear its books, but the result was a large personal fortune for him.

"A fortune,' he explained, which permitted me to make acting my favorite hobby.

"But you can be sure of one thing: I'm through with big business. It leaves too many gray hairs."

Radio Photo Shows Action In Spanish Revolution

Rushed from revolution-torn Madrid by aeroplane to London, and then radioed to Canada, this exclusive photo shows one of the numerous street fights as revolutionists made a vain attempt to seize the capital. They were crushed by the federal army and the police. More than 1,000 persons have been reported slain and thousands more wounded. A dictatorship looms, with all opposing political leaders arrested or otherwise disposed of and all opposition-ists classed as rebels.

Canadian Cowpunchers Sure Can Ride Carry Off Honors In Bare-Back Classes

NEW YORK Oct. 15 (CP).—Canada's cowpunchers would seem to have knee action de luxe.

Take yesterday's program at the Madison Square Garden for instance. The boys from the Dominion's rolling prairies didn't do so well when encumbered by a saddle in their attempts to "bust" woolly broncoes. But once saddles were stripped off and there was a chance to dig knees between the ribs of the kicking, snorting, bad-tempered horses, there wasn't anything to stand up against the riding of a couple of Alberta bombres.

At the afternoon show, Herman Linden of Cardston dug his knees into the sides of a craw-fishing bay called Old Man of the Mountain, and he stuck there as though he were glued. He won that chapter of the bareback contest without so much as losing his sombrero.

In the same class at the evening performance, George McIntosh, out of Calgary, won just as easily as giving away a hundred dollars. Hell's Angel, the pesky bucker between George's vice-like legs, flew around the ring as though she'd suddenly sprouted wings, diving this way and that way without any notice whatever. But the Albertan stayed aboard, yelling "Hi yipee" as carefree as if he were sitting on a chesterfield with his best girl.

Another pretty show of range-skill came in the calf-roping contest. A Texan named Allan Holder sent his horse charging down the tanbark after a spindle-legged calf that bellowed and bellowed, as though to say "mamma, I'm in trouble." Still going at full tilt, Allan tossed a necktie onto the fleeing bundle of choice steaks and had the little fellow completely tied and bewildered in 20 and 3-5 seconds.

1,200 MINERS WANT COFFINS

Been Under Ground 90 Hours Without Food, Water or Light.

MEN ON STRIKE.

PECS, Hungary, Oct. 15. (AP).—Twelve hundred coal miners in voluntary confinement, 1,000 feet underground sent up a request for 345 coffins to-day, after being without food, water or light more than 90 hours.

This was taken by excited villagers to mean that many of the determined strikers had died. Government authorities, although sceptical were unable to enter the mine because of menacing guards with pickaxes.

Threatens to Blow Up Mine

Five trade unionists delegates who were seized as hostages after going below yesterday to negotiate for the government were released when authorities threatened to blow up the mines.

Control of the necessary power for air and water pumps is in the government's hands, making it impossible for the strikers to carry out a threat of cutting these supplies off and suffocating or drowning.

The miners are paid about $2.00 weekly and are demanding an increase to $3.50. The mines have been able to give them only part time employment. Operators refuse to negotiate unless the strikers come outside.

Forty-four of the strikers were brought to the surface last night. Some were raving mad, several at the point of death and others unconscious. Many of those below were reported to be dying.

Tiny Mongrel Dog Saves Burning Home

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 15. (CP).—A tiny mongrel dog, who walked with a limp, was somewhat of a hero in the household of Dan O'Mara to-day. While the occupants were absent yesterday, fire broke out in an upstairs bedroom. The racket made by the pup attracted neighbors, who discovered the flames and sounded an alarm. The outbreak was extinguished with slight damage resulting.

CHINA PLACES TAX ON SILVER LEAVING NATION

China Gives Its Answer to Silver Policy of United States.

PROTECT CURRENCY.

Drain of Silver to U. S. Has Lowered Chinese Purchasing Power.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 15 (AP)—China gave its answer to-day to the United States silver policy—a 10 per cent tax on all exports of the metal.

The Nationalist Government, after weeks of deliberation on the situation, put the tax into effect to-day, deeming unsatisfactory the replay of the United States to negotiations for "co-operation."

Lowered Purchasing Power

The drain of silver from China, due to increased prices, has lowered Chinese purchasing power, and alarmed Government and financial circles. China's currency is based on silver.

Provisions of the export tax are flexible, and the government is expected to change it whenever necessary to hold exports within limits required by balance of payments.

Some $30,000,000 of silver in Chinese money scheduled for departure this week for London and America will be subject to the tax, expected to halt a major share of future shipments.

A statement by the Nationalist Government said the step was taken "in view of the undue rise in silver, out of relation to the level of general commodity prices" and "in order to safeguard China's economic interests and protect its currency."

Stands By Its Policy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 (AP) — The United States, promising consideration to the Chinese Government, nevertheless stood firmly by its silver policy today as a tax wall arose around China's supply of the white metal.

Picton, October 15. — At Saturday's meeting of the Picton Cheese Board 27 boxes white and 38 boxes colored were boarded. All sold at 8⅝ cents. Buyers: Cook, Hart, and Murphy.

Belleville, October 15. — At Saturday's meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board 1,361 boxes white and no colored boarded. All sold at 8⅝ cents. Buyers: Ostrom, Cook, and McCreary.

Lansdowne, October 15. — At Saturday's meeting of the Lansdowne Cheese Board 369 boxes of colored cheese boarded. All sold at 8⅛ cents. Buyers present: Dool, Beckett, Osmond, Taylor, Wright.

Napanee, Octobre 15. — At Saturday's meeting of the Napanee Cheese Board 163 boxes of colored and 466 boxes of white boarded. Eight and three-quarter cents bid. No sales. Usual buyers present.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in a note to the Nanking Government, said that the policy under which the United States is buying silver in world markes was laid down by Congress and cannot be changed, in its broad objective, by the executive.

Although he said that "So far as may be possible," the United States will avoid "disturbances to the economy and public finances" of China, that nation put into effect a tax of 10 per cent on silver exports.

This was designed to keep the Chinese supply of the white metal intact. The Oriental Government —which is on a silver standard— had protested that American buying threatened to spoil her reserves, besides damaging Chinese business by causing a "harsh deflation."

SOCIETY MATRON STILL IN HANDS OF KIDNAPPERS

Fifth Day is Thought Will See Release of Alice Speed Stoll.

NO RADIO APPEAL SUNDAY.

Fear Expressed That Kidnapper Would Kill Young Woman.

BY DILLARD STORES

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 15.—(A. P.)—The fifth day, the most portentous for Alice Speed Stoll since she was kidnapped, brought the belief today that the family has established contact with the abductor.

Those in a position to know agreed that the fifth day played an important part in the $50,000 ransom note. Fears have been expressed that the kidnapper intended to kill the young society matron if at that time he had not received the ransom and made his way to safety.

With the case at this critical stage, it was pointed out significantly that Sunday was the first day since the kidnapping last Wednesday to pass without an appeal by radio to the kidnapper. The ransom money has been dispatched to Nashville, apparently to be called for there or forwarded elsewhere.

Safety of Victim First

With all available law forces massed in a hunt for the wealthy young victim, the primary consideration was still for her safety — coming before making an arrest or even establishing a case.

Most promising of the clues run down by the officers today seemed to be that suggested by the the reported sighting of a woman who looked like Mrs. Stoll in Warren county, half way between Louisville and Nashville. It was in this direction that Stoll drove furiously last Friday.

Honeycombed With Caves

This section of Kentucky is honeycombed with caves. Beneath every hill and opening into every valley, they lie in hundreds. The region is wild and sparsely settled.

Some investigators agreed that Mrs. Stoll—if still alive, despite being ill with a cold when she was taken away in a negligee and a light coat—might be hidden in one of those little caverns.

Even natives of the region have been lost for days when injured or otherwise caught in the caves, even when friends had some general idea of where to search for them. In these several hundred square miles, the kidnappers could have found a place to conceal themselves for weeks.

The following item from the Toronto press will be of interest to Miss Katherine Wallis' friends here:

"At the Arts and Crafts Museum Women's Art Association, 23 Prince Arthur Avenue, the season of exhibitions opens this week-end with the hanging of two collections—water colors and sculpture by Katherine E. Wallis and etchings by Caroline Armington. Both these artists were born in Canada, have had definite recognition abroad, and make their headquarters in Paris.

"The most notable item in Miss Wallis' exhibition is the little, sculpture group "Japanese Sisters," an exceedingly characterful work. The artist exhibited the same subject carved in wood at last year's Paris salon. The water colors have been done in several parts of the world. Gallant design compels attention to one in which the sea is glimpsed through heavy trees on the Isle of Wight. Japan, India and Canada afforded other subjects. It is probable that a fine sculpture portrait in marble, of a young Canadian girl, will be shown by Miss Wallis at a large exhibition in Toronto this season.

"Mrs. Armington is known as a most competent etcher and this collection entirely upholds that reputation. The most charming pictures include one of the Pont Royal, Paris, with delicate, stimulating pattern in sky and water; an airy, tree-framed glimpse of a church at Honfleur; and the forceful architectural subject supplied by the Cour du'Dragon, Paris."

The boys were met at the station by a number of friends, including Alderman Daniel Holland of the Council personnel. They went to Mount St. Joseph, where Mass was solemnized by the Rev. J. J. A very successful bridge party was held on Saturday afternoon at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, in charge of the Ladies' section. The pleasant weather of the afternoon and the energetic efforts of the ladies in charge combined to make the affair a very enjoyable event. The attendance numbered nearly two hundred ladies, many coming in for the tea hour which followed an afternoon of bridge, when forty-two tables of cards were played. The handsome clubrooms were at their best for the occasion. From the glass-enclosed solarium, where cards were played, the guests enjoyed the lovely view on every side, and the commodious lounge was gay with ferns in reed baskets and a bouquet of salvia in a silver basket. These will be inserted either under the full name or the initials of the party sending them in as desired. We are asking not only the ladies of the City but of the District as well to supply us with the recipes required for this number.

Maybe you have some special recipe for a cake, pudding, bread, pies, cookies, ice cream, pickle or even you may have a special way of preparing meat or fowl. Wouldn't it be nice to pass it along and on the other hand you will be sure to find some new recipe in this edition which will appeal to you very much and which has been sent in by some other interested lady.

* * * * * * *

Wouldn't it be nice if every lady who reads this column would send in her favorite recipe, with either your name or just your initial. It isn't much to ask each one to do and think how proud you will be when our Cooking Edition comes off the press. Don't put it off, send one in today. We are counting on you to help us put this venture over.

Your Health

by DR LOGAN CLENDENING

It is curious and amusing to look at the history of some of our foods today.

The tomato was at first supposed to be poisonous. I can remember when the little wild tomatoes (about the size of a small plum) were pointed out to us children to avoid. If we ate one it would kill us. The truth is these little tomatoes are perfectly delicious. And tomatoes in general are among the most healthful of foods—the juice is as rich as orange juice in vitamin C.

So with ice cream. It was the American dish. The things that foreign doctors, especially English doctors, said about it would make your hair stand on end. It froze the stomach. Congealed the digestive juices. In a well known textbook on medicine, dyspepsia was referred to as the American disease, and the probability was suggested that our liking for ice cream, and especially soda water and ice cream soda, was the prime cause of our bad digestions.

But ice cream has made its way. To show how it is now regarded we may refer to an article by Professor W. H. E. Reid in a medical journal entitled "Ice Cream, America's Most Excellent Health Food".

Ice cream is quite a complete food. It contains the essential foods—protein, fat and carbohydrate—as well as vitamins and minerals.

The protein is in the best form of muscle building. There is sugar and butter fat for energy, and it contains all the food elements of milk, and hence can be classes as a protective food.

Ice cream is especially rich in lime. One-half pint of ice cream contains as much lime as one and a half pounds of bread, four pounds of meat, or three and a half pounds of potatoes. Children, of course, require high amounts of lime in order to produce bone and other tissues.

But best of all its qualities today is praised its digestibility—the very thing it was supposed to lack in the early part of its career.

Dr. McCollum, the well known nutritional expert of Johns Hopkins university, says:

"There are many mothers who testify that their children dislike milk as a beverage, and ask how it is possible for them to introduce a sufficient amount of dairy products into their diet. One of the answers to this question is ice cream. Almost without exception people of all ages like it."

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

T. B. B.: "We have two cases of undulant fever hereabouts. Can you tell something about it?"

Answer: Undulant fever occurs in milk giving animals, and is transmitted to man in the milk. The symptoms are vague except for the long continued fever which may go on for several months, even a year. There are relapses so that the patient may be free of fever for several weeks and then have it return. The treatment is similar to the treatment of typhoid fever—rest in bed, cold water baths, nourishing food to keep the strength up. Vaccines made from the causative germ have been used with success.

Reader: "What are the properties of Compound Mixture of Helonin?"

Answer: This is sometimes used for female complaints.

LINDSAY MAN IS BADLY HURT

J. Davidson May be Crippled For Life as Result of Fall From Hay Load.

WEEK-END ACCIDENTS.

LINDSAY, October 15 (Examiner Correspondence). — J. Davidson, of town, was the victim of a distressing accident over the week-end. He fell from a load of hay in the southern part of the town and sustained injuries of such a anture that he will be crippled for life, it is understood. The injury was to the hip, the top of it being completely shattered.

James Lehane, town, who is employed at the C.N.R. freight offices in Peterborough, suffered rather severe injuries here on Saturday. He was examining the interior of hood of an automobile while the engine was in action, when his hand was badly lacerated as it came in contact with the fan. It required several stitches to close the wounds.

William Gamble, jeweller, was the victim of a peculiar accident on Saturday at his store. While in the act of sneezing, his head came in contact with the door of the safe. He sustained a bad cut in his forehead and was unconscious for about twenty minutes.

When returning with his car from Minden on Saturday night, Ross Watson of Beaverton collided with a cow on the Portage Road, east of Bolsover. The animal was killed and the car was badly damaged.

The sudde ndeath is announced at Penelon Falls of Miss Ida Udy, a lifelong resident of the village. The deceased is survived by a brother, William of Penelon Falls, and a nephew, Harry Stewart of Peterborough.

Mrs. Olive Drew, of Cannington, is in the Ross Hospital, Lindsay, suffering from serious injuries sustained at the home of her sister, Mrs. D. McLean. She fell through an open trap door while preparing lunch, breaking her leg in three places.

Colitis Upsets Your Stomach

Thousands of sufferers think they have indigestion, when Colitis is the real cause of an upset stomach. Colitis is the medical name for functional irritation of the intestines and colon, due to Acidity, and causes dull pains in the sides, heavy feeling in abdomen, headache, gas, heartburn, bloating, dizziness bad breath, coated tongue, lack of pep, and sleepless nights. A doctor's prescription, known as Dr. Nixon's Kolade Powders, possesses the necessary triple action of relaxing sore, contracted muscles in the bowels, soothing and protecting irritated mucous membranes and combating acidity, thus giving quick results. It is not a laxative but acts to help nature. Dr. Nixon's Kolade is so successful that we offer it under the fair-play agreement to fix you up to your satisfaction or return empty package and get your money back. At all drug stores.

APPETIZING tastiness is far from being the whole story of the food value of "Crossed Fish" Sardines. . . . They are notably rich in three essential minerals—Iron, Calcium and Phosphorus. . . . Everyone needs these nourishing elements—most of all do growing children. . . . Serve Sardines often. . . . But always specify "Crossed Fish" brand — selected Norwegian brislings with that unequalled "Crossed Fish FLAVOR". . . . When the cost is so small, why not be sure of QUALITY? PEASANTS WEEP AS TRAIN PASSES

TOUCHING SCENES.

By CHARLES H. MEISTER.

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, Oct. 15. — (A.P.)—Yugoslav subjects wept today before the coffin of the King many of them had opposed, as the train bearing the body of Alexander made its way through long lines of weeping peasants yesterday from Split, where it had been brought from Marseille by the destroyer Debrovnik.

Because of the thousands of requests for an opporunity to pay last respects to Alexander, it was decided to have the train halt at various towns between Zagreb and Belgrade and it will not arrive in the capital until to-night.

Belgrade is already thronged with foreign princes and notables who will attend the funeral.

Touching Scenes.

One of the most touching scenes when Alexander's body arrived at Split was the dramatic appearance beside the coffin of Father Antone Koroshetz, a Serbian-Greek priest and leader of the Slovanian clerical party who has spent eight years in exile on Alexander's orders.

The leader was allowed by his guards to hire a small boat on the lonely island where he is kept and come to Split to "say a prayer and drop a tear" on the coffin of his former foe.

For several minutes Koroshet knelt sobbing beside the bier and then said, "This is a moment when the whole nation is weeping over our lamented sovereign. We must forget the past. We must work and live for Yugoslavia."

The King's body will lie in state for two days before the funeral, which will be attended by President LeBrun of France and the Duke of Kent, fourth son of King George of England, among others.

GAVE RECITAL IN CHICAGO.

GUELPH.—Robert J. Donnell, Jr., Guelph carilloneur, who goes to Ottawa at the end of the month to play Canada's victory carillon at the Parliament Buildings for a year, has returned from Chicago, where he played the 73-bell carillon at the University of Chicago. He went to Chicago only as a visitor, but when officials learned his identity they requested him to give a recital.

MOTHER! don't experiment with your Child's Cold

Rub on VICKS VAPORUB
the proved way of relieving colds

The minute you apply Vicks VapoRub over throat and chest it goes right to work to fight a cold — two ways at once — by Stimulation and Inhalation. Through the skin, it acts like a poultice, "drawing out" tightness and soreness. At the same time, its medicated vapors are inhaled direct to irritated air-passages. All night long, it works to help Nature "throw off" the cold.

Ideal for Children's Colds

Being externally applied, VapoRub avoids the risks of those digestive upsets that so often come from constant dosing. It can be used freely, and as often as needed, even on the youngest child. And it's just as good for adults.

GOOD NEWS FROM OTTAWA.

The latest statement issued by the Department of National Revenue should make cheerful reading for Canadians, for it indicates a marked improvement both in trade conditions and in national revenue.

September has recorded substantial gains both in exports and imports over the same month last year, while the totals for the first six months of this fiscal were substantially ahead of the figure for the first half of last year.

Custom and excise receipts, for example, totalled $22,206,597 for the first six months of this year, as against $18,606,000 last year, and the Department of National Revenue has collected $20,000,000 more in the first half of the current fiscal year than in the same period a year ago.

This substantial betterment in the financial condition of the country, coupled with the saving of five million dollars in interest charges as a result of the successful Refunding Loan, relieves the Government of a great deal of the worry that financial problems have caused in earlier years of its reign, and if the improvement continues, as there is every reason to hope, the next Budget should contain some good news for harassed taxpayers.

NO RESTAURANT LICENSES.

If there are any restaurant proprietors in Ontario who have been nursing the thought that when new beer "authorities" are issued at the end of this month the privilege of sale will be extended to restaurants, they might as well give up the hope.

In a statement Saturday, Premier Hepburn declared emphatically that there was no likelihood of restaurants obtaining licenses to operate beverage rooms.

Mr. Hepburn is to be congratulated upon the decision and upon announcing it so clearly that there will be no misunderstanding.

The public as a whole was against the sale of beer in restaurants before sale in beverage rooms began, but since watching that system in operation for some months public opinion is decidedly more hostile to the idea of restaurant beverage rooms than it was when such sale was first mooted, and it would have been a major error on the part of the Government to attempt to force upon the people of Ontario something to which they are almost unanimously opposed.

The Premier has made it clear that his Government has no such intention, and that there is no chance of restaurant licenses being granted; an announcement that has been received with general satisfaction.

If, in addition to refusing restaurant authorities, the Ontario Government will now proceed to weed out the mushroom hotels that managed to get licenses, confine the sale of beer to properly equipped and conducted standard hotels, insist upon strict adherence to the law, shorten the hours of sale, and promptly cancel the licenses of hotelmen who sell to minors, the new system will have a chance to survive; it cannot hope to do so under existing conditions.

A SUCCESSFUL LOAN.

The success of Canada's 1934 Refunding Loan which has been oversubscribed by $33,000,000, requiring the scaling down of the larger cash subscriptions, should be gratifying to every Canadian, and for a number of reasons.

In the first place the fact that some two hundred and eighty-three million dollars was subscribed furnishes substantial proof that the people of this country have an abiding faith in the future of Canada, and that they are prepared to demonstrate that faith by investing their money.

Secondly, the successful completion of this loan, hailed by the Minister of Finance as a fitting termination to the series of refunding issues which have been made at lower interest rates since 1931, means a saving in interest charges each year of five million dollars, and added to the interest saved by previous refundings, makes possible a fifteen million dollar reduction each year of the interest burden of the Dominion.

The success of this campaign means much to the whole country, and it is a matter for satisfaction, not only to the Government, but to every citizen, that Canadians have patriotically responded to the appeal and so effectively that the quarter of a billion dollar issue has been substantially oversubscribed.

In view of the fact that the limit has been passed by $33,000,000, some of those who made cash subscriptions will find their allotment reduced; citizens who held Victory bonds and have converted them will, on the other hand, receive the full amount.

SHATTERING A BEAUTIFUL DREAM.

The first thought of most Ontario citizens after reading Commissioner Racine's report of his investigation into the operation of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway undoubtedly was that the contrast between the conditions he reported and the picture the public had had for many years of this Government-owned system was great enough to be startling.

The people of Ontario had long been led to believe that in the T. and N. O. the province possessed an admirably conducted transportation system, one of the few railways in America in recent years to show a profit.

There were glowing announcements each year of a surplus, and the impression was general that the T. and N. O. Railway was one institution that was managed in an economical and businesslike way.

Now we find from Commissioner Racine that all this was a beautiful dream, that the road has been badly managed, that instead of surpluses there have been deficits, that the commissioners were lax, that there has been gross extravagance, that contracts have been let without tenders, and that the Moosonee end of the system should never have been constructed.

The Commissioner recommends the dismissal of the heads of the system, and suggest changes that will mean a saving of over $500,000 a year in the operation of the road.

His report is a striking indictment of a Government institution about which the public has been grossly deceived; and the picture now presented will make many electors wonder what the Legislature, and particularly the opposition members, have been doing all these years that no trace of the real situation has been allowed to develop.

VALUE OF TRAINING.

Italy, under Mussolini, is strong on training. Organization is one of the dictator's strong forts, and he realizes that thorough training is necessary if the best results are to be obtained.

Recently it was announced that Mussolini fears a war, and on this account he is arranging to train even the children in the art of warfare. He believes in being prepared and insuring efficiency should his country ever go to war.

We cannot agree with his plans for instilling the war spirit in the minds of the youth of Italy—the love of war, as he calls it—but there is at least one of his most recent proposals, along the line of special training, which might well be adopted with profit by other countries as well.

Mussolini is determined to remove the danger of selecting unskilled men for public posts. The plan consists in training selected groups of the nation's youth for party and governmental posts of responsibility, and it is designed ultimately to replace other methods of selection.

Any youth between the ages of 23 and 28 will be eligible to enter the classes, but they must meet rigid requirements as to intelligence, character and physical fitness. A candidate's station in life will not be taken into consideration.

The courses will run one year, after which youths succeeding in passing most severe examinations will be given a year of training in actual work. They will be attached as cadets to the managing offices of the principal governmental party, industrial, agricultural and commercial institutions. They will be expected to understudy managers and minor officials so as to be able to become qualified to fill responsible posts if necessary.

The idea has much to commend it. Undoubtedly if the same system were followed here, there would be more efficiency in public officials. Too often when governmental positions become vacant here political service is one of the strongest requirements in the appointment of a successor. Often, too, when new governments come into power they deliberately dismiss officials of the wrong political stripe, and appoint to their places friends of their own political party. It is a hit-and-miss system surely, and certainly efficiency of government would be more assured if young men and young women were given special training which would enable them to carry out the duties they may be called upon to perform in the public service. —Chatham Daily News.

THEORY AND PRACTICE CONFLICT.

In at least one instance Premier Hepburn has discovered that actual practice often shatters political theory.

Ever since he first went into Parliament, and before that, Mr. Hepburn has consistently urged lower tariffs. He has blamed most of the ills Canada has suffered upon tariffs which shut out goods and prevented what he called the "freer exchange of commodities."

A few days ago Canada, through Premier Bennett, concluded a trade treaty with France, designed to permit the very thing Hon. M. F. Hepburn has been campaigning for—the freer exchange of commodities. France is to buy more Canadian wheat, and Canada is to lower the tariffs on French wines.

But the Premier, faced with the fear that the new trade treaty may injure the grape industry of Ontario, announces that if the sale of French wines cuts into the home market, the Ontario Government will refuse to handle the sale of the imported article through the Ontario Liquor Commission. Thus, if the Government bans French wines they cannot be bought in this province at all.

This may not, in the view of some, be a move in favor of a protectionist tariff, but the Government of Ontario, holding as it does a monopoly on the control of the liquor market, can dictate just what can and can not be imported into Ontario in the way of wines. Is it not possible that such an attitude on the part of Ontario may affect the whole treaty between France and Canada?

It is a ticklish point in which Mr. Hepburn finds himself—loyalty to the Ontario grape growers on the one hand and his advocacy of freer trade on the other. There is a way to solve every problem and it is to be hoped, for the sake of the new Canada-French treaty and the Ontario grape growers, that this particular one can be solved satisfactorily.

But one must remember this: There are thousands of Canadians who want French or equally good foreign wines. Canadian wines do not appeal to them. It will be many years—if ever—before wines are made on this continent equal to the products of France or the other Latin countries of Europe.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Ontario's system of bookkeeping is to be revamped, and few people would venture to say that the reform is not necessary.

Four persons are dead at Sarnia because a motor car driver drove into the side of a freight train backing over a crossing. It is difficult to account for accidents of that nature.

When the newspapers start publishing weather notes from Doucet and White River, it is about time to get out the red flannels.

St. Thomas is asking the Ontario Government to approve of a $11,000 program of improvement to the city's athletic grounds as a relief project. If the Railway City is successful other municipalities may follow its example.

The mining section issued by The Examiner on Saturday gave some insight into the growth of this industry and the contribution it is making to the national wealth.

What's in The NAME of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

KAMSACK, SASKATCHEWAN.

This town is named for an Indian named Kamsack, who lived on the Cote Indian reserve, on which the town is situated. He was an important figure in the early colonization.

At one time the Canadian Pacific Railway was supposed to follow a survey through this district, but the plans were changed and it ran across the southern part of the plains. Many settlers moved south to where the C.P.R. ultimately was built. Kamsack remained behind, but he was very kind to the settlers, giving them invaluable assistance in their moving.

The name Kamsack means large, and was given to the Indian of that name as a joke, he being an undersized individual.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

WE ARE ALL 'PSYCHICS'

I sat in the same room with a "psychic", a man who was said to be able to read into his fellows' minds and know what they are thinking.

I sat there critically, half believing, and wondering if he knew what I was thinking.

Suddenly he turned to me and said that whenever he looked at me he saw the letters M-A-Y written across me, and was somebody in my family born in that month . . . I thought quickly. My brother was born in November, my mother in December, my sisters and my daughters in the autumn, my wife in June, myself in January. No, he was mistaken. None of my family had been born in May. But he insisted that he couldn't be wrong, and then I remember that, of course, the youngest member of my family, the baby, had been born in May. He was right, after all.

But how was he able to be right? How is it possible for any man to look at me or at you and see three letters across his forehead and say they mean a birth in that month? . . . Don't ask me to explain, but if you should ask me if I believe this sort of thing is possible I'd reply that I do . . . We are not as far apart as we sometimes believe. There are powers within us which we do not control or control but vaguely . . . This man merely has that power, under control, more effectively than the rest of us.

But all of us read each other's minds occasionally. We are all subject to the moods and emotions of those we know. We are all to some extent "psychic".

But would you like to read others' minds and have other individuals read yours? I asked this man if it wasn't a painful experience living that power and he said it was not. He found nothing in the other man's mind to terrify or disgust. He found loneliness and pain and longing, but his power brought him closer to men and women and enriched his life and he believed that some day the power that is in all of us would be more greatly developed than now and we would posses his remarkable gift . . . And in that time we would all be "psychics", and any man who lacked that power would be looked upon as an incompletely developed human being.

A Thought

GOOD TASTE

Good taste is essentially a moral quality. Taste is not only a part of an index of morality—it is the only morality. The first, last, and closest trial question to any living creature is, "What do you like?"—and the entire object of true education is to make people not merely do right things, but enjoy the right things. What we like determines what we are, and is the sign of what we are; and to teach taste is enevitably to form character.—Ruskin.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

UPPER CANADA'S FIRST LEGISLATION.

On this date in 1792, the first session of the first legislature of Upper Canada was closed by Governor Simcoe after sitting from September 17. Its work had been well done. It is important since that upon the legislation then enacted stands the very framework of our liberties as citizens of Ontario (and, by transmission later, of the western provinces) Janet Carnochan, the historian of Niagara, summed up the work of that first session in brief space:

"The first act placed on the statute book by the new parliament was one that established English law as the rule to govern all decisions relating to property and civil rights.

The second act established trial by jury in all cases of fact and added to the legislation already existing under the Quebec Act of 1763.

The third act established the Winchester measure as a standard for weights and measures in the province.

The 4th and 5th acts provided for the recovery of debts and the erection of jails and court-houses by the provinces.

The second session is historically important because then the Legislature of Upper Canada passed the first anti-slavery legislation in the world, years before British abolished the traffic in human beings.

Five session of the parliament were held in Newark and the free British constitution and common law were firmly established by which Upper Canada was made the mistress of her own destinies and a member of the chain of provinces that later was welded into the Dominion of Canada."

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

WINNIPEG WHEAT.

WINNIPEG, October 15. — Swept by liberal selling, wheat futures prices dipped lower in the short Saturday session of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The close was ⅝c to ¾c under the previous finish, October to 79¾c, December 80c to 80¼c, and May 84¾c.

Export sales of Canadian wheat of 250,000 bushels, failed to stem the decline and little encouragement was given by the action of outside markets. Liverpool sustained declines of ¾d, and sharp setbacks were marked up at Chicago.

Most of the offerings were hedges against country deliveries of new-crop wheat, receipts for Friday totalling 2,823,000 bushels. Trading generally, however, was quiet, and most traders were reluctant to make commitments over the week end.

A bearish tinge was noted in the outside news on Saturday. The new Australian wheat crop was estimated at 124,000,000 bushels compared to previous estimates of 112,000,000 bushels.

Coarse grains futures were firm in routine operations, while cash grains continued steady.

PUBLIC SCHOOL CLOSED FOR INFANTILE PARALYSIS

MEAFORD, Ont., October 15 (C. P.). — Meaford Public School was ordered closed here to-day by Dr. F. L. Eberhart, medical officer of health. During the past few weeks several cases of infantile paralysis have broken out in the town among small children. The doctors of the town had the disease pretty well checked, but over the week-end one or two more cases were reported, and it was thought advisable to have the school closed for a week at least as a precaution.

Self-Defense

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 15.—John (Fuzzie) Johnson, colored, was called before court on a charge of having killed a chicken.

He told the judge he was sitting in a field when the chicken kept annoying him and he had to kill it in self-defence.

"Fifteen days," said the judge.

EASY MILLING FOR BIRRELL

Advice From Department of Mines is That Birrell Ore Requires a Simple Process.

SPLENDID REPORTS.

There's an outfit up in Quebec that has been quietly plugging along with development work and not saying much about itself, but according to officials of the company, things are looking pretty bright, right now. We're talking about Birrell Gold Mines, as a matter of fact, who own a group of 12 claims about five miles north of Noranda. They've proven up by surface work and diamond drilling a mineralized zone reported to be 1,600 feet long and from 10 to 25 feet wide, with channel tests over five-foot widths running from $3.80 to $11.40. In addition to this section, they've stripped a quartz vein lying against a mud-seam whoh contacts the main body, and bulk sampling has produced an average of .74 ounces gold across widths from a foot to 3½ feet.—From the Toronto Star's "Don't Quote Me" column.

It is now conceded that Birrell Gold Mines has all the earmarks of a large-tonnage gold producer. Permanent mine camps are now under construction, and the sinking of a two-compartmet shaft by hand-steel is proceeding, pending the completion of mine buildings for a larger crew and Diesel power equipment. Advice from the Department of Mines, Ottawa, on the milling-test of Birrell ore shows that a simple milling process is efficient and that a recovery of 94.3 per cent. of gold is available through cyanidation.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO MINING.

TORONTO, Oct. 15 (C.P.). — Heavy afternoon buying gave the mining section of the Toronto Exchange its best Monday business in some weeks. The silver shares assumed the leadership, moving up on heavy volume, stimulated mainly by the advance in the price of bar silver. Several of the secondary gold issues were carried upward on active accumulation, God's Lake holding the leadership with an advance of more than 20 cents.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS.

TORONTO, Oct. 15 (C.P.).—The Industrial Share Board of the Toronto Exchange was well sprinkled with recessions to-day while the turnover was much under the recent average. Oil shares held up to fair volume and the turnover was considerable also in C.P.R., Ford A, Brazilian and International Nickel. Construction, bank and food stocks closed higher and other groups recorded a preponderance of losses.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, October 15 (C.P.). — Dullness prevailed on the stock market to-day. Price movements displayed marked indecision. Some of the metal and motor shares pointed a little higher, but oils and alhohols were astir.

The late tone was irregular. Auburn and U.S. Smelting got up more than a point each. U.S. Steel, General Motors and American Tylephone were steady, but Continental Oil, Standard Oil of New Jersey and American Commercial Alcohol dipped. Transfers approximated 500,000 shares.

NEW YORK Oct. 15. —Over the past two months the market has been making a bullish pattern and into that pattern there have been woven a number of preliminary bullish signals. Last week the market gave a reliable "Go" signal. The advance that is now under way will of course not be a straight line move. The elements of time and sequence are favorable to a broad advance which should continue over three or four months and it goes without saying that selected industrials will give the best performance. Whether the rails will make a new high above the 1934 tops of 56.53 depends largely upon the 'something' that is to be done for them. Given a fair increase in freight rates rail earnings should increase and speculation in rail shares might become enthusiastic.

The haste with which the administration disowned last week's stories of impending further dollar devaluation lends a good deal of strength to the feeling that business is to be given at least some kind of reassurance which has been regarded as necessary prelude to spontaneous recovery. Although an abortive inflation rally in stocks has been checked the intermediate outlook has been materially improved by strengthening of the business foundation. An interpretation of the advance on Saturday loses some in its significance because of holiday influence and further gains would not be surprising. Such action would present favorable opportunities for the extension of intermediate holdings.

SEARCH EUROPE FOR ASSASSINS

agent, was already wanted in connection with a bomb explosion in a Belgrade police station last April, French authorities were told.

Girl Vanishes

The "gun girl," Marie Vjoudroch, like the others, has vanished. The surete feared that she, Kvaternik and Malny had managed to cross the frontier afoot, aided by compasses with which members of the band were supplied.

Search for the trio was concentrated in the region of Lausaane and Geneva, Switzerland, where they were suspected of hiding in homes of sympathizers. If they still remained in France, police thought it likely they had found refuge in Paris.

Kvaternik was called the chief of the "assassination squad" by Yugoslav authorities who described him as a 24-year-old law student born at Zagreb, whose first name was Eugene. He was called "the delegate." Speaking several languages, including French, he was believed by police to have maintained a liaison among the other four, giving them orders, money and arms.

Malney Arrested

MELUN, France, Oct. 15—(C. P.-Havas)—Sylvester Malny, one of the Terrorists, suspected of the assassination of King Alexander and Foreign Minister Barthou was arrested today.

Malny was trapped in a wood near the small village of La Rochette. He was seen purchasing cigarettes and consuming a glass of brandy.

Gendarmes and mobile guards were notified as he fled into a desolate wood nearby.

Malny was cornered once before at Fontainebleau when he escaped his captors by scaling a high fence and disappearing into Fontainbleau forest. As he fled he dropped a cartridge magazine of the same German make as that found on the assassin in Marseilles.

Police previously had traced him to Aix-en province and Avignon.

COAL MINERS

who threatened mass suicide in a black mine put 1,000 feet underground caused fears for the worst this afternoon.

This, together with a request for 345 coffins, was the last that had been heard from them. That was early this morning.

At 2 p.m. Government officials wished to send troops to the bottom of the pit to force the strikers to the surface at the point of bayonet and gun, and put an end to their threats of self-elimination unless wage demands of $3.50 a week are met.

But the fact that the mine elevator holds only 16 ment, thus far had prevented the Government from taking any steps, since authorities feared the famished and enraged miners might attempt to butcher the soldiers with pickaxes.

Terrible scenes were reported from the dark subterranean chasm where hunger striking miners now have endured 96 hours of steady self-confinement because mine owners refused to give them more than two days' employment weekly and to pay more than $3.

The Government hesitated to force the company owning the mine to meet the miners' demands, fearing it might lead to complications with foreign government. It would also lead, authorities feared, to similar strikes for wage increases among Hungarian miners throughout the country.

LARGE ATTENDANCE HEARS EVANEGLIST

Special Speakers Give Splendid Addresses in Pentecostal Church on Sunday.

An overflow crowd packed the Full Gospel Pentecostal Church Sunday night to hear Evangelist Mrs. Wilson deliver a most powerful address on the subject: "The fate of Those Who Miss the Rapture."

Mrs. Wilson took for her Scripture background the second chapter of second Thessalonians, also the third chapter of second Timothy. Special attention was drawn to the words of the first verse of the chapter in Timothy, "In the last days perilous times shall come." That we are living in such times now, the evangelist showed by every day life, business and national life as the exact fulfillment of the succeeding verses as predicted by Paul.

The theme of the second personal appearing of Jesus to the world, and the preaching of the cross of Christ, made the preacher who would dare to preach them unpopular. Nevertheless it was God's message for the hour, stated Mrs. Wilson to her spell-bound congregation.

With no uncertain sound did the little preacher woman cry down the awful condition of civilization and spoke in rebuking terms of our present day beer drinking, cigarette smoking mothers, nor did she speak in any more favorable terms of modernism, declaring it too was a fulfillment of Scripture and that it was hatched in hell out of the heart of the devil.

At the conclusion of the evangelist's talk, Mr. Wilson made an appeal to those who would decide for Christ to kneel at the roster rail, to which a number responded and some of the members were asked to come and instruct and pray with them. Others were directed to the lower auditorium for praper to which several hundred responded. The scene was like the history of Methodism being repeated.

Mr. Wilson said in all probability a public address system would be installed in the lower auditorium for next Sunday night if at all possible.

Mr. Wilson was originally a Presbyterian minister in Belfast, Ireland and Mrs. Wison the daughter of Methodist local preacher. They are touring canada conducting evangelistic campaigns throughout the Pentecostal churches.

DEVELOPMENT OF THERMOS BOTTLE WELL DESCRIBED

Rotarian George M. Kellam of Toronto Tells Interesting Story of Growth of Industry.

MANY ARE SOLD.

Seventeen of Eighteen Million Bottles Have Been Manufactured on This Continent.

The romance of the thermos, origin and development of the bottle industry was conveyed to the members of the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day in a most interesting address by Rotarian George M. Kellam of the Thermos Bottle Company Limited, of Toronto, who remarked that he was the oldest, continuous employee of the Thermos business in the world.

Introduced by President J. F. Reed, Rotarian Kellam told the story of the visit to Germany of William B. Walker, of his chance meeting with Professor Berger, who had developed in theory the idea of the vacuum bottle, and the subsequent beginning of the industry. Since that time, he said, some seventeen or eighteen million genuine thermos bottles had been sold in the United States and Canada, to say noth'ng of the millions of imitations that had also been placed on the market.

Rotarian Kellam explained the construction of the original thermos bottle in detail, and then related his experience during a visit to Germany, in being able to secure the construction of the present strong glass bottle that has replaced the earlier article.

The speaker had samples of many of the types of thermos containers manufactured by his company, including the latest device which cooks porridge over night. Many of the cheaper bottles placed on the market by other concerns, he said, were sold here at prices that did not pay the man who blew the glass a quarter of a cent for his labor, while the "strong glass" used by his company and much stronger than the material used by others, was manufactured by workers who received high wages.

The thermos trade mark, he said, was the most widely known in the world. It was known to the fisherman on the Labrador Coast, to the miner in South Africa, and to people all over the globe. Mr Kellam declared that he had enjoyed his long association with the industry, and if he got as much luck out of the next twenty-five years, he would be satisfied. It was his ambition to give Canadians a good article that would benefit humanity.

The thanks of the club were conveyed to the speaker by President Reed.

It was announced that the District Governor would pay his official visit on Wednesday, October 31.

TREASURE HUNTERS ORDERED TO QUIT

$8,000,000 in Gold Believed to be Hidden in Sunken Ship.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Two treasure-hunting expeditions seeking the sunken gold of the British frigate Hussar below the waters of the East River here have been ordered by the coastguard to cease operations because of a prior claim to the salvage prize.

Simon Lake, Milford, Conn., inventor, has a contract made last year with the Treasury Department, giving him sole right to search for the Hussar's treasure.

The gold, said to amount to around $8,000,000 at present prices, was believed aboard the British ship when she sank between Manhattan and Long Island on Nov. 23, 1780.

Simon Lake has not yet started salvage operations, but is expected to get under way in a week or two.

Last month two other outfits undertook the task—the Empire Marine Salvage and Engineering Corporation and R. T. Powell, an engineer and inventor.

STAMPEDE OVER TO GOLD FIELDS STURGEON RIVER

Increasing Signs of Order and Permanence Appears Imminent.

TWO NEW LAWYERS

Four Physicians and One Dentist Are Expected in Jellicoe.

(Written for The Canadian Press by Leslie Roberts)

JELLICOE, Ont., Octo. 15 (CP) —The end of the stampede to the Sturgeon River gold fields to-day appeared imminent as increasing signs of order and permanence were observed in this mineland capital. The frenzy of the rush seemed past as workers settled down for the long winter.

Houses Being Built

Jellicoe's townsite is taking shape and houses built of logs and boards are being erected rapidly along a clearing one mile long.

Two new lawyers have arrived in town, offering serious competition to "Judge" Weller, young Osgoode Hall graduate who has been serving the area by administering oaths and directing preparation of mining affidavits while he awaits his call to the Ontario Bar in a week. The new lawyers have set up headquarters in a tent near the railway.

Notices have been posted in numerous public places announcing the arrival or impending arrival of four physicians and one dentist.

Store in Tent

When the rush began this town's only store was a small supply house established principally to serve railway men. Now a second general store has been opened in a tent.

The wooden building into which it will be moved is almost finished. A Port Arthur firm has announced its intention of building a third store, and has rented a lot on which to start construction.

Rumors are current here that banking facilities will be established within a few days to solve the pressing problem of exchange. Difficulties of exchange became acute while the rush was at its height. It was said also on unusually reliable authority that a brokerage office would be opened within the next ten days.

Telegraph Office

When the rush was at its height telegraph business was handled by the station agent and one helper who had to handle the rest of the railway's business as well. Now two commercial operators are working here, and a permanent telegraph office will be established.

When the boom began railway service into the mining area was desultory and was carried over a line that had been in a state of suspended animation for years. The boom quadrupled traffic almost overnight, but the service at first remained almost as uncertain as before the rush. Now passenger train service has been more than doubled and passenger trains are moved as primary traffic not giving precedence to freight.

Signs of order arising from civic organization were apparent in refusal yesterday of a pool room proprietor to allow play on Sundays, and the appearance from Port Arthur of Commandant Maraden of the Salvation Army to conduct a largely-attended religious service, the first the village has seen.

Wives and children of engineers have arrived to spend the winter here and the place has become daily more civilized.

The winter road into field camps established in various parts of the field is almost finished, and the whole area appears ready to settle down for the winter.

MANURE SPREADER IN OIL STOCK DEAL

Police Looking for Alleged Swindler of Farmer.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 15.—(C.P.)—Such was the silver tongued eloquence of an alleged swindler that he took Bert Hockaway's manure spreader, according to the story told County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw this morning.

"He came to my place (north of London) a few weeks back and told me all about the oil stock he was selling. It sounded like a good thing to me, but I didn't have but $60 to give him. It was $130 altogether so I gave him a cheque for $60 and he took the manure spreader," Mr. Hackaway told the magistrate. He said he would bring the stock certificates back the next day but I never saw him again."

A warrant for the arrest of the stock salesman was placed in the hands of the holy name I pledge myself against perjury, blasphemy, profanity and unclean speech.

"I pledge my loyalty to the flag of my country and to the God-given principles of freedom, justice and happiness for which it stands. I pledge myself to support all lawfully constituted authority, civil and religious. I dedicate my membership in this society to the honor of the sacred name of Jesus Christ, and I beg that He will keep me faithful to this pledge until death."

The men sang their special hymn, "Holy God We Praise Thy Name"; the sermon of the rally was preached by Rev. E. M. Meacy of the archdiocese of Kingston, and benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was the concluding solemnity in which Bishop O'Connor was assisted by Rev. V. McFadden of Downeyville as deacon and Rev. Joseph Walsh of Kinmount as subdeacon.

District Parishes

The procession from Confederation Square was composed of members of the Holy Name Societies in the city parishes of St. Peter's, the Sacred Heart, and the Immaculate Conception; also Lindsay, Victoria Road, Kinmount, Downeyville, Lakefield, Ennismore, Douro, Norwood, Keene, and other members were present from Cobourg and Hastings.

In the van of the parade was John Allen, carrying the Union Jack. He was followed by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, who, as pastor of the church designated for this year's rally, had charge of the arrangements which proceeded with perfect precision; Rev. Father McCauley, and Mr. Peter Milloy, chief marshal.

The De La Salle Band quickened the tempo of the parade to the marching step of soldiers. The Cadets were represented by about one hundred and twenty of their members, most of them buglers and drummers, with J. Jackson, drum major, and Rev. Brother Joseph in charge of the entire detachment which had been secured for the occasion by Rev. Father O'Brien. They arrived on the 11.10 a.m. C.P.R. train and were taken to Mount St. Joseph, where they assisted as Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father O'Brien.

The band won compliments everywhere, and were heard by thousands of citizens during the afternoon. Their reputation as one of the crack bugle and drum bands on the continent was appreciated along the route of the march, and was enhanced by their smart appearance and excellent playing. They have deep volume in the drums and the harmonized pitch of their bugles was an impressive feature of their martial music.

At the conclusion of the devotions at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Rev. Father McAuley congratulated the officers and cadets of the De La Salle corps, and also the members of the Holy Name Society for their large attendance. He expressed the hope that they would return home from this year's rally inspired with new resolve to live better and holier Christian lives.

The afternoon service included hymns by the men and by the boy's choir, the litany of the Holy Name of Jesus, renewal of the society pledge, the sermon and Benediction.

Text From Saint Paul

The text of Rev. Father Meacy's sermon was the first verse of the fourth chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Ephesians, "I, Paul, a prisoner in the Lord, beseech you to walk worthy of the vocation in which you are called."

In his epistles to the new converts to Christianity, Rev. Father Meacy said, the great apostle of the Gentiles is sometimes severe, but is always consoling as he points out to them their duties and endeavors to instruct them in what they should do by virtue of their acceptance of Jesus Christ. Our own station is identical to that of the early Christians, our duties are of the same nature and gravity, and should be fulfilled with the loving devotion exhibited by the faithful sons and daughters of St. Paul.

Father Meacy said that a dual obligation is as vital today as it was in the first days of Christianity. It demands of men complete and whole-hearted detachment of self from the world, the flesh and the devil and at the same time loyal attachment to God and the things of His celestial Kingdom.

"In baptism our sponsors reject Satan and his works and lovingly consecrate us to the Most Holy Trinity. Faith teaches us that by spiritual regeneration we put off the old man and put on the new, and thereby we must despise the maxims of the world, mortify the flesh and repudiate the suggestions of the devil. We were warned not to love the world. 'All that is in the world is the concupiscence of the flesh and the eye, and the pride of life'."

Father Meacy said there was no peace of mind in the intemperate liberty that is the world's maxim today. Riches, home and pleasure are three hallmarks of the successful man, but they end at the grave. God permits the temperate and prudent use of these things in as much as they serve the end for which we were all created. The speaker warned those who are possessed of ample means "to remember your brother next door who, while you are wining and dining, is being forced to subsist on a little bread." He also spoke of the dangers of the pride which some men assume from honors that come to them, and in their inflated opinions of themselves they turn from old friends and even become ashamed of their old fashioned parents, who though they are old fashioned have still a real understanding of eternal things.

"If in the past you have given yourself to the pleasures of the world, he warned and turn aside from the path to the service of God. He says you cannot serve two masters. Weigh the responsibility that is on your shoulders as a Christian, and see in the clearest manner the contrast of these two services so that you will regulate your conduct as a Christian."

Man was created from nothing and will return to dust, Father Meacy quoted. God asked of man only that he would obey His law. He appealed to man as a kind and loving father.

"How can we disobey such a Father. We should be ever imbued by a deep sense of filial duty toward Him. His life was an open book of living obedience and humility, of whole-hearted generosity to His followers, Jew and Gentile."

The perfect Christian, Father Meacy continued, is not deterred by the scoffs of men and the opinions of the world. He repudiates everything that is base and ignoble, and keeps Jesus in his heart by preserving his soul free from mortal sin. Man's soul should be the temple of God, but it must be kept pure and inviolate. "Let the words of the Apostle ring in our ears as a stern rebuke: "If any man destroy the temple of God, his God will surely destroy. Father Meacy concluded by recalling the message of his text, and urged the men to examine their hearts as to whether they had walked worthily. "Man's destiny is not in this life, but we should seek our reward and consolation and eternal joy in Christ Jesus, Our Lord."

POINCARE DIES

members of the cabinet came as soon as each learned of the death. The first public man was Paul Marchandeau, new Minister of the Interior, whose office was officially notified of the death.

Andre Tardieu was among the first to arrive after the Prefect of Police. He, as a brilliant collaborator of Clemenceau, was Poincare's bitter political enemy but nevertheless became his firm friend and often saw him.

Tardieu new better, perhaps, than any other how the two big Great War statesmen — Poincare and Clemenceau—put side their deep dislike, even hatred, for each other for the good of the country.

It was Poincare as President in the dark hours of 1917 who called "The Tiger" to the Premiership. It was probably the hardest thing Poincare ever did and it was equally difficult for Clemenceau to accept, but they worked together to save France, which Clemenceau said he "Loved lie a woman" sharing with Poincare that passionate patriotism that marked both hand man in public office, and M. their lives.

Poincare had his last walk Friday afternoon after doctors thought him safely past an alarming illness. Another stroke came Saturday, yet he remained strong and doctors foresaw no immediate danger. Sunday he was weaker.

Unable to Speak.

The aged statesman could no longer speak, but his eyes showed alertness.

"He died without pain and with no death agony," said M. Ribiere. "There was no state of coma and none of those signs of death."

Former Premier Andre Tardieu, one of the first to come to the home when the news was known, said he "found him with the face of 10 years ago, the calm, reflective visage of the true chief of State. There was no tenseness, only sereneness."

He had expressed preference to be buried at Nubecourt, close to his home in Sapigny. There, he said, he wished to lie with his parents and brother in the province of Lorraine which he loved so much.

As former president of the republic as "savior of the franc" and as the man who, with Georges Clemenceau, was voted by parliament as "deserved well of his country,' he could be entitled to the highest honors the government could give.

Last of Great Chiefs

Poincare was the last of France's four great war chiefs. Foch, Joffre and Clemmenceau are gone. Of the school of noted statesmen that were his contemporaries, which included Viviani, Briand, and Caillaux, there remain only Millerand, Doumergue and Caillaux.

Friends and political opponents alike speak of Poincare as "the last of the great men," some adding "where will France find new ones?"

Tributes From Britain

LONDON, Oct. 15 (AP)—Tributes to the warmth of Raymond Poincare's co-operation with Great Britain in the days of the Great War were paid to-day by David Lloyd George and other figures of that period.

"Poincare was the last of the great outstanding figures of the war—Clemenceau, Briand, Ribot, Painleve and Viviani have already gone—and now Poincare," said Lloyd George.

Official circles were shocked by the death and opinions were expressed that Great Britain has lost an outstanding friend. Older figures in the government, most of whom knew Poincare well personally, were deeply moved.

Among tributes of British leaders outside the Government was that of Viscount Cecil, who said "He was a very remarkable man. M. Poincare showed great courage and leadership during his war-time presidency. He was a man who inspired confidence in his fellow countrymen, and in man by his absolute rectitude and uprightness."

"AN EYE TO THE FUTURE - AN EAR TO THE GROUND"

—this describes General Motors' policy, a policy by which the public is given what it wants in better cars year after year, and yet is safely protected against ill-timed or dubious experiments

Again...

There's no question about this matter of Leadership

As everyone knows, the cars and trucks of General Motors are again the great sales leaders.

We are proud of such a record, naturally. Yet it is no secret that this success is due in large measure to the public itself.

More than a year ago, months before production was begun on any of our 1934 models, we checked our designs against the ideas of motorists themselves. Through more than 60,000 answers to our questionnaire, "The Proving Ground of Public Opinion", we learned well in advance just what the public wanted in its new cars.

That, simply, is the story behind this year's sales-leading Chevrolets, Oldsmobiles, Pontiacs, McLaughlin-Buicks, LaSalles, Cadillacs and Chevrolet and GMC Trucks. The story behind Knee-Action Wheels, Streamline Designs and Fisher No-Draft Ventilation. We knew they would meet the specifications of motorists.

Looking at the sales figures, you see proof of General Motors' leadership. But more than that, these figures show you just how Canadian motorists estimate the appeal and value of all cars on the market.

We believe that this estimate by "other owners" points to a General Motors car as your best investment—that it says with emphasis, "There is no question about this matter of leadership!"

WARREN STEVENS

"This team is getting dumber and dumber," Coach Stevens of Toronto Varsity grid squad is quoted as saying as he dejectedly watched his charges make a mediocre showing in practice against St. Michael's College senior O.R.F.U. team in Toronto. Stevens declares that though his players have drilled for a month some don't know the plays yet, and he is a bit discouraged.

before the Roughriders managed to carry the ball past midfield and the deadline was the 38-yard stripe. It was too late then, anyway, because Argos had piled up 11 points in the first half, Morris plunging for a touchdown which Tommy Burns converted; Mike Shepesuik kicking a field goal and box booting two singles.

The Canadian champions gave an impressive display with every member of the big powerhouse swinging back to championship form for the first time this season.

Rout Mustangs 34-1.

Toronto Varsity routed the West- Mustangs 34-1 in an inter-col- iate game at London while Ted eve's Tricolor from Queen's edged a 5-4 decision at Montreal over McGill team that seemed well on way to victory. Ed. Barnabe ed a field goal late in the final od to turn a Red triumph into eat.

Umpire: W. S. Breese of Lindsay.

A heavier team with a speedier getaway and playing a more conservative brand of rugby chalked up a decision over the P.C.I. Seniors as they took to the gridiron at Riverside Park for their third encounter of the season Saturday afternoon. Their traditional opponents, the Lindsay Collegiate team came out on the big end of a 7-1 score after a session of mediocre rugby.

The organization and power which won them a 22-0 victory over Belleville C.I. here a week ago was conspicuously lacking in the ranks of the local boys. The hard work of Drake Jopling, Harry Marsh and Ross Pulkinghorn combined with several lucky breaks put them within touch down range of the visitors' line several times but each time they muffed their opportunity. Too many fumbles and incomplete forward passes in addition to the disadvantage of weighty Lindsay defence line spelled defeat.

Scores Lindsay Touchdown

Campbell, Lindsay, half, intercepted a forward which Marsh heaved for Giardino in midfield and raced fifty yards for the L.C.I. touchdown about the middle of the first quarter. It was the first count of the game. Campbell tried for the convert with a placement kick but failed. A long pass from Jopling to Marsh heartened the local boys and started them on a determined drive to even the score toward the end of the quarter. Stopped on the L.C.I. 23-yard line, they gave Grif Young a try for a field goal but Don McKee and Begley broke through and blocked it.

Tallies Only Point

A beautiful kick by Young from the defenders' 40-yard stripe won the Garnet and Grey squad their only point on a rouge shortly after the change of ends. Then the team settled down to a see-saw punting match which brought them to half time. One serious Lindsay drive was brought to an end when McIntyre intercepted a pass which Don McKee attempted. Bruce McKee was taken from the game with an injured knee during the session.

A sensational run by Loucks from a scrimmage close to midfield down to the P.C.I. 10-yard line featured the third quarter. A nice tackle by Grant Clark was all that prevented a touchdown. Finding the P.C.I. defense too tough to break through, the Scugog boys called for a kick but Ringland's offering was blocked. Five minutes later the breaks again went to Lindsay when Lamb picked up a fumble 20 yards from the hometowners' line and made a long cross-field run. Ringland kicked over the line and Loucks tackled Jopling for the visitors' sixth point.

Muff Opportunities

The locals got one of two chances to score when Walter Perry picked up a fumble by Loucks within four yards of the L.C.I. goal line in the finaly quarter. But a pass Jopling tried to get to Young was incomplete and the ball went to the visitors. Marsh threw a spectacular pass to Giardino for a twenty-yard gain to the L.C.I. 20-yard line in the dying minutes of the game but once again the locals failed to make good. An attempted pass by Marsh to Allan Clark was incomplete.

TRENTON WINS FIRST GAME IN EAST PLAY-OFF

TRENTON 3, PETES 2.

With the Eastern soccer championship at stake, Canadian General local soccer league champions, went down to defeat at Trenton, on Saturday afternoon, at the Airport grounds, when winners of the Bay of Quinte League—Trenton Airport—won by three goals to two.

Trenton team were greatly strengthened from what they appeared at Peterborough in the exhibition game and had a forward line that moved like clockwork in splendid combination.

The return game will be played in Peterborough, and if a third game is necessary a neutral ground will be selected.

Trenton Superior

Canadian General won the toss and selected to play with the sun at their backs. Mid-field play prevailed with the halves dominating the tactics, to make the Trenton forwards more dangerous to the discomfort of the C.G.E. full backs. While Howell and Watson kept peppering shots at Curtis, local goalie, who was in form. Jones transferred the ball down the field Bolton evading the full back to get flag kick that was cleared. Trenton front rank moved with precision while in possession of the ball, to test Curtis with all kinds of shots, but he had to admit defeat when Watson registered for the opening counter. Watson and Renshaw outplayed their opponents to be the best wing on the field and after they had played combination right upon Curtis, he picked the ball off the toe of Watson who was in the act of scoring. C.G.E. style of play didn't prove productive of anything tangible while Trenton were more progressive and penetrated the C.G.E. goal when Howell scored from an offside position, but officials ruled otherwise. Thereafter, the C.G.E. settled down to their own style of play as Jones dribbled through the full backs to give Clark the opportunity to reduce the count, but his shot went skyward. Trenton broke away just before the interval, when Watson beat C.G.E. goalie with an unsaveable shot. Trenton 3, Petes 0.

Petes Force Issue

On resuming, C.G.E. settled down to their usual game and forced the play, to pepper Hall with rocket drives. Burgess, now at left half, held the dangerous left wingers, and a re-arranged attack proved successful, when Clark with a hard drive registered a C.G.E. tally. The visitors kept the play in the Trenton half. Brawshaw and Sneddon, at full back, putting up a stubborn defence, but they had to concede when Clark scored the best goal of the tussle as his parting shot hit the crossbar into the net. The local champions bombarded the Trenton citadel without further success although innumerable corners were taken by Bolton and Post but Trenton replied with an unsurmountable defense, to run out winners by the score: Trenton, 3; Canadian General 2.

Trenton — Hall, goal; Sneddon and Brawshaw, full backs; Brown, Devy and Campbell, halves; Walsh, Matthews, Howell, Watson and Renshaw, forwards.

Canadian General. — W. Curtis, goal; J. Mitchell and A. Mitchell, full backs; W. Bolam, E. Jones and J. Cooper, halves; J. Bolton, F. Earle, S. Clark, A. Burgess and V. Post, forwards.

Don't Expect Too Much In '35 Season From Deans, They're Great But Human

The biggest season the Stove league has ever had is under way. Never before has the ancient circuit, composed of cracker barrel diamond oracles and easy chair baseball managers, had such a meaty subject—or subjects—to discuss as the Dean brothers.

Dizzy and Daffy have concluded the grandest season a pair of baseball playing brothers have ever had—but what about 1935?

If the pressure was heavy on Pepper Martin—and it was—in 1932, following his amazing 1931 world series activities, imagine what will be expected of the Dean freres next year!

The public will expect Dizzy and Daffy to win every game. Which will be extremely unfortunate, for they won't.

What the public overlooks is the fact that the Deans winning so many games isn't remarkable. The fact that they are brothers is 90 per cent of their sensational 1934 saga.

Many pitchers have won more games in one season than Dizzy turned in this year, 30. And as for Daffy, the younger Dean trailed more than a half dozen hurlers this year in victories. Dozens of hurlers have pitched no-hit games—Daffy's feat late in the season.

Four pitchers in world series won more games than did either Dizzy or Daffy against Detroit.

This is not meant to detract one whit from the status of the Dean boys as baseball athletes. They are grand ball players and fine pitchers. But the public should not, next season, expect Dizzy and Daffy to strike out the side every time they take the mound.

The boys are human, after all.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer Softball, Bowling, etc.

By E.A.O.

There is many a slip between the cup and the lip runs the hoary adage, and the Peterborough intermediate rugby team knows the full sourness of its meaning as the result of the last minute turn of events in its game on Saturday afternoon with Belleville. With a minute to play the Petes apparently had the game safely tucked away with a 6-1 score and the crowd was saving its breath ready to cheer lustily at the final whistle. Then came the blocked kick, the wild scramble for the loose pigskin, the dribble down the field toward the Petes' touchline and the dive of Rigby, Belleville middle wing, that landed him on the ball on the Petes' five-yard line. A moment later the 6-1 victory had been turned into a 7-6 defeat.

• • • • • • •

The fact that the Petes lost did not send the fans away disheartened. They appreciated the fact that they had just seen one of the most rugged, hard-fought gridiron battles witnessed here in many seasons. They realized that if size and weight counted for everything the Quinte squad should have ridden easily over the light Petes instead of just staggering into a win by a fluke.

• • • • • • •

In fact on Saturday the Petes had much more of the play than they did in the previous game at Belleville when they gained a 6-6 tie score. Several factors stood out sharply in the play of the homesters; the kicking of Hope, the tackling of the flying division, the manner in which the line dug in and held the, bruising Belleville plunges when to give way would have permitted the ball to be carried over their touchline, and the speedy skirting of the ends by Richardson, Young, Gardner and Newson. For dash and cleverness of play the Petes topped their heavy opponents at every point.

• • • • • • •

The Petes now go two weeks without a game, and they will endeavor to take full advantage of the time to further improve their play. It is expected that Magee, captain of the team, will have fully recovered from a nose injury at that time and he will be back in the lineup. Several new faces may also be in the lineup the next time the squad takes to the gridiron.

• • • • • • •

Coach Bamforth's speedy P.C.I. gridders were outlucked also rather than outplayed in their game with the Lindsay Collegiate team. The Cougog gridders secured all their points on breaks which always turned their way. The first came in the opening quarter when Campbell, a Lindsay half, intercepted one of Marsh's forward passes and galloped 50 yards for a touchdown. The Garnet and Grey threw everything they had into the contest in the final quarter in their vain attempts to notch a touchdown. Although they showed a clear superiority over their heavier opponents, things happened to gum up their plays just as a major score seemed within their grasp.

• • • • • • •

The victory thus notched with the assistance of Lady Luck sends Lindsay Collegiate into first place in the senior division of the Central Ontario Interscholastic League. It was the first reverse in three starts for P.C.I., and with anything like an even break the Garnet and Grey should reverse the result when they play in Lindsay.

Although the Oshawa Hockey club has made no official announcement regarding just what grouping it will seek for its junior team this season, the Motor City has imported some smart junior and senior talent for its teams. "We do know that we are going to have a smart junior aggregation but judging from some of the new faces around town these days, all the visitors are not juniors," comments the Oshawa sport scribe. Nakina Smith, Sudbury junior star, and Don Wilson, of Newmarket and St. Mike's fame, are part of the talent now resident at Oshawa, and more players were expected to arrive there yesterday.

It required two extra innings for Bailieboro to secure an 8-7 victory over the smart Alderville Indian team on Saturday at the Bailieboro annual baseball tournament. Archie Deyell pitched for Bailieboro and was hit rather freely by the Indians during the first several innings. He straightened away when Cack Rogers went in to catch for him. Cognawagas did not participate in the tournament.

PACKERS BEAT LINDSAY TEAM IN PHELAN CUP

LOCALS 7, LINDSAY 1.

Ideal weather prevailed for the semi-final game of the Father Phelan Soccer Charity Cup, on Saturday afternoon, when the Canada Packers eliminated Lindsay by 7 goals to 1 on King Edward Park, before a meagre attendance.

Leether Brilliant

Canada Packers took advantage of the sun at their backs. Lindsay opened up a steady seige upon the Petes' goal to find a defense unbeatable. N. Downer eventually relieved the pressure to the right wing where Colbran dribbled his way towards goal to send in terrific drives; Leether making spectacular saves. O'Halloran transferred the ball to the other end, where Latham missed by inches. Buchan carried the sphere up the centre until a timely move out to his left winger ended in a beautiful pass across the goal mouth. Colbran met the ball with a bullet-like drive that the Lindsay custodian stopped in an experienced fashion. But he had to admit defeat a little later when G. Downer broke away on the wing to deliver point blank shots at goal. The goal-keeper saved some but not sufficient to witness the two shots bounce inside the upright. Then brother Todds registered from scrimmage in front of goal, while Lindsay appealed for offsides. Just before the interval, Foster scored with an unsavable drive that bulged the rigging in below the cross-bar. Canada Packers 6, Lindsay 0.

Locals Hold Lead

On resuming, Grant replaced Worthington in the Lindsay eleven and a changed attack proved more interesting through the efforts of Keith and Latham. Exchanges continued even until a smart piece of combination by Keith left Latham in possession of the ball on the touch line. He centered the ball into the goal, where Packers' goalie grasped the sphere as it was inside the cross-bar for the Lindsay counter. Lindsay, encouraged by their success confined the activities to the Packers' goal, where the defense were kept busy clearing their citadel, although the effort by Keith should have registered when the ball hit the upright and fell back into play. The local eleven didn't score until near the finish when G. Downer made the count read. Canada Packers 7, Lindsay 1.

Muller-Winter Win Six-Day Bike Grind

MONTREAL, Oct. 15. — (CP)— Names of riders new to Canadian audiences were written yesterday across the bicycle firmament as a team to be feared. Sturdy Charlie Winter of New York and Ernest Muller, Holland, rode to a well-earned victory Saturday in the closing stages of Montreal's eleventh semi-annual six-day race.

Winter and Muller gained a lead of a lap in distance, tied with two other teams, about an hour and a half before the finish, and went on to capture sufficient points in the final hour of sprints to win the race.

P.C.I. JUNIORS AGAIN LOSE OUT

Meet 22-10 Setback at Hands of Lindsay Squad on Saturday.

VICTORS MUCH SUPERIOR

P.C.I. Juniors suffered their second setback of the current schedule at Lindsay on Saturday afternoon, when they played the Lindsay Juniors and were beaten, 22-10.

From the first to the last P.C.I. were fighting hard trying to avenge their last game which resulted, 9-0 for Lindsay. L.C.I. however seems to be the better team on running and plunging plays, while Peterborough has the edge on bucks and end runs.

Play opened fast, with Eberts of Lindsay doing some nice running which counted yards time after time. This first half showed some nice tackling by two Peterborough players, Kelly and Jopling. In the first period L.C.I. did the scoring, getting 21 points. Lindsay appears to be a much heavier team and they use their weight to advantage in the pinches. Play was speedy up to half time, the period ending, 21-0 for Lindsay.

After the rest P.C.I. came back with renewed fight which kept their opponents down to 1 point, while the Garnet and Grey ran up two major scores. P.C.I. in this half counted on two touches, the first came when Kelly went over the line. The second was the result of a fumble.. P.C.I. kicking for a point booted over the 1-yard line, the receiver fumbled the ball, and Jopling, who had followed in fast, fell on it for the score. An argument held up the game until full time. The final score was 22-10 for Lindsay. The teams:

Cinch For Deans

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP)—The famous pitching Deans, "Dizzy" and Paul, collected another $5,000 today for pitching two innings each for the Chicago Mills, a semi-pro club, against Kansas City Monarchs, before 20,000 fans.

Paul worked first and gave up three hits and a run, striking out one batsman. "Dizzy" also yielded three hits, but fanned three and was scored on once. The two runs off the World Series heroes were unearned, their temporary teammates making seven errors behind them in four innings. The Mills, however, won the ball game, 13-3.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 15 (AP) —The Chicago Black Hawks, holders of the Stanley Cup, professional hockey's biggest prize, opened training for the 1934-35 season today on the University of Illinois rink.

DUCKS PLENTIFUL HUNTERS REPORT

Good Shooting at Rice Lake—Indians Start Rice Harvest.

COBOURG, Oct. 15.—The wild duck hunters who went to Rice Lake last week report the best shooting there for a number of years. It was said the low water during the summer in the lake has given the wild rice a better chance to grow and a bumper crop is assured, the rice being the greatest attraction for the wild ducks, and this accounts for the large number of ducks there.

This week the Indians will gather the rice from the lake and the big crop will be very beneficial to the Redmen, as the rice has always brought a good price in this locality.

The deer hunters are getting ready for their fall shoot, and by the reports received this game is very plentiful, and it is said the deer are seen in a number of places just north of Lindsay. The old settlers say they appear to be getting away from the wolves that inhabit the northern limits.

Hodges Undecided As To Turning Pro

TORONTO, Oct. 15 (C.P.). — A third attempt to lure Don Hodges, starry Toronto amateur hockeyist, into professional ranks today found the 160-pound forward still undecided.

Hodges admitted to-day he had received another letter from Art Ross, manager of the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, asking if he had changed his mind about entering pro company. In a conference with Ross a week ago, the 22-year-old amateur refused a professional offer. It was the second refusal he had made, the first coming at the close of last season.

Last season Hodges played centre and right wing for Torontos Seniors of the Ontario Hockey Association and Cities Service of the Toronto Mercantile League.

CHAPTER 4

"So you were in the washroom, were you? When?" Lee shot the monosyllable at the old fellow.

"I had to have water to mop the floor," replied Dan, trembling. "And then I went back to empty it when I finished. There wasn't anybody else there either of the times."

"Callaghan, you didn't tell me that."

"Well, sir, I——" The look Lee gave the policeman made him waive excuses. "You see, sir, he was only gone for a minute and the door was open and we was talking most of the time. He couldn't of got away with anything. I'd have heard him."

"If you must have the murderer returning," interrupted Tim, "he might have come back and hid in the washroom while Dan went for Callaghan. Then he could have lifted the gun and escaped when they 'phoned you. Although I swear I can't see why he left the gun in the first place, if he wanted it so badly."

Lee waved him aside.

"There's an easy way to settle this, Callaghan," he said in a steely tone. "He hasn't been out of your sight since you came in? Well, then, search him. If he walked out with the gun, he must still have it."

"Before God I haven't got it," quavered Dan, as he put his hands over his head and Callaghan's efficient hands slid over his person.

"It ain't there, inspector," said that gentleman when he had finished.

"Never mind, Dan," comforted Tim. "I didn't really think it would be."

A knock sounded at the door.

"That'll be the doc," said Lee and motioned Callaghan to the door.

Two men entered, both carrying satchels. The first was a round-faced cherubic fellow who was beaming cheerfully. "Good morning, sir, good morning," he carolled. "Beautiful morning, isn't it? Even for May, it's a beautiful morning."

Lee looked disgusted. Tim grinned. "Not for May—for murder, doctor," he corrected.

The cherubic beam faded a little. He turned to the inspector. "But you told me it was probably suicide."

"Yeah, but that was before the gun was stolen and corpses don't steal guns, do they?" Tim still grinned.

Doctor Holmes exploded. "You mean you've got another murder and we're going to have to spend hours sitting around in a court room giving testimony when summer's here?"

"And the golf courses so nice and green too," suggested Tim.

Lee shrugged his shoulders. "I didn't commit the murder, Holmes. And after all sitting in court rooms and giving testimony is part of what you get paid for. You're a lazy devil, but if you just get to work, you'll get through that much sooner."

"Get plenty of pictures," he went on to the man who had accompanied the doctor, "and watch out especially for prints on this desk and chair." He pointed to the murdered man's desk.

"By the way, inspector," interrupted the doctor glumly, as he bent over the body, "some people have arrived downstairs and Jenkins at the door wants to know what to do with them."

"I'll go down," replied Lee. He turned to Dan. "You better wait around. We'll probably want you again."

Dan nodded glumly, picked up his pail in the hall, and started towards the back stairs.

Lee heard voices mingling with Jenkins' as he descended. Jenkins was saying stubbornly, "You can't come in till the chief comes."

He turned in relief when Lee stepped out on the porch. "This guy says he's the boss of this place and the girl's his secretary," he announced.

The man, a tall, scholarly gentleman, turned to the inspector eagerly. "I'm Professor Wilson, head of the department. You're in charge? For heaven's sake, man, what's happened here?"

The girl touched his arm warningly. She was a pretty thing, Lee noted, with stoft, brown eyes, and hair that was almost golden. She wore a thin summer dress and was hatless in the collegiate manner.

Wilson halted apologetically at her touch. "You must forgive me, sir, but it is unbelievable to find the police in charge of these offices. A college is a quiet place. I only read about you in the newspapers, you see,"

"Couldn't we go inside to talk, officer?" the girl urged. Her lips trembled a little and her eyes were dark with something like fear. The inspector eyed her curiously. "The students," she explained, avoiding his glance.

Lee hadn't noticed before the small knot of curious students, on the sidewalk by the police car. They were watching avidly the colloquy on the porch.

"Of course," he smiled at her. "You're his secretary, Miss ——"

"Miss Turner," supplied Wilson as they entered the house.

"Is there a room down here where we can talk?" Lee halted Wilson as he turned toward the staircase.

"Yes, of course," replied the professor, "but my office ——"

"We'd better stay down here now," insisted the inspector gently.

The girl went pale and stared at him. She puzzled Lee. She probably knew something. On the other hand, he would have sworn she couldn't yet tell why the police were there. She was as anxious as the professor for an explanation, although she said nothing.

She looked away and whispered to Wilson, "The seminar room."

"Certainly, the seminar room." He led them toward a small room at the front of the house.

"Now what is it, officer?" he demanded.

"Jenkins didn't tell you?"

"The man at the door? No. It's not robbery, I hope. Some of us keep a few valuable old editions in our offices."

"No," replied the inspector, slowly, his eyes on the girl's face. "It was murder."

Terror flooded her face. "Who?" she whispered.

Wilson looked at him unbelievingly. "Yes, who?" he repeated.

"Your caretaker has identified him as Mr. Reeves."

"My God!" Wilson sank into a chair "Why it's unbelievable! Reeves! It can't be!"

But it was the girl that held Lee. Relief had washed out the terror. She was obviously glad. Was it because Reeves was dead, thought the inspector, or because she had expected it to be someone else?

Then a sudden thought struck her and her eyes grew dark again. "Who killed him?" she demanded.

"That, my dear young lady, is something you must help us find out."

But the inspector had turned away. Sergeant Brown had stuck his head in the door and was beckoning excitedly.

Lee followed him into the hall. "Well?"

"We didn't find any gun, sir. But somebody's been living up on the third floor. There's a cot up there and everything."

WARSAW FARMER LOSES CROP—BARN

John Clifford Suffers Heavy Fire Loss—Cause Unknown.

WARSAW, Oct. 15.— (Examiner Correspondence.)— Another fire of mysterious origin took place about 11 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, when John Clifford's barn on the Smith place, south of the village, was completely destroyed by fire with all contents, hay, straw, oats and other grains. They had threshed only last week, about 700 bushels of grain.

The building was a frame one, but by the time the fire was seen they could save nothing. No stock nor machinery was there.

There was $1,300 insurance on barn and contents, not nearly enough to cover the loss.

The Free State Government is establishing industrial alcohol distilleries.

PRESBYTERIAN W. M. S. FORMED 70 YEARS AGO

Service of Commemoration Was Held by St. Paul's Society.

HISTORY OF SOCIETY.

Over eighty members of St. Paul's Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society attended a unique combined anniversary service and birthday party in the Guild Room of the church on Friday.

The service was held in commemoration of the establishment seventy years ago of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Advantage was taken of the occasion to recognize the 58 years of faithful service of the St. Paul's branch of the Canadian society. The Peterborough society is one of the oldest in Canada.

An interesting feature of the birthday party which followed the anniversary service was the eating of a birthday cake, mixed and made by Mrs. Jennie Hall Marsh, a daughter of the late Mrs. Robert Hall, a charter member of the Peterborough society.

The presentation on behalf of the Society by the president, Mrs. James Dutton, of a beautiful bouquet of "mums" to Mrs. A. A. Goodfellow in recognition of her many years of faithful loyal work in the interests of the society, was another interesting feature of the occasion.

History of Society

The opening hymn sung during the anniversary service was, "O God, Our Help in Ages", one of the hymns sung at the first meeting of what is now the Canadian society. Mrs. W. R. Turner, past president of St. Paul's society, led in a prayer of thanksgiving for the work accomplished during the years that are past.

A history of the Canadian society was given by Mrs. H. B. Cowan. Seventy years ago in the city of Montreal the beginning was made of what is now W.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church in Canada when a small group of women organized "The Ladies' Auxiliary Association" to assist the church in Scotland in their French Mission work. Eleven years later they re-organized with Mrs. John Redpath as president. The Home Mission work was confined the first four years to city mission work in Montreay. Early in 1876 a notice appeared in the Toronto daily papers calling a meeting of ladies to consider the formation of a woman's society for foreign missions and on March 21st of that year the W.F.M.S. was organized with Mrs. W. McLaren president and Mrs. T. Ewart as secretary. Medical work for women was begun in 1884 when Dr. Elizabeth Beatty was sent out to Indore, and Dr. Oliver followed her in two years. In 1899 the Women's Hospital was opened at Indore which greatly helped their work. Dispensary work was carried on for some years at Dhar by Dr. Margaret O'Hare and in 1898 a hospital was opened at that station. The Girl's Boarding School at Indore was completed in 1892. Women's work for the Chinese in Victoria was begun in 1900. Miss Carrie Gunn being the first Missionary.

The early history of the Women's Missionary Society is strangely linked with the discovery of gold in the Klondyke in 1897-8 when a committee was organized and named the Atlin Nurse committee who sent Miss Elizabeth H. Mitchell and Miss Helen Bone out to Atlin in July 1899.

In a short time St. Andrew's Hospital was erected, the first Presbyterian hospital in Canada due to the generosity and energy of all classes of men. In 1904 a hospital was erected in Teulon, Manitoba. "Today our W.M.S. is represented in five stations in India, with a staff of nineteen. In Formosa we have sixteen workers and missionaries in South China we have two. We have three Mission hospitals in Canada and five school homes. The staff of the Welcome and Welfare Department is now thirteen."

At the close of the anniversary service the ladies gathered around a beautifully decorated table on which was set the birthday cake bearing seven lighted candles, each one of which represented a decade of service.

Mrs. T. J. Carley and Mrs. W. F. McElroy presided at the tea table, and their assistants were Mrs. D. W Clark, Mrs. James Gibb, Mrs. T. H. Taylor, Mrs. J. H. Marsh, Mrs. Fraser Skinner, Mrs. B. D. McLean, Mrs. S. A. Archibald, Mrs. W. A. Burrell was in charge of the table, and Mrs. Ada Craig looked after the refreshments.

ST. PAUL'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Missionary Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was formed in 1876 as a "Women's Working Society," for missionary and charitable objects. In 1883 it was reorganized with the following officers: President, Mrs. Alex. Smith. Vice-presidents, Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. Dunlop; Treasurer, Miss Dickson; and Secretary, Miss Roper.

On February 9, 1883, there was organized the St. Paul's Auxiliary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. Previous to that, for six years there had existed a joint society made up of members from the two Presbyterian Churches, and known as the Peterborough Auxiliary of the W.F.M.S. which met alternately at St. Paul's and St. Andrew's.

This arrangement came to an end at the close of the year 1882 and separate organizations were formed. No list of the original officers is available. The first report as well as the last report of the previous society is signed by Miss Clara Haultain, who evidently continued to hold the office of secretary for some time. This report says that there were 79 members, and that $406.00 was raised. An item of interest in the fifth annual report of 1887 tells that Mr. and Mrs. Goforth had been present at a meeting in November and had been heartily welcomed and bidden God-speed in their work which they were about to begin in China.

Lionel Bishop, provincial commissioner for Rover Scouts; John T. Hornsby, district Scout Commissioner for Peterborough; Dr. Parks, Rover leader, and members of 23rd Toronto Rover Crew and Peterborough squires were guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Langley of 239 Burnham street on Saturday last, when a very dainty luncheon was served.

The members of the Toronto and Peterborough crews met at Ebor Park during the Ontario Rover Moot at Brantford in August. While at the Moot arrangements were made for the 23rd Crew to sponsor the Peterborough crew as required by the Rover rules.

An enjoyable sing-song preceded the investiture ceremonies. Lionel Bishop, assisted by Dr. Parks and Toronto Rovers, admirably conducted the investiture of Mr. G. R. Langley as Rover leader.

Harry Nokes and Pete Dominik had completed their training as squires and were invested into the organization as Rover Scouts.

FILMS CREATE KEEN INTEREST

Ex-President Toronto Anglers' Association Shows Pictures at Empress Hotel.

SALMON FISHING

Giant Atlantic salmon battling their way upstream against a strong current and jumping in their determination to return to the water in which they were spawned to perform the same function of nature, provided the unique features of an interesting film shown to members of Peterborough Fish and Game Association at Empress Hotel Saturday evening.

The picture entitled "Salmon Fishing in Newfoundland" was taken by William Lang, ex-President of Toronto Anglers' Association, in June and July of this year on the Humber River on the north west coast of Newfoundland. On the trip Mr. Lang was accompanied by Tom Jull, one of the outstanding anglers and all-round sportsmen in the Dominion.

Not only was the film unique from the natural history standpoint, but it also combined "shots" of wonderful scenic beauty along with excellent photography.

Mr. Lang showed the pictures, being introduced to the meeting by W. F. Campbell, fishing editor of the Toronto Telegram. Frank Hannan, member of Toronto Anglers' Association was also one of the trio of visitors, who on Sunday spent a day fishing on Pigeon Lake, with Chris Graham, secretary of Peterborough Fish and Game Association.

Prior to the pictures being shown by Mr. Lang, the members of the local association meeting under presidency of Alex Weddell, discussed arrangements for a series of open winter meetings to be commenced at the end of November.

The pictures secured by Mr. Lang in Newfoundland were taken under some difficulties. The falls where the salmon jumping "shots" were taken being almost inaccessible. To reach the falls Mr. Lang and Mr. Jull had to have all their camping equipment taken up the Humber River in canoes and it took the guides forty-eight hours of poling to traverse 20 miles. In the whole of that distance there was less than five miles of water in which it was possible to use paddles.

The pictures presented a vivid conception of the thrill accompanying salmon fishing in Newfoundland, and stressed the fact that salmon fishing on the Humber requires different methods than those employed for salmon fishing elsewhere, owing to the swiftness of the current. Mr. Lang and Mr. Jull used fly baits, and employed as much as 800 feet of line.

The salmon weigh anything from fifteen to thirty pounds each, and Mr. Campbell expressed the opinion that a 28 pound salmon would represent a fifteen pound lunge so far as its fighting abilities were concerned.

Vermilyea Journey To Start Tuesday

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—Harold W. Vermilyea, aged 49, held here in connection with the axe-slaying of his aged mother, Mrs. Nathaniel Vermilye, near her Belleville, Ont., home Oct. 4, will likely be started back to Canada by police Tuesday.

United States Marshal Robert Clark said Vermilyea informed him yesterday his business affairs had been cleaned up.

Vermilyea, resident of near-by Ontario, Calif., for a number of years, waived extradition proceedings last week. He denies any connection with the brutal killing.

MILLBROOK SCORES 18-9 WIN AT HOME

Gray is Star for Winners, Scoring Nine of Team's Total Goals.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 15.—The local squad had a tilt at box lacrosse with the Junior champion team from Brooklyn at the Cosmos rink on Friday evening, coming off at the top end of the score to the tune of 18-9. Peterborough had a large delegation of fans present, and Mickey McGee of that city, was referee. Only one penalty was handed out during the game, Brown of Millbrook taking that during the second period.

Gray, of the locals, scored nine goals. Others who added to the count for the homesters being Raper, Scott, Creighton, Nattress, Edmunds and Sloan; the Millbrook goalie, Larmer, coming out of a scramble, put the ball into the home net and it was counted for Brooklyn, others who scored for the visitors including Cook, Levinsky, Campbell, Bill Vipond, and Blight.

Larmer was hurt through being hit by the ball in the eye while the local lads were practising during the wait for the visiting team's arrival, and after the first period had to quit, being replaced by Lebarr. Henry Gray took Lebarr's place on defense. The line-up was:

ROSE-PINK FINGER NAILS INDICATE GOOD HEALTH

Just below the hard surface of your nails, the blood flows through tiny capillaries in the soft flesh. This is what gives colour to the transparent nails.

Now, the redness of the blood is due to the presence of millions of microscopic cells called red corpuscles. So when the finger nails are tinted a nice rosy pink it just means that the blood has plenty of red corpuscles. And when the blood has plenty of red corpuscles the person is generally in excellent health.

Quite often the nails are pale. This is a warning that all is not well, for the blood then lacks redness and this will bring on undesirable complaints which can become serious.

Not very long ago, there was formed a clinic or study class of forty persons whose blood was pale. They were, of course, more or less run down in health. So for thirty days all were given treatment with a blood-building remedy. Results were splendid! The patients looked better and felt better. They had more vigour . . . were brighter and stronger. Blood tests made by a competent authority before and after taking the remedy showed that the redness of the blood had been well increased by the thirty days' treatment.

Fortunately this remedy can be obtained at any drug store. It is quite well known for it was originated by a Canadian authority and called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. All who suspect that their blood is pale . . . all who feel run-down or lacking in vitality, should follow the example set by the clinic. Get on to the high road of health by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Full size box 50c.

CLASS DOUBLING CREATES DEBATE

Havelock Principal's Request For Curtains to Divide Room Made in Vain.

SEEK "OPEN LITS."

HAVELOCK, Oct. 15 (Examiner Correspondence)—Brevity was the keynote of the regular meeting of the school board held in the school room on Thursday evening. Trustees Taylor, Coop and Bullied along with the chairman Smith just made a quorum.

Principal P. Yuill of the Public School reported on the success being met with in the staggering of he classes. He reviewed he work being covered and again gave the hours. Mrs. L. Rowatt was present in the ratepayers section and offered a little unfavorable criticism with regard to the new system. Mr. Yuill suggested that if the board would provide a curtain to divide the class room, that the number of study periods for the classes without a teacher could be increased.

Trustee Taylor's motion that a curtain be provided was lost for want of a seconder.

Amendment by Trustees Copp and Bullied "we spend no more money on the staggering class proposition" was lost.

Open Lits Possible

Miss Morgan suggested the board might ask the village council for the free use of the town hall auditorium for open literary meetings once a month. The members present seemed agreeable to Mr. Bullied's suggestion that Trustee Taylor and chairman Smith wait on the village council as suggested by Miss Morgan. If the delegation is successful it will in all probability mean a grand "open lit" at least once a month to liven up the somewhat dull social season in the village.

The very small amount of correspondence included a letter from C. L. Copp, I.P.S. who sent along a cheque for $5 for music classes' expenses. An application from Miss Bessie Roberts of town for position of supply teacher was received.

On motion of Trustees Taylor and Bullied the acounts as read were ordered paid.

Principal Yuill reported on the success of the Havelock classes at the annual teachers' convention in Norwood, while not up to last year's it was still quite good.

On motion of Trustees Taylor and Copp the meeting adjourned to meet the second Thursday in November or at the call of the chair.

Bronze Sarcophagus For King Alexander

VIENNA, Oct. 15.—(AP).—King Alexander of Yugoslavia will be buried in a magnificent bronze sarcophagus, similar to that used in the interment of the Archduke Franc Ferdinand, the victim of the Sarejevo assassination in 1914 which resulted in the Great War.

By a coincidence, Alexander's coffin, which is being made in Vienna by a famous firm of Austrian coffin makers, is almost a duplicate of the bronze casket in which the late Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss, also an assassin's victim, was buried.

The Yugoslav authorities entrusted the making of a coffin sufficiently fine for their slain King to the Vienna firm which for 300 years has made the bronze tombs of Austria's Hapsburg emperors and empresses, including those for the renowned Marie Theresa, the Empress Elisabeth and the murdered Crown Prince Rudolph.

BOARD OF INQUIRY.

"Good Time to Hunt For Cover" Suggests Commissioner.

TORONTO, October 16 (C. P.). — Dr. Conrad Wettlaufer of Buffalo, secretary and director of the Teck-Hughes Gold Mines, told a board of inquiry to-day that he believed the company could have paid 15 cents instead of 10 as a dividend on its capital stock this autumn.

With more than $3,000,000 in the treasury, witness, testifying at an investigation into charges that announcement of the reduced dividend had been withheld to permit short-selling by insiders of the company, said he thought the dividend could have been paid to shareholders.

Witness told of him and his family selling more than 15,000 shares of Teck-Hughes stock in the interim between two meetings of directors, the first on September 11 and the second on September 17 last.

Witness denied his selling was in any way connected with the reduced dividend, though it had been sold the day before the reduction was announced. He said he had not told any members of his family of the possibility of a dividend reduction, not even his wife who "hadn't

LIQUOR CHARGE IS DISMISSED

CRITICISM BY COUNSEL.

A charge against Mendel Smith, Canadian National Railway section foreman at Lakefield of having illegal possession of liquor was dismissed by Magistrate E. A. Gee of Lindsay who presided here to-day. His Worship said the only question for him to decide was as to whether or not the accused had been lawfully conveying beer from a lawful place of residence to another. Under the circumstances, he felt that he was entitled to give the accused the benefit of the doubt, and the case would, therefore, be dismissed.

Smith was the driver of an automobile that was involved in a smashup with another car conveying a party of Indians south on Selwyn road on the morning of September 1.

On a further charge of criminal negligence, the accused was bailed for trial in the sum of $2,000, following preliminary hearing.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., conducted the prosecution and T. J. Carley the defence.

YUKON PIONEER VISITS OTTAWA

ABSENT 36 YEARS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16 (CP)—Making his first trip south after 36 years in the Yukon, Francis X. Laderoute is having an interesting time in Ottawa. Mr. Laderoute is now 88 years old and remembers the Capital of Canada when it was a pioneer lumbering town.

Paved roads and large buildings, all new since his last visit, are what amazes the pioneer most of all. The thing he misses most is the great lumber traffic on the Ottawa River. Before he went north and west he was a mighty man on the river, bossing the floating of hugh rafts of lumber from the upper Ottawa right down as far as Quebec.

He was also interested in finding Sir George Perley, the Acting Prime Minister of Canada, for he had given Sir George a job when he was a youth. He put the future statesman at carrying pork for the cook in his lumber camp at the salary of $17 a month. Mr. Laderoute was then foreman for the lumber firm of Pattie and Perley, and Sir George's father had instructed him to give his son, "Whatever you think he can do and pay him whatever he is worth."

COTTAM, Ont., Oct. 16. (C.P.)—Big nails were driven into the desks and ink scattered everywhere by vandals who broke into the Gosfield North Concession School. Books were torn to pieces and slates smashed by the raiders who were believed to have gained access to the building through the windows.

BUSH STRIKERS SEEKING RELIEF

Nearly 400 Men Reported at Sault Soup Kitchen.

ALL CAMPS OPEN.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 16. (CP).—Question of the success of the pulpwood strike in the camps of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company on the Algoma Central Railway line north of here was discussed to-day.

Of the 1,000 men employed, fully 70 percent. are reported on strike. None of the 17 camps have been closed, however, a few men remaining in all of them. It was reported here a considerable number of men had applied for jobs. Policy of the company regarding re-hiring was not announced.

Between 300 and 400 of the strikers have come into the Sault, where a soup kitchen is being operated at the Finnish hall, headquarters of the strike committee.

Reports here to-day said men working in the Michipicoten area had been warned their camps would be raided if they did not join the strike.

The ship captain was shot once or twice in the legs, according to reports received at headquarters of the R.C.M.P., here, and is receiving treatment in the Ramouski Hospital. The constable was quickly overpowered and has been taken to a mental hospital at Quebec for observation.

Voice Of World's Only Talking Dog Dies Of Pneumonia in Maine Home

WATERVILLE, Me., Oct. 16.—(AP)—"Princess Jacqueline," the pedigreed French bulldog which liked nothing better than to sit down and have a good-long chat, is dead.

The 10-year-old canine conversationalist, believed to be the only talking dog in the world, succumbed to pneumonia at the home of her mistress, Mrs. Mabel A. Robinson.

Princess Jacqueline was reported to have a vocabulary of more than 20 words and to have used them all correctly. Once, under the auspices of the Maryland Kennel Club, she delivered a short and tasteful address. Later while on a visit to John Hopkins University, the Princess had the satisfaction of learning from Dr. Knight Dunlap that she possessed a double voice capacity unique among canines of the world. The John Hopkins examiners discovered the dog possessed vocal chords similar to those of humans.

Her first vocal effort was a terse request to be permitted to go "out." Her first complete sentence was "I will" but occasionally, in perverse moods, she said "I won't." If it occurred to you to ask, nothing delighted Princess Jacqueline more than to explain that the device in which she was accustomed to ride up and down in Bangor was an "elevator." "Bangor" and "ball" were a couple of the words the Princess would utter trippingly from the tongue at times of extreme volubility.

Possessed of highly cultivated social instincts, she invariably greeted visitors with a demure "hello" and sped them on their way with "goodbye" or "come again."

Mouse Kills Cat

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 16 (CP)—Employees at the Hammermill Paper Company's plant are telling about the mouse that killed the cat.

The cat, they say, toyed with it for a while before making the kill. The mouse, enraged, jumped at the cat.

As the cat opened her mouth to seize its prey, the tiny mouse slipped down the cat's throat, and died triumphant as the cat choked to death.

Five Charges Are Made Against Captain William F. Warms.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP)—The Board of Inquiry of the United States Steamboat Service, in a report made public to-day, charged William F. Warms and four staff officers of the Morro Castle with negligence in connection with the burning of the Ward liner and the attendant loss of 132 lives.

The preliminary report, signed by Captain Karl C. Neilsen and James Smith, inspectors of the New York district, gives no cause or responsibility for the fire. It was explained the board's duty ends with determining if the officers were negligent in the performance of their duty.

Ambulance Chasing Is Becoming Racket

VANCOUVER, Oct. 16 (C.P.). — Ambulance chasing has grown to such proportions in Vancouver that it verges on racketeering, R. L. Maitland, K.C., told members of the legal and legislative bureau of the Vancouver Board of Trade in an address here. Mr. Maitland was minister without portfolio in the government of Hon. S. F. Tolmie.

"I seldom have an accident case come into my office in which the victim has not already been approached illegitimately by the ambulance chaser," Mr. Maitland continued.

A widow whose husband was killed was approached within 12 hours by an organization which said it had all the evidence, measurements and other data that nobody else could get, and in her condition of distress rushed her into signing an agreement by which they took the action on a basis of 25 per cent. of the proceeds.

THREE GUILTY OF EXTORTION IN LONDON CASE

"Mr. D" Claims He Was Forced to Pay $200 Under Threats.

JURY OF FARMERS.

Mrs. Taylor, Weeping at Times, Denies Participation in Plot.

LYONDON, Ont., Oct. 16.—(C.P.)—Mrs. Mae Turnbull, her son, Frank Taylor, Jr., and his wife, Rose Taylor, were found guilty by an Assize jury this afternoon of theft by extortion of $200 from "Mr. D."

Sentence will be passed later today.

It was expected these cases would be the only ones involving extortion to come before the present court.

Vincent Foley, London barrister, yesterday was sentenceo to four years in penitentiary after pleading guilty to two charges of conversion.

The jury in finding the defendants guilty to-day recommended leniency for Rose Taylor because of her age. (She is now 24 and was married when 16), her early marriage and because she fell into bad company. Mrs. Turnbull was unaffected by the verdict, while Frank Taylor appeared nervous. Mrs. Taylor was on the verge of tears.

KIDNAP VICTIM ALIVE MONDAY

Relatives of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll Expect Early Release.

NEWSPAPER REPORT.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 16. (AP) The Louisville Times said to-day it has reliable information that Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, kidnap victim, was alive Monday and may be freed within 24 hours

The article adds:

"The above information gathered by the Times is confirmed, in part, by the cheerfulness of Mrs. Stoll's relatives since Sunday, by the passing of two days without any appeals to the kidnapper over the radio and by The Associated Press report that the $50,000 ransom had been sent to Nashville."

The information published by the Times was taken to indicate that Mrs. Stoll or her kidnapper had found some way to communicate with the family.

There had been indications since last night that the Stoll family expected something to happen within a short time that the way again had been cleared on the possibility that the kidnapper or some agent might bring the woman back.

Squads of police searching the neighborhood of the Stoll estate had moved southward to-day, and police again were keeping clear of the lime kiln lane on which the home fronts.

"You can go up there, Buddy, but I can't," a policeman remarked to a reporter who invited him to ride with him as he turned from upper River Road into the lane.

14 Months' Baby Tips 39 Pounds

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 16. (CP).—In 14-months-old Lorraine Bernard, North Bay believes it has a contender for the title of world's heaviest baby. The baby already weighs 39 pounds.

McNeil Simons, 12-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Simons of Warwick Parish, Bermuda, weighing 32 pounds, is reported a serious rival to 42-pound James Cockersham of Baltimore, Md., who is 20 months old, but the North Bay entry is counted on to beat both of them.

The chubby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bernard tipped the 39-pound mark when only nine months old. She will be weighed again soon and is expected to rival the 42-pound contestant.

EYES RESTORED BY THE GRAFTING OF NEW CORNEA

English Novelist Attends Surgeon Convention to Tell of Miracle.

BLIND NINE YEARS.

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, A.P. Science Editor.)

BOSTON, October 16 (A.P.). — Surgeons heard to-day how Daphne Muir, English novelist, saw the words "very heaven" as her first sight after nine years of total blindness that was ended by a modern surgical miracle.

She is attending the meeting of the American College of Surgeons as the guest of Sir Harold Gillies, a British surgeon, and his wife She arrived here by way of Montreal.

Dr. Tudor Thomas, the Welsh surgeon who restored her sight, is not here, but in his absence her visit fitted into the "show me" clinics of the surgeons, where they gather at hospitals to see surgery.

Blinded in Auto Crash.

Daphne Muir was blinded nine years ago in an automobile accident . The blindness was in both eyes and in both of them it was in the cornea, the outer covering, just in front of the pupil of the eye.

Normally the cornea is clear as glass It may become opaque from injury or acid or disease. That shuts off all light, and that happened to Mrs. Muir.

This darkening of the cornea is not the same as a cataract, the white growth which overspreads the lens lying inside the cornea. When the cornea alone is blinded, sight may be restored by grafting a new cornea. The new one has to come from another human eye. Such gifts are available now and then. They come from the eyes which have to be removed. The grafting, though very rare, is not new, but Mrs. Muir was the first person to

Rescue Groups Of Indiana Farmers Labor To Free Hound From Cavern

GREENVILLE, Ind., Oct. 16.—(AP). There isn't much hope for "Mitzi", black and brown patched fox hound, imprisoned, as Floyd Vollins was nine years ago, in a limestone cavern.

Scores of farmers came to help when word got around that Mitzi, after disappearing last Wednesday, had been discovered mournfully barking from the depths of a cave.

It is believed "Mitzi" chasing another animal into the spring crevice, dropped into a pit after squirming through the narrow opening.

A small boy wriggled and squirmed into the opening Sunday bearing a torch light. He could get only 15 or 20 feet inside the tiny covern. There he met a barrier of solid rock with only a tiny opening. Mitzi, he said, was only a short distance beyond the small cavity then.

MANY TOO WEAK TO BE REMOVED FROM MINE PIT

For 110 Hours, 1,200 Miners Had Remained Under Ground.

REFUSED ALL FOOD.

Some Went Mad—Pit Owners Meet Demands of Men.

PECS, Hungary, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Twelve hundred miners, 100 of them only half conscious, came back from the black depths of the mine today, victorious in their "suicide strike."

Not too soon did the men bring to a close their self-imposed imprisonment. The semi-conscious men were suffering from gas poisoning and exposure after 110 hours in the pits. Even the more robust were haggard, but joyful.

The men will receive a winter bonus of $3 each, and instead of an eight percent wage cut, a Christmas bonus of the same amount.

There were dramatic scenes as the miners reached the pit mouth to be welcomed by wives and children, who had waited long days for the moment.

Soldiers and militiamen with machine-guns and rifles also waited and gave the mine surface the appearance of an army camp. There appeared to be no cause for trouble however, men and women alike were joyful at the outcome.

Police denied any men perished in the pits.

Blinking in the early morning sunlight, the half-starved men staggered from the mouth of the mine into the arms of overjoyed wives who were waiting, as they have been for five days, with food. Those who were able ate ravenously, but many could not accept food.

For 110 hours the men had remained deep in the earth, sending back word they preferred death to surrender. They wanted more money and more work than the $2.00 and two days weekly they have been getting.

Rejected All Food

With financial zeal they rejected pleas sent down by a frantic government and food offered by more frantic wives. But this morning a compromise was accepted. Mine owners and the government reached an agreement. Peace emissaries were allowed by the strikers' guards to go below with the offer and the men debated. At daylight they came out.

All their demands were not met, but the strikers got their main objectives; they will be given fall and winter raises, more days of work, and the company agreed not to discriminate against them.

Government troops stood behind machine guns as the men emerged, but there was no disorder. And today this little mining town celebrated, for the most heart-rending

He succeeds Charles Arsene Henry, who was recently transferred to Copenhagen.

$14,000 TOBACCO CARGO IS RECOVERED BY POLICE

TORONTO, Oct. 16 (C.P.) — Police announced to-day that they had recovered in North Toronto a $14,000 cargo of tobacco said to have been hijacked from a Waller Transportation Company truck en route from Hamilton to Montreal.

The tobacco, in the form of cigars, cigarettes and pipe tobacco, was the property of the Tucket Tobacco Company of Hamilton. It was allegedly stolen after the crew of the truck, Girard Baretau and Lionel Hebert of Montreal, were locked in the trailer by four armed men who overpowered them at Napanee.

VIOLENT STORM FLATTENS CITY FIVE DROWNED

Death List Remarkably Low for Large Amount of Damage Caused.

NO WARNING GIVEN.

10,000 Natives Left Homeless in Other Provinces.

BY E. E. BOMAR

MANILA, P. I., Oct., 16.—(AP)—At least five persons lost their lives and thousands were left homeless by a sudden tropical typhoon which twisted Manila from a well-ordered city into a confusion of debris in the early morning hours today.

Five drownings in one section of the city were the first fatalities reported in the violent storm.

"I seems a miracle that there are not numerous deaths in view of the falling roofs, trees and poles,' said Governor General Frank Murphy after a survey of the havoc-strewn city. "Everything has been done that can be done to prevent suffering."

Estimate of Damage

He said estimates of damage in Manila alone varied from $350,000 to $2,500,000.

No reliable source attempted to guess the extent of damage north of the city where the gale reached its height as it roared across Luzon Island ripping thatched huts of the natives to bits, flooding roads and blowing down power and communication lines.

Manila was a scene of desolation as convicts, police and city workmen joined to clear debris-strewn streets. Streets and parks were flooded. Thousands of trees were uprooted by the 57 mile an hour wind. Four ships were washed ashore. Telephone and telegraph poles were blown down. Business and transportation were at a standstill.

Unlike the lesser typhoons which preceded it in recent weeks, the tropical storm struck without warning. Ships had no time to leave their anchorages behind the breakwater and seek safety in broad Manila Bay. The round the world Dollar liner, President Johnson remained lashed to her pier but escaped damage. However, her midnight sailing was cancelled.

HAROLD VERMILYEA.

After agreeing to return voluntarily to Canada to face questioning in connection with the murder in Belleville, Ont., of his aged mother, Harold W Vermilyea, Ontario, California, fruit packer, emerged from his cell in the county jail for a two-hour conference with Mrs. Jack Schorr, Ontario divorcee. The couple embraced in an affectionate greeting under the eye of Federal officers, while Vermilyea gave instructions to Mrs. Schorr for closing up his business affairs. Though police of Ontario said they understood Vermilyea's detention had blocked wedding plans of the man and Mrs. Schorr, the suspect denied a romance existed and described the divorcee merely as a close friend.

ROOT CROP YIELD IS VARIABLE

GOOD PASTURE.

TORONTO, Oct. 16. (CP). — Yields from root crops in Ontario vary from fair to excellent, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario epartment of Agriculture. Excellent pasturage in several counties has increased the milk production, the report says.

In Bruce large yields of root crops was reported with potatoes especially showing good returns. Excellent corn and root crops are being harvested in Halton. In both these counties, however, a scarcity of hay prevails.

Oxford county reports a 25 percent increase in cheese production since pastures were freshened by rains but cold nights are threatening the industry. The general hay shortage in this area has been reduced by good pasturage this Fall.

Purchases of farms have increased in Wellington County. In some cases farms in the county have been sold to Western Canadian farmers.

Fall plowing is making fair progress throughout the province with about 50 percent of the work completed.

Excellent potato yields were made in the Algoma country, some running as high as 200 bags to the acre. Frost in August cut the yield somewhat.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Corn prices went higher yesterday and wheat lower.

For the first time in many weeks, the corn visible supply yesterday fell below the corresponding 1933 total. Besides, corn trade authorities stressed statements that the supply of corn is pitifully small, and that there are no substitutes. On the other hand, the wheat market was bearishly affected by reports that the French Government has arranged for additional large subsidized exports of wheat.

A disturbing factor as to all cereals was a Washington report of proposed Governmental tightening up of trade restrictions on grain futures dealings.

After scoring 1⅝c maximum gain, corn reacted owing to wheat weakness, and closed unsettled, ¼c to ⅜c over Saturday's finish; May, 78½c to 78⅝c; with wheat ½c to ⅝c down, May, 99⅜c to $1; oats, ⅛c off to ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to 20c decline.

Wheat trade lacked volume. Commission houses bought May wheat on resting orders at around the dollar mark, but price bulges ran into selling. Advices from Kansas said wheat seeding is largely completed.

WINNIPEG WHEAT.

WINNIPEG, October 16. — A minimum of selling pressure sufficed to send wheat futures prices to lower levels on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday in a quiet, featureless market. Values closed ⅝c to ¾c lower.

With foreign interest in Canadian wheat at a low ebb, other buying was restricted, and the session was one of the quietest in days. Despite heavy week-end marketings of new crop wheat, offerings were light, but sufficient to send the October future to 78¾c, December 79½c, and May 84¼c to 84⅝c.

Futures fluctuated within a one-cent price range, and the pit at times was deserted. Only scattered loads of Canadian wheat were purchased by foreign buyers.

World wheat shipments this week totalled 11,622,000 bushels, of which North America exported 3,176,000 bushels. Cash grains were active, with good demand shown for most grades of wheat at fractionally higher spreads. Coarse grains were slow and fractionally lower.

Futures:

BIG AIR DERBY HAS 21 PLANES

Official Seals Already Attached to 21 Planes—Starts Saturday.

MORE ARE EXPECTED.

(By Albert W. Wilson.)

MILDENHALL AIRDROME, England, October 16 (A.P.). — Five planes answered the roll call to-day at Martlesham, bringing to a total of 21 the number of ships which have checked in preparatory to the beginning on Saturday of the world's longest air race, the 12,000-mile England to Australia Derby

Col. James C. Fitzmaurice, the only entry from the Irish Free State and a veteran of the North Atlantic, as well as R. Parer and G. E. Hemsworth, representing New Guinea, are expected.

To date, nine English, two New Zealand, one Australia, one American, and one Danish plane have been checked in. Official seals have been attached to them which must be kept intact so as to be available for inspection upon their arrival in Melbourne.

G. E. Lowdell, a British entry in the handicap race, is expected at Martlesham where the larger planes are assembling because of the more adequate facilities at that field.

Miss Jacqueline Cochrane, a third probable American entry, is rushing last-minute adjustments on a new plane at Heston Airdrome. Engine trouble forced her to change planes.

Col. Roscoe Turner and Jack Wright, American fliers, are highly rated in the air contest, while Great Britain's chief hopes rest on her three Comet planes piloted by Mr. and Mrs. James A. Mollison, Bernard Rubin, and C.W.A. Scott, who has held the England to Australia record three times.

DARING ATTEMPT MADE TO ESCAPE FROM DON JAIL

George Hamilton Had Just Been Given 15 Years for Shooting Policeman.

HAD HACK-SAW.

Cut Through Bar, Used Spoon to Pick Lock, Hid in Basement.

TORONTO, Oct. 16 (CP). Guards kept close watch to-day over George Hamilton, alias Percy Moggey, as preparations were made to take him to Kingston Penitentiary to serve a 15-year term. Hamilton made a daring but futile attempt to escape from Don Jail last night.

Just Been Sentenced

With Charles Smith alias Frank Lovesey, Hamilton was convicted yesterday of shooting and wounding Detective William Greaves and shooting with intent at Constable Herbert Moore when the officers attempted to arrest them last June 1. They also were convicted of possessing housebreaking tools. Smith will spend eight years in penitentiary for his part in the affair. Both were released last March from Stoney Mountain Penitentiary in Manitoba.

In some unknown manner Hamilton obtained a hacksaw and cut through a vertical bar in his cell door and then picked the lock of the corridor door with a spoon he apparently obtained from a meal tray. He stole into the basement but was observed and was returned to his cell by guards. He showed little resistance, officials said.

Since entering Don Jail in June, Hamilton has made five attempts to escape, boasting he would never be taken to Kingston. He was closely guarded on trips from the jail to the courtroom during his trial.

Fishing was good over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ong and Miss Bernice Frederick left Friday for their home at Warren, Ohio, after a week at "Lucky Strike," during which time they were successful in landing a 12-pound muskie and several fine bass.

Mr. George Johnston secured a fine muskie tipping the scales at 18½ pounds, while trolling in the Trent.

Pat Morgan Catches Two Fish on One Hook

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 16. (By Examiner Correspondent).—A. G. Morgan, better known as 'Pat' Morgan, had a new fish story to-day, and not asking anyone to take his word about size, weight, etc.—brought the fish right up to town to show the boys—and it was a beauty too: a ten pound pickerel, caught with an ordinary hook to which a live minnow had been attached as bait, and just still fishing with a plain bamboo pole.

But now comes the strange part: Inside this fish was another fish—a perch fully nine inches in length—so Pat Morgan, lockmaster at Dam No. 9, can now say that he caught two fish on one hook in the Trent canal opposite Hydro-Power House No. 8.

Some credit must also be given Mr. Robert Greenley for assisting in landing the largest pickerel taken from the Trent waters during the season, as Mr. Morgan, hampered by his sixteen foot pole, was having just a little trouble getting this choice morsel over the cove wall.

Obituary

WILLIAM GRAHAM

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Oct. 16.—After an illness extended over a number of years William Graham, a very highly respected citizen of Hastings for over a half a century died on Sunday afternoon at the home of his son Charlie Graham on Division street.

Mr. Graham was born in the Township of Ameliasburgh in Prince Edward County on February 9, 1848, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Graham, pioneer settlers in that county. When he was two years old he came to Percy township with his parents to a farm on the boundary line between Percy Township and Alnwick. It was in their home where the first church service in that section was held.

In 1869 he married, Miss Caroline Jinks, a United Empire Lowalist of Prince Edward County who predeceased him five years ago.

Coming to Hastings fifty-four years ago the deceased gentleman followed up his trade as a carpenter. Many of the present buildings in the village remain as a memorial to his ability with a saw and hammer.

There is left to mourn his loss four sons and four daughters: Charlie of Hastings; John of Wellington, Clayton of Marmora, and Frank of Peterborough; Mrs. W. W. Stewart of Toronto; Mrs. Douglas of Peterborough; Mrs. G. Whitred of Hastings and Mrs. W. Whitred of Percy.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon from the residence of his son where services will be conducted by Rev. S. H. Hill, B.A. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at two o'clock. Interment will be made in Trent Valley cemetery.

READY TO PAY ALIMONY BUT WANTS DOG BACK

CHICAGO, Oct. 16. (CP).—King Levinsky readily agreed to a postponement when the matter of temporary alimony for his wife, Roxine came up for a court hearing.

"Sure," he said, "give her a break, but I want back my dog that I gave her as a wedding present."

The judge said he'd talk about the dog when he talked about the alimony, and put both matters off until Monday.

57 Votes Registered From Small House

ST. LOUIS, October 16 (C.P.).—Members of a special election committee investigating registrations came across the name of Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante in a downtown precinct. A member of the committee called at the address and asked if a person of that name lived there.

"Yes," was the reply.

"How about Greta Garbo?"

"Yeah, she's here, too."

The committee said 57 persons were registered from one five-room dwelling.

Canadian Wins Bronc Busting Contest At Ninth World Championship Rodeo

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (C.P.). — Welser, a rangy bay with a disposition about as sweet as a dill pickle, probably reflected over his oats today that at last he had met his master.

Jackie Cooper, who used to cowpunch on the sloping hills around Jasper Park, Alta., cinched a saddle on Welser's unwilling back last night and rode him to a fare-thee-well to win the bronc-busting contest at Madison Square Garden's ninth world championship rodeo.

If you are up on your German you'll know that Welser means a wiseguy, one who knows all the tricks. If you are very well up on your German, you'll know that this is a very loose translation.

Anyway, Welser exhibited clearly he knew all the tricks about unloading human freight. He bucked and kicked, wriggling his scrawny back like an eel. He did a one-hoof pivot and tried a four-point landing stiff-legged. But Cooper must have been reading Welser's mail, for he knew all the tricks beforehand and was still comfortably aboard at the end of the time limit.

Rube "Texas" Roberts, from Fort Worth, provided the other highlight of the evening by wrestling a full grown steer into the tanbark in 11 2-5 seconds. Rube dived from his bronco's back, caught the galloping steer's horns while he (Rube) was still in mid-air, and had his adversary trumpeting "auntie," or its equivalent in steer language, in the best time of the rodeo to date.

Even Rheumatic Pains Eased Fast Now!

BAD HEADACHES, NEURITIS PAINS OFTEN RELIEVED IN MINUTES THIS WAY

Remember the pictures below when you want fast relief from pain. Demand and get the method doctors prescribe—Aspirin.

Millions have found that Aspirin eases even a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain often in a few minutes!

In the stomach as in the glass here, an Aspirin tablet starts to dissolve, or disintegrate, almost the instant it touches moisture. It begins "taking hold" of your pain practically as soon as you swallow it.

Remember these two points: Aspirin Speed and Aspirin Safety. And, see that you get ASPIRIN. It is made in Canada, and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet.

Get tin of 12 tablets or economical bottle of 24 or 100 at any druggist's.

Why Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop an Aspirin tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches the bottom, it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH — An Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach—ASPIRIN tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

SAFETY SPEED COMFORT SERVICE

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

The obligations imposed upon a railway system are great. Primarily, these are providing and maintaining adequate and reliable transportation service throughout the whole year, regardless of climatic conditions or the costs and difficulties involved in meeting those conditions. A railway system which operated only when weather conditions were pleasant, or which did not guarantee the closest possible adherence to standards of safety, or which had no regular schedule of trains would very soon create public indignation.

To ensure that these onerous requirements are provided by the railway companies, and also to avoid undue advantage being taken by the companies whose services are so essential to the public welfare, all railways are subject to strict government regulation and supervision. They are by law required to carry a specified minimum number of crew on each train : : : to be equipped with efficient safety devices : : : to operate according to approved schedules : : : to conform to approved passenger and freight tariffs : : : to be subject to inspection by government officials at all times. In addition the companies themselves impose the most rigorous tests upon their train operators and each piece of rolling stock and each mile of track is subject to constant and careful scrutiny.

This, of course, is only as it should be. Unfortunately, however, it does not apply to all forms of commercial transportation — only to railways, which are placed at a decided disadvantage in having to compete with services operated only when the weather permits, and at times when operating costs are lowest. Further, these unsupervised services can, and do discriminate capriciously regarding the nature of the commodities they carry, and the rates they charge. While the railways of Canada pay approximately ten million dollars of taxes each year these other services are notoriously undertaxed, and, unlike the railways which run over their own properties, they increase the risk and discomforts of our already overcrowded highways.

A little thought will convince anyone that this is unfair to the railways and that — since railways are the only dependable agency for the provision of all-the-year-round transportation service — it is also hostile to the public interest. With winter approaching the importance of all-the-year-round service is easily appreciated.

The Canadian National Railways provides the best in railway service, and at all times and under all circumstances it is your efficient and unfailing servant.

Use the C. N. R. for all transportation purposes.

LIVELY DISCUSSION CENTRES UPON IRREGULAR APPOINTMENT

Property Committee of Board of Education Has Lively Session.

CHAIRMAN UNDER FIRE

Following a lively session, lasting the bigger part of two hours, the Board of Education Property Committee last evening recommended the appointment of Oliver C. Wells as caretaker at Queen Alexandra School.

John R. Marshall moved and E. F. Reid seconded the recommendation which came as the result of prolonged discussion. The former added a rider to his motion reflecting on the original action of W. J. Hancock, chairman of the committee, in making the appointment without consulting the committee.

The rider to the motion emphasized that in future when the appointment of a caretaker is to be made all written applications before the board must be considered by the committee before a selection is made.

On the Offensive.

Isaac P. McNabb, who challenged Mr. Hancock's authority to make an appointment without conferring with other members of his committee at the last meeting of the board, was again on the offensive in committee.

Besides nominating someone else for the position, he offered strong condemnation of Mr. Hancock on the ground that the chairman of the committee had acted without consulting other members of the committee; that he had appointed Mr. Wells, who was already in employment elsewhere; and that he had done so without giving any consideration to other applications on file from persons who were unemployed.

Mr. McNabb declined to vote in favor of the motion recommending Mr. Wells' appointment, and expressed the opinion that the rider to the motion did not offer strong enough censure of the action of the chairman of the committee.

Acted Singly.

The circumstances that gave rise to the situation were that during the summer vacation Mr. Hancock appointed Mr. Wells caretaker at Queen Alexandra School, informing him that he was to consider the job as temporary, subject to approval of the school inspector and principal. He acted on his own initiative in good faith, he maintained, because he had been unable to get his committee together.

John R. Marshall, while agreeing that the action taken by Mr. Hancock was most irregular and unfair to those who had applications for the position on file, poured oil on the troubled waters by urging throughout that there was nothing left for the committee to do but to confirm the appointment. He pointed out that the man who had been engaged by Mr. Hancock and who was stated to be giving satisfaction should not be penalized for someone else's mistake. That would be grossly unfair, he considered.

Referred to Committee.

The matter was brought up in committee on instructions from the board. At last board meeting it was resolved that the matter of the appointment should be referred to the committee, and that other applications on file should also receive consideration. The board also asked for a report from the inspector and school principal.

Opening the matter for discussion last evening, Mr. Hancock suggested that the reports from the inspector and school principal should be read. Mr. McNabb strenuously objected on the ground that the question was to be re-opened with no preference being shown to the man who had been engaged by the chairman.

Should Read Reports.

Mr. Reid urged that "the man was sent to Queen Alexandra School temporarily, subject to the approval of the inspector and principal, and those reports should be read now."

Dr. J. J. Craig pointed out that the chairman of the committee had taken the matter into his own hands without consulting his committee, and the question as he saw it was as to whether the committee should endorse that action or rescind it.

"You could not endorse the action without reading those reports, could you?" Mr. Reid retorted.

Mr. McNabb urged that the reading of the reports at that juncture was not in order. The question was open. The committee was not considering just one man, he said.

After the committee had decided that reading of the reports should be withheld until names of other applicants were placed before the committee and considered, the secretary read half a dozen written applications to the committee.

Number of Applications.

Mr. Hancock referred to the great number of applications he had received personally, and remarked that in selecting the man he had he did so in the honest belief that he was a man well suited to the work. He claimed that he had only acted on his own initiative after having been unable to call his committee together.

Mr. McNabb denied that Mr. Hancock had ever called him to a committee meeting which he had not attended. "I called you and asked you if there was to be a meeting and was told you had a man lined up for the job," Mr. McNabb charged. "I take exception to that sort of thing. The notice I received for this meeting is the first I have received for a committee meeting for some time."

"Serious" Situation.

Commenting on the situation as being a "serious" one, Mr. Marshall urged if this man is going to lose his job he is going to suffer for something for which he is not directly responsible. "I am surprised to learn that he had no written application in for the job and was given the appointment over people who did have applications before the board."

"I intend to advance the name of another man who has had an application before the board for some time," Mr. McNabb stated in nominating Percy Telford.

Mr. Reid and Mr. Hancock objected, the main reason being that Mr. Telford was too young. The latter stated he had given Mr. Telford a temporary position in one of the schools and that only that day Telford had quit to take another job.

Urges Consideration.

Mr. McNabb argued that Telford was a native of the city, that he was a property owner and taxpayer, and that he was married and had a family. "He is one of the most conscientious men I know in the whole city, and I consider his application was slighted in an arbitrary manner."

He added that Mr. Telford had left his temporary employment in the schools to accept a job as enumerator—a position for which he had arranged long before he was given temporary employment in the schools.

"I move that Wells' appointment be recommended, subject to approval of the inspector and principal," Mr. Reid said. Mr. Hancock seconded.

"Is it your wish that the reports of the inspector and principal be read now?" Mr. Hancock queried.

"Is it for you to rule. You are chairman. I have objected, but the chairman is the one who has the ruling," Mr. McNabb remarked.

Dr. Craig Objects.

Dr. Craig also objected to the reports being read, and Mr. McNabb moved that Telford's appointment be considered.

"His application is not before the board," the chairman countered.

"It is before the board just as much as Wells' application was," Mr. McNabb retorted.

"There are possibly one hundred or more applications on file," Mr. Reid suggested hopefully.

Mr. Marshall—"The question in my mind is as to whether or not there is a vacancy. I think we are held by the action of the committee chairman. That the whole thing was irregular is acknowledged, but it will have to stand. If we do not confirm the appointment we are going to impose a hardship on Wells by letting him out because someone else made a blunder. This man has been given the appointment."

"I am in sympathy with Mr. Marshall's remarks," Mr. McNabb stated, "but so far as the matter being re-opened is concerned that was the wish of the board."

Could Not Support Move.

Mr. Marshall said he could not support a recommendation in favor of Telford's appointment in view of the injustice that would be worked on Wells. "When Wells was appointed he was permanently appointed subject to his work meeting the approval of the inspector and the principal.

"If we do confirm the appointment it doesn't say we agree with the manner in which the appointment was made," Mr. Marshall said.

After some further discussion, the reports were read and both the inspector and principal spoke in highest terms of the industry and efficiency so far displayed by the new caretaker at Queen Alexandra School.

Another matter considered by the committee was a bill from Coleman Brothers for $42.75 over and above contract price stipulated for varnishing at the Collegiate Institute.

An employee of Coleman Brothers, who had charge of the work, claimed that owing to some foreign substance on some of the woodwork at the school, which he thought might have been oil, applications of varnish had been soaked into the wood and caused considerable trouble.

Asked why he had not followed the specifications laid down by the architect calling for the washing of the woodwork with warm water and washing soda, Coleman's employee said that if he had worked according to that specification a great amount of damage would have resulted to the graining.

The committee recommended that 50 per cent. of the bill for additional costs tendered by Coleman Brothers be offered in settlement.

STUDY COURSE FOR WORKERS

Workers' Educational Association Hold First Session of Season.

BRANCH AT KEENE?

With an attendance of more than 1.. :y, the Workers' Educational Association opened its new seasonal series of lectures at the Collegiate Institute last night.

New members were welcomed by the president, Osborne Smith, and Adrian Macdonald of the Normal school staff outlined the study course in Psychology which he will conduct in the course of twenty lectures.

Mr. Smith said that the new interest displayed by the larger number of both men and women this season afforded substantial encouragement to the executive of the Association, and he expressed confidence that Mr. Macdonald's exposition of Psychology would prove an interesting and profitable study.

Next Monday night's meeting will begin at 7.30 p.m. in room 51 at the Collegiate. The Association is confined to workers, and those who have been planning to register for this season should not postpone their applications, as the first meetings will deal with the groundwork of Mr. Macdonald's subject.

A. E. Borland is secretary, and Milton Clysdale is treasurer. The cost of the course is only a nominal fee. It is sponsored by Ontario's universities, Toronto, Western, Queen's and McMaster, for the benefit of working men and women who desire to broaden their knowledge.

Propose Keene Course

Mr. Borland informed The Examiner today that the Association is considering the organization of a branch at Keene. The universities hope that this form of extension work may be carried into the rural communities, and it is believed that the Otonabee centre affords promising material for an experiment which might be broadly developed through the province. It is understood that J. E. R. Munroe, principal of Queen Alexandra School, who was in charge of the local course last winter, would be available if the idea appe.. to a sufficient number of the Otonabee people.

BUILDING LOTS ARE BEING SOLD

REAL ESTATE CHANGING.

Sale of seven lots in the Victoria Heights district of the west end was cited today by Herb J. McCannan as evidence of recently developing interest in local real estate. Within the last three weeks he has also sold two houses in the south end, on Prince and Aylmer streets, and has experienced an increasing demand for business.

Judge S. L. Sp..ks has leased the Toronto Savings ... Loan Company's spacious house at the southeast corner of Belmont and Weller streets, and expects to occupy it in the near future.

R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, manager of the Dominion Bank, has taken Dr. N. H. Sutton's house at 82 Dublin street.

F. D. Olman, assistant manager of the Kresge Store, has moved into the Shortly residence at 546 Aylmer street.

H. M. Shaw, new manager of the Maple Leaf Milling Company in Peterborough, is living i.. the T. A. Brown house at Monaghan Road and Hopkins avenue.

R. W. Kennedy, who has been transferred from Chatham to the managership of the local Metropolitan Store, is settled in the Adair Apartment, Homewood avenue.

C. R. Stone, formerly of Timmins, recently appointed district manager of the Heintz Company, is occupying the house at 616 Walkerfield avenue.

C. N. Hall, district m... of the Mutual Life Company succeeding George Gibbons, has taken the Homer Meyers house on Weller street.

W. J. Moorhead, recently transferred from Sault Ste. Marie to Peterborough as manager of the Agnew-Surpass Shoe Store, has moved into the W. L. Ferguson house on Morrow street.

C. G. Collins, appointed president and manager of R. Neill Limited several months ago, is living at 403 Monaghan road.

These are only a few of the residential transfers that have passed through Mr. McCannan's hands in recent weeks, and may be regarded as a healthy sign of local real estate conditions.

WOMAN TO EXPLORE SUNKEN FREIGHTER

Woman Diver Only Weighs 112 Pounds—Plans to Investigate Wreck.

WINDSOR, Ont., ct. 16. (CP).—If expected salvage equipment arrives to-day from Toronto, a four-foot, nine-inch woman, weighing just 112 pounds will don a diving suit and descend 40 feet into the depths of Lake Erie. This will mark the first step to salvage the schooner New Brunswick of its valuable cargo of black walnut and white oak.

Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman of Brooklyn, who is equally at home below the water surface or in the air, will carry 153 pounds of suiting when she descends for the first time to determine the exact position of the vessel which sank during an August storm in 1859, shortly after clearing from Wallaceburg for Montreal.

The Brooklyn matron located the vessel from the air Saturday and immediately got in touch with her Toronto backers, F. H. Anderson and Carlyle Rowntree, and asked them to despatch the necessary equipment immediately. It was expected here to-day.

The vessel was owned by Newton C. Eberts, Chatham and much contrary legend has grown up around it since it sank 75 years ago with the loss of one life, that of a colored man whose body was washed ashore later.

YELVERTON.

An event of unusual interest took place at the home of Mrs. John Wright, Yelverton, on Sunday, when about fifty family guests gathered from various points, including Fenelon Falls, Lindsay, Orono, Kinmount and Belleville. The occasion marked the 73rd birthday anniversary of the hostess. Many beautiful and appropriate gifts were presented to the aged lady during the day. At the conclusion of the happy day the guests left for their respective homes with the anticipation of meeting again on a similar occasion when another milestone marks the passing of a year well spent in the service of God and man.

On Thursday evening the W.A. of the church held a most enjoyable crockinole party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson. Ten games were played progressively, with Misses Norma and Marjorie Stacey tied for the ladies, each having won eight games. A MATTER OF INTEREST.

It was announced a few days ago by Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Federal Minister of Finance, that the rate of interest on savings deposits will be reduced from 2½ per cent. as at present to 2 per cent. on November 1 by all the chartered banks, the postoffice savings bank and the Ontario Government savings office, that all other banks will make a similar interest cut on the first of December, and that a month later the trust and loan companies will reduce their interest rates by the same amount.

The Examiner agrees with the Kingston Whig-Standard that what the public would like to know is whether Mr. Rhodes, who thus arbitrarily reduces the rate which banks must pay for money, is also arbitrarily going to reduce the rate at which banks must loan money to the public.

If there is no reduction in the rates charged by the banks on money loaned it is difficult to see how the full benefit heralded for the cut in interest rates on deposits is to be realized, even although that step may have the effect of forcing a certain amount of money into business.

The saving deposits rate has been decreased from 3 to 2½ and now to 2 per cent. since May, 1931, but, as the Whig-Standard points out, while bank investments and loans to Government have risen and larger cash reserves have accumulated in the vaults of the banks, there has been none of the expected expansion of commercial loans.

LEVEL CROSSING ADVICE.

Level crossing accidents have been so often in the headlines recently that a bulletin on this subject, just issued by the Ontario Safety League, is a very timely contribution.

Some of these accidents are inexplicable; they occur under circumstances that would make it seem as if those involved had almost gone out of their way to run into danger.

There are, in other cases, conditions that afford an explanation of the accident, and this class of accident is covered in the League's bulletin.

In the first place, there have been smash-ups on level crossings because cars stalled on the tracks.

In this connection, it is advisable never to cross a railway track in high gear, but to shift to intermediate or low at a reasonable distance away from the crossing.

The League's warning points out that all crossings should be considered dangerous, whether guarded or not; crossing bells and signals are sometimes out of order; watchmen or gate operators may be off duty.

Crossings where there are more than one track have often proved death-traps.

No motorist should cross directly behind a train that has just gone by; another train may be coming in the opposite direction on the other track.

And finally, it is well to remember that a train running 40 miles an hour goes 59 feet in a second and cannot be stopped in much less than one-quarter of a mile.

On the other hand, an automobile running 25 miles an hour can be stopped in 58 feet.

The onus of stopping, looking and listening at railway crossings is therefore a direct responsibility of the drivers of motor cars.

BACK TO THE LAND.

The fact that Hon. W. A. Gordon, the Federal Minister of Labor, has announced special railway rates for Canadians who are desirous of returning to the land will serve to call attention to the fact that, although not a great deal has been heard about the back-to-the-land movement, it has attained a considerable degree of success.

It will be remembered that this scheme was launched by Hon. Mr. Gordon three years ago, the arrangement being that the Federal and Provincial Governments and the municipality would each contribute $200 to every family participating in the plan, and that all the Canadian provinces, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, have since adopted the policy.

The results, while not startling in so far as the number of persons placed on farms is concerned, have at all events been important and encouraging, for the records show that some 17,201 have been allocated to a new start in life as farmers.

The largest number reported is from Quebec where 5,569 new settlers have been placed; Saskatchewan is next in line with 3,370, and British Columbia third with 2,709. The figures in other provinces are as follows: Manitoba, 2,445; Nova Scotia, 1,902; Ontario, 1,870, and Alberta, 1,757.

The best feature of the movement is that more than 17,000 persons have been taken off relief lists and have been given a new chance to make good and to become independent members of the society.

Some of them have failed or will fail, others will not find the change one leading to wealth, but it is certain that large numbers will have a much better living and greater ease of mind than if they had continued to live on relief.

The new railway rates should accelerate the movement, for they provide a passenger rate of 1.725 cents per mile for adult settlers, and for the carrying of their effects one-half the regular schedule will be charged.

CHANGING THE B.N.A. ACT.

It is not surprising to find Hon. Fernand Rinfret, former Secretary of State, informing a Quebec gathering that the Liberal party will fight the proposed amendments to the British North America Act "tooth and nail."

French-Canadians have always regarded the B. N. A. Act as the bulwark of their liberties, and they have opposed any changes in the constitution because of the danger that in altering the Act some of the privileges granted them would disappear.

To assail any suggestion of an amended Act is therefore considered good political strategy, and much will be heard along this line when the representatives of the Dominion and of the provinces get together soon to discuss the question of giving the Federal Government greater power in certain matters now under provincial control.

It is recognized by many Canadians that the Act passed in 1867 is out of line with modern conditions and modern problems, and that there is need of revision.

The hostility of Quebec to such a step is a problem, but not a problem that is incapable of being solved.

Our French-Canadian friends have a right to defend the liberties granted them by the British North America Act, but they are sensible people, and if they were given the assurance that in the alterations proposed in the Act all these liberties would be retained, they would be willing surely to discuss dispassionately and reasonably amendments to the legislation that are apparently badly needed and that would facilitate the solution of some of our pressing problems.

REAL POLICE SCIENCE.

All during the two years that detective forces, with consummate skill, were building up evidence in the Lindbergh kidnapping case, most New York newspapers were fully aware of what was going on.

But although they had in their files information that they would have given their eyeteeth to have published, they had promised Department of Justice agents to keep silent until the proper time came to divulge those facts.

And not one of them, not an editor nor reporter nor desk man, failed to keep faith.

This fine co-operation between press and police is little less remarkable than the amazing skill with which the modern scientific policemen engaged in the investigation worked out their amazing case.

They built up a web of circumstances and facts from which no one could have escaped. And then, having created their hypothetical picture, they reached out and drew in their man with an uncanny and inevitable skill.

Conan Doyle, Van Dine, J. S. Fletcher and the late lamented Edgar Wallace created crime mysteries that were solved in almost miraculous fashion.

Yet not one of them ever invented a tale so complex, so pitiful and so mysterious as that which has been pieced together by the scientific brain of the modern flesh and blood policeman.—Vancouver Sun.

THE BEER SELLING POLICY.

There have been a number of resolutions passed by church associations and none of them approve of the freer sale of beer in Ontario. Of course, it is expected that church bodies would look at the thing that way. It might be argued that if these church members had in the past been staunch temperance people on election day they would not now find it necessary to have recourse to the rather ineffective method of passing resolutions, but for the moment that is not the point.

The resolution idea is going beyond the church courts. The Board of Control in Toronto decided to advise the City Council that it would be well to tell E. G. Odette, the Liquor Commissioner, that some of the authorities granted in that city should be suspended, and that beverage rooms should be confined to premises where the traveling public could find accommodation.

The term "mushroom" is being frequently applied to places where beverage rooms are being opened. That means that premises have been rigged up for the sole purpose of selling beer and wine; those who operate them are not in the hotel business at all, and we believe it is an error to continue such licensing. This province has a law known as the Liquor Control Act, and when Government stores were opened for selling liquor it was stated the desire was not to make revenue but rather to control sale. In the present state of affairs the "control" feature is being shoved far to one side, and the selling end of the beer and wine business is being given latitude which is bound to arouse antagonism.

We beli eve that in a matter of such importance the policy to be followed should be the policy approved by the elected members of the Ontario Legislature. In making such statement this paper is fully aware that power was granted by the amendment to the Liquor Control Act to issue licenses for the selling of beer and wine. The exact wording of the amendment is this:

69a. (1) The Board, subject to the provisions of this Act and the regulations, may issue authorities for the sale of beer and wine in standard hotels and in such other premises as the regulations may provide and define.

There is fairly wide scope given in subsequent provisions regarding the places which might receive authorities. Our contention is that the matter of assuming such proportions, and the protests are coming so close together, that the matter is one one which comes within the classification of public policy. It is something which affects the lives of many of our people, and it is a further fact that much haste was shown in the granting of the first authorities. They were given out actually before the regulations governing sale had been framed.

It is also a fact that there is nothing to indicate that the amendment to the Liquor Control Act under which one man now has the authority to issue permits where he sees fit represents the desire of those who were elected to the Legislature on June 19. In many other departments things which were done by the late Government are not done to-day, and for that reason there is nothing in existence to indicate that the amendments of the late Government represent the wishes of the one which has been elected but not yet touched into action or called upon to make decisions. We feel that the elected members should have much to say in the fashioning of the course to be followed in a matter which comes so clearly within the purview of what is clearly a question of policy.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Every home in Peterborough is assured of at least two callers this week, for the voters' list enumerators are now doing their rounds.

There will be no complaints this year about closing places of business on Armistice Day. The anniversary happens to fall on Sunday.

Just when daylight saving has been abandoned for the year along comes the Chatham News with the suggestion that the system has been dropped just when it should be starting.

Another sign that winter is just around the corner is the fact that the official fishing season came to an end on Monday.

NEED REPRESENTATIVES

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—In the early centuries there was no manufacturing as we know it. It was all done at home. As there were no railroads or any other kind of roads there was no internal and of course no international trade. The people were on land. They lived in little villages, fed their herds and flocks on "common pastures" and lived a quiet, isolated existence close to the bosom of their mother earth. By and by as the sparse population increased improvements were thought of and leading men began to loom up. Large farms and big flocks with improved breeding was introduced — and the "commons" were enclosed that is, taken away from the peasant. These peasants had to work for the big men and thus our agricultural laborers' class arose. As yet these people had no votes and they had to take what they got or starve.

Centuries after mechanical invention did for the implement maker who worked at home what big farms had done for the peasants. Factories arose and with them arose the employees. Thus both on and off the land there came to be the great employed class which we have now. The discovery of America or other foreign lands kept them all going until in course of time these improvements made production so easy that they have now improved the working-class out of work to a very large and increasing extent. That is where we are now. As time went on, business of all kinds was systematized and ruled by parliament and big business stepped in and controlled parliament. The employed class got votes but did not make any use of them. They have never had any representatives in parliament. To keep them in tow, political parties, with leaders representing big business were devised. The people were content and are yet to follow the leaders of these parties. So long as people were satisfied to elect the representatives of big business which has come to be all business, the employed class has had to shout their political party war-cry and to bamboozle themselves into the very stupid idea that their own class needs no representation in parliament. Hence, after big business has got all it wants the employed class often finds itself with nothing at all. It has votes but no representatives and no voice. It might just as well have no votes for all the good it does them. They actually demand that their representatives shall follow the leaders and not represent the mass of the people at all. So long as there was a great demand they were provided with employment and good wages by big business. But when the demand was supplied and fell off the employed class was no where and that is where they are now still shouting however for their leaders (big business) and utterly forgetting their own interests.

RATEPAYERS ASSOCIATION

Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir,—In Friday's Examiner "Ratepayer" asks for more detailed information regarding the facts presented by the Ratepayers Association to the City Council at their meeting Oct. 1st.

The association in complying with this request, regards such enquiries as an evidence of a live interest in municipal finance and they will endeavor to furnish information to any ratepayers on present civic financial conditions, and possible future easing of the burdensome problem of taxation.

Further inquiries will receive our careful attention. The securing of this data means a lot of time and labor and we would ask voters to preserve the information given and use it for the information of others.

Sources of information:

The data given is obtained from our own city records, from correspondence with officials of other Ontario cities, and from the Citizens Research Institute of Canada. The Institute makes a specialty of taxation problems of all kinds with the object of furnishing information that will help to discard abuses and assist in improving general conditions.

The chairman and secretary of the Ratepayers Association are members of the local Institute Committee and are in a position to obtain first hand information.

The general policy of the Ratepayers Association is that private property shall not be taxed to produce corporation profits, and that renewals of fixed assessments must cease when present contracts expire, and no evasive compromises be considered.

That the overburdened taxpayer is now putting up over $118,000 per year is as "Taxpayer" asserts a startling condition that the property owners will not continue when they know the facts. The numerous voters we have interviewed are practically a unit in the endorsation of our policy to eradicate this absurd business practice. There has been no financial leadership given to the ratepayer, he has been left in the dark, a condition we hope to remedy as far as possible.

Referring to the specific questions asked by "Ratepayer" he asks, can it be that one dollar in every eight (should be seven) of our taxes goes for the relief of exempted industries?

In round numbers the councils estimated expense for 1934 is $931-000, about $823,000 of this amount is raised by a tax of 37.6 mills, and the balance is provided by frontage and garbage taxes, license fees, rentals etc.

One seventh of $823,000 is $117,-000 and as the exemption loss is $118,625 it means that over one dollar in seven goes for exemption benefits, a house taxed at $140.00 per year pays over $20 into corporation profits, a snug $100 every five years, and not one dollar of this goes for any city service. Why continue such an absurd, unfair business practice?

Concerning the addition of "about six mills" that this exemption adds to our tax rate. We are informed at the city hall that one mill on the dollar yields approximately $20,000 and as our annual tax loss is $118,625, it is almost six times the amount realized from one mill, and over twice our tax levy for direct relief.

We would hail it as a great achievement to get rid of the direct relief load but here is a chance knocking at our doors to get rid of over twice that burden. Why carry an unnecessary load?

By refusing renewals of fixed assessments,—if the present rate of taxation continues—the following annual savings will automatically occur.

At the end of 1934	$ 44,984.29
Add. at end of 1937	2,692.52
Add. at end of 1938	983.44
Add. at end of 1939	8,307.48
Add. at end of 1941	55,762.96
Add. at end of 1942	5,895.46

A total annual saving of $118,625.14

It will be noticed that the immediate gain at the end of this year is almost $45,000 and increases each year until 1942 when the last vestige of the incubus expires.

Why lose over one million dollars every nine years?

We think it is time to "wake up," in a letter to follow we will answer "Ratepayers" inquiry regarding the City Council's responsibility in this matter, the alternative in case the council should fail to act for the people, the ratepayers' responsibility, and the Ratepayers Association's plans and policy for a better taxation outlook.

We invite a close study and an active interest in these matters by all citizens, if points are not clear please make inquiries, voters should know the facts and then vote for definite results.

Yours truly,
The Ratepayers Association.

What's in The NAME

of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

SUDBURY, ONTARIO

This city owes its existence to the C.P.R. for it was in blazing a trail for the new railway that John Bowland blazed a trail, in 1883, to what is now known as Sudbury. The story goes that, becoming lost in a storm, he landed on the north shore of Ramsay Lake instead of the south shore. The axe he used to blaze the trail is preserved in the city hall.

In February, 1883, Father Joseph Specht, S.J., offered the Holy Sacrifice of the mass upon a stump. He was succeeded by Father Jean-Baptiste Nolan, S.J., who named the post as St. Ann of the Pines. A man named Worthington, C.P.R. superintendent of construction, recalled other memories and renamed the town Sudbury, after a town in England of the same name.

A Thought

WHERE IS OPPORTUNITY?

When Abraham Lincoln wrote to his half-brother he told him to stay where he was and quit wandering around.

The wanderlust is but a polite definition for a tramp.

Looking longingly at some imagined opportunity far away is proof that your vision is visionary.

Opportunity is not over there unless you take opportunity with you. Proof: What we call "opportunity" will not amount to a hill of beans unless you are prepared to handle it.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

A GREAT LOYALIST SOLDIER.

On this date, in 1831, there died at Glasgow, Scotland, Lieutenant General David Shank, a Scot who was one of the founders of Upper Canada. He must have left Scotland when very young, for in 1777 he was accepted as a lieutenant in the Queen's Rangers, of which J. Graves Simcoe had just taken command. A captain the next year, he took part in the fighting at Brandywine; after the surrender by Cornwallis and the Rangers disbanded Shank returned to England on half pay. When Simcoe decided to revive the Rangers for service in Upper Canada, Shank was one of the very first selected and was given charge of the transportation to Quebec of the detachment which had been recruited in England.

Simcoe always regarded Shank as both military adviser and close friend and never failed to commend Shank to his superiors He was in command at Fort Niagara in September, 1794, commanded the rangers on the Miami and attended several pow-wows with the Indians, by whom he was highly regarded. Promoted to lieutenant colonel in 1798 he was placed on half pay in 1803 but in 1812 was recalled to act as lieutenant colonel of the Canadian Fencibles. Like every one in official and military circles Shank shared in the lavish gifts of lands, receiving 1,500 acres "in a township immediately behind Burlington Bay" After the peace the old soldier settled down on his estate near Ancaster, but in 1821 got homesick and returned to Scotland to die; but not for 10 years and then in poverty. His lands in Upper Canada were of no money value

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

By H. W. L. MAHODO

THE U. S. REGARDLESS OF LIVES.

Some revelations made in the investigation conducted by Senator Nye shock. Two American admirals and one Japanese admiral were shown to have aided in attempting to secure from Turkey and Japan contracts for American-made war craft. Admirals trained to fight each other in war. But unscrupulous to the degree of helping each other to make war material sales.

Hearings at the Congressional investigation disclosed the existence of a close agreement between the Electric Boat Company of Groton, Connecticut, and Vickers Limited of Britain. These two companies virtually dominate the world submarine-building situation. Their "good business methods" were revealed when testimony was given which showed that seven years ago, when Chili and Peru were involved in the Tacna Arica dispute, the Electric Boat Company was using every means to secure contracts from Peru for submarines, while on the other hand their ally, Vickers Ltd. was working just as hard to sell the same kind of destroyers to Chili. They collaborated to stimulate conflict between the two nations for the purpose of making profitable sales.

Such is the type of facts revealed by the Nye investigating committee. The list could be indefinitely duplicated, with each incident telling its own sordid story of greed for profit, regardless of the human lives involved. Senator Nye characterized the revelations truly when he said, "A most sordid tale of bribery, duplicity, and resort to the use of agencies of government to the end that there may be profit for the makers of ships, guns, powder, and other things entering into the programs of wars and preparation for it."

Do you wonder that protests have come to Washington from across the Atlantic, and from South America, and Mexico, and Spain?

VIOLA LLMA, HITLER'S NEW GERMANY.

Viola Llma is a gifted platform speaker. In conversation she is animated and thought-provoking. She is not a yes-yes conversationalist. An idea in her mind becomes rugged. The thought is kept safe in a mental fortress. An argument is to her liking. She loves to find common folks and common sense.

While in Europe she met prominent Fascists and Nazis. But she is not taken by either. A comment on Hitler's New Germany reveals her quick estimation of that leader, "His discipline, and drive, and enthusiasm are magnificent."

Visualize Viola Llma surrounded by German youth conditions. "Then I went to Germany for ten days and saw something quite different. It was a thrilling experience to see youth with something to live for. Whatever else may be said about him, Hitler has given them self-respect, courage, and a new vitality."

Miss Llma has begun to concrete her ideals and ambitions. She reminds one of Joan of Arc. Joan was a young maid of sixteen summers, without education, came from a humble home, appeared before the Court of France, and in childish ardor plead for the privilege of raising the siege of Orleans. She was driven away as mad, but the soul of purity and the determined will of the child gained for her another opportunity to plead her cause. As she approaches the ruler, her step is that of a queen; her eyes flash the fire of inspiration, through falling tears of patriotic sympathy and love; her plea is piteous and earnest in the extreme. "Only give me the commission," she cried, "and I will raise the siege of Orleans and place again the crown upon the brow of the deposed monarch." The commission was finally given, and we see her in male attire and mounted upon a white horse. As she enters the camp of the disheartened soldiers, her girlish voice in clarion tones shouts the signal to advance. Her saber leaps from its scabbard and the army is inspired by the angelic leader, Viola Ilma pleads to lead and inspire American youth. But?

THE BROWSER.

Pat wants to know why the Browser, after praising a story by Evan Evans for a couple of hundred words should recommend it to people as "high class trash". . . . He thinks that's a churlish way to be writing about books that please the Browser, and at best a back-handed compliment. . . . But let the poor old abused Browser explain how he feels about books. For him there is very little that's mystical about writing. He does not divide all books into good books and bad; for him there are many kinds of books, almost as many as there are human beings, and he keeps a different measuring rod for different kinds of books. He would not examine Ogden Nash as he examines John Galsworthy, nor Dashiell Hammett as he would T. S. Stribling. . . . If he's reading a "mystery", he compares it with "The Thin Man" and not with Thomas Mann's "Magic Mountain". And sometimes, even when he likes a book, he knows it is trash; and even when he dislikes a book, he admires the ambition and inspiration of its author. . . He likes a good game of bridge, too, but he knows it is not as deep a pleasure as playing with his young son; and he likes to watch football, but he would not compare any game with any great book. . . . Just this last week, the Browser read two books which approach each other in content somewhat, and yet are worlds apart in intention and significance. He liked one; but he would it think of using the word "liked" with reference to the other. . . . The one he "liked" is Philip Allingham's "Cheapjack: Being the True History of a Young Man's Adventures as a Fortune-Teller, Grafter, Knocker-Worker, and Mounted Pitcher on the Market Places and Fairgrounds of a Modern but Still Romantic England". . . . It's the gay story of a young English gentleman who "went down in the world" and became a palmist and peddler of gimcracks at the fairs, feasts and wakes of England. He enjoys the life, has no pity for himself, and tells his story in an easy, attractive way. You like his story, you'd recommend it to a friend, and you agree with William McFee's judgment that it is "good writing, good reading and good reporting". But even the cheerful "aristocrat turned mountebank" does not make his England seem romantic.

But "Boy and Girl Tramps of America" by Thomas Minehan is another kind of book entirely. Thomas Minehan was a student, a candidate for degree of doctor of philosophy, who went on the road to write a thesis, "A Study of Attitudes of Transient Men and Boys" for the University of Minnesota. He collected "500 life histories of boys and girls he met on the bum, 1,000 samples of conversations, and over 2,500 opinions, ideas, and attitudes expressed by all classes of transients under all conditions". But he wasn't content to draw up tables and analyze his data statistically, he HAD to write a book—and this is the book that ought to win one of the Pulitzer prizes for 1934. It's a book to make you shiver and curse, and it ought to make the tears run down your cheeks with the pity and the horor of the story that Minehan tells of the kids that are wandering the highways of America today and living in its jungles and learning to lie, beg, steal, fight, and scratch to keep their poor undernourished bodies and souls together. . . . The best youngster of all was "Texas", forced out of his home because he didn't want to be a burden to the family and in one year "from a bright, witty, American schoolboy, full of dreams and vigor, he turned into a predacious, cunning person, whose habits and actions differed as much from those of the American schoolboy he had been as the actions of a meebera of one African tribe differ from those of another".

The Browser enjoyed "Cheapjack". He did not enjoy "Boy and Girl Tramps of America". He suffered over it, and cringed before its ghastly implications. Both were worth publishing; but "Cheapjack" did not NEED to be printed; while the other DEMANDED to be made into a book The difference between the two books is as great as the difference between the young aristocrat who became a palmist and peddler of hair wavers and the fine young "Texas" who swore he would not become a bum—and became one. . . . Quotations from an article by Harry Saltpeter in Edward Valentine Mitchell's "Literary Observer": "The man who will deny himself Thorne Smith and P. G. Wodehouse because he has not completed his devoirs to Thomas Hardy and Dostoyevsky is a misinstructed ass rather than a lover of good books." . . . The Browser has a lot more to say, several other books to mention, a considerable amount of gossip to set down, lightly and cheerfully in his usual manner, but somehow he feels like quiting. So that's all from

SENIOR GOLDS IN SLOW MOVE

CHANGES UNIMPORTANT.

TORONTO, Oct. 16. — (C.P.)— Trading inteerst was concentrated to-day in a few of the younger producers of the gold group, Siscoe, Macassa, Sylvanite, San Antonio and Central Patricia and some of the development issues, including Pickle Crow, and God's Lake. There were no price gains of more than a few cents. Senior golds were slow with exception of Tech Hughes, which sold down 5 cents to $4.10 and price changes were unimportant. Silvers and Base Metals were slow but firm.

Business in the white metal stocks tapered off sharply from the heavy volume of Monday. With exception of White Eagle, Eldorado and Premier, which eased narrowly, prices were firm.

Heavy accumulation of Pickle Crow tilted the price up to $1.95 and it closed at $1.90 for a gain of 3 cents. The close was also higher for Siscoe, Sylvanite and Macassa.

DOLLAR WHEAT THING OF PAST

So Declares Hon. G. H. Thomas at Banquet to Sir William Clark.

CANADA PRAISED.

(By Thomas F. Chamnion, C.P. Staff Writer.)

LONDON, October 16 (C.P. Cable). — The trend in Canada today is towards the Government assuming large responsibility in social affairs, declared Sir William Clark at a luncheon given in his honor this afternoon by the Royal Empire Society.

Sir William was guest of honor on the occasion of his relinquishing the post of British High Commissioner in Canada, which he had occupied since 1928. Lady Bessborough, wife of the Governor-General of Canada; Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner here, and Mrs. Ferguson were among those present.

"When I first went to Canada, she was a very strong apost'e of rugged individualism," said Sir William. "There was a strong tendency to regard her troubles as being due to a departure from doctrine, he thought.

Since he first arrived in Canada, he added, "there has been a big change, especially in regard to unemployed insurance, to which oth parties are now committed although everybody recognized there are special difficulties peculiar to Canada.

"The Dominion has won gallantly through the depression, her credit is wholly unimpaired, and there is no reason why the recovery should not continue."

Britain could help with British capital and British migrants, he added.

J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, said that considerable misgivings had originaly been felt about sending a High Commissioner to Canada, and Sir William Clark's appointment was an experimnet that was magnificently justified.

In a passing reference to dollar wheat, Mr. Thomas said: "Nobody knows better than Sir William and myself that a fatal thing it was to encourage this talk when everybody with practical knowledge knows it will never happen again. The sooner we face that fact of the world situation the better."

ELECTRIC END SHOWING GAIN

$10,000 Gain in Earnings of Electric Department of Utilities Reported.

A gain in earnings of almost $10,000 in the electric department of the Peterborough Utilities during the first eight months of 1934 over the same period last year, was reported by Utilities Manager Ross Dobbin at a meeting of the Commission this afternoon. The recent increase in power rates is principally responsible for the gain.

A profit of $437.29 was shown for the period compared with a loss of $9,350.12 last year. Waterworks department earnings are considerably down this year over 1933, with total earnings for the eight months at $1,762.70 as compared with $4,238.44.

Gas Department.

Manager Harry Beal of the Gas Department reported earnings in his department as $4,522.54 to the end of September. Profit for the same period last year was $7,414.03. The decreases in revenues have resulted from reduced consumption among both domestic and industrial consumers, Mr. Beal reported. The revenue revenue of the Department improved during the month of September, however, showing an advance of about $60 over September, 1933.

The Commission decided to superannuate James Henderson, an operator in the sub-station for the past 15 years. He is 69 years of age and the sum of $10 per week was set as his pension for the coming year. His position will be filled from the present staff, Mr. Dobbin said.

BROKER'S OPINIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Redmond & Co.—Do not think industrials will have much difficulty in reaching the 98-99 zone this week.

Harris Upham—The market has it's major constructive influence at present, the belief that Washington is disposed to give business a show.

Standard Facts and Forecasts

Standard industrial stock index advances 3, 4 points last week. This was not particularly impressive in itself but looks better when considered in a series of weekly advances. Four weeks of creeping advance in this market is good evidence that foundations are solid. Purchase of stock in the inflation argument is likely to result unsatisfactorily because the buyer will be tempted to sell for the wrong reasons and at the wrong time. Business recovery and equity values along with it could make considerable progress as the governments real intentions come to be better understood but the rise in stocks is likely to be halting and irregular as long as the reasons for it remain unspectacular. Yesterday's market with it's lack of steam was a fair sample of what can be expected.

MORRO CASTLE

port. Freeman, according to the testimony, the report says, fought the fire and later went forward and left go the anchor.

Five specifications are charged against Captain Warms, accusing him of delay "in sending out wireless distress signals" and "unduly jeopardizing the lives of passengers and crew," and of failure to stop the vessel after he was "aware that the superstructure was on fire and the vessel was steaming into a fresh breeze.

In addition, he was charged with failure to have fire hose ready for use, to have the fire doors closed and with having an insufficient number of men on watch at the time of the fire.

Abbott, formerly of Yarmouth, N.S., is charged in the report with failure to go below to the engine room and fire rooms "to direct the engine room crew in the performance of their duty."

Hackey, the report charges, failed to supervise the proper lowering of lifeboats, and Hansen is charged with failure to carry out the ship master's orders to stand by and assist passengers into lifeboats.

PIVOT ISSUES HOLD INTEREST

Distillery, Utility and Construction Issues Harbor More Gains Than Losses.

OILS FEATURE.

TORONTO, Oct. 16 (C.P.). — Pivotal groups supplied a substantial margin of gains over losses in to-day's industrial share market with volume spotty. The oils furnished active leadership on the upside and distillery, utility and construction issues harbored more gains than losses.

Imperial Oil registered a new high for the year at 16, and closed at 15 7-16 unchanged, and International Petroleum closed at 30 for a small advance. British American recorded a gain of ⅝ to 14¼, and McColl Preferred advanced ½ to 69½.

Heavy buying in Ford "A" was a feature of the interlisted section, and the issue closed ⅝ higher at 23¼. Nickel gained ¼ and Smelters a point.

THREE GUILTY OF EXTORTION

Case Goes to Jury

After a trial in which only two witnesses were heard, one for the prosecution and one for the defence charges of extortion against Frank Taylor, Jr., his wife, Rose, and his mother, Mrs. Mae Turnbull, was given to the jury early this afternoon.

Witness for the prosecution was "Mr. D" who alleged he had been forced to pay $200 to Taylor and Rose on threats of being exposed to his wife after what he claimed was an innocent visit to the Taylor home. He said he had been discovered by Taylor and Mrs. Turnbull, seated on a Chesterfield with Rose who wore a dressing gown.

Mrs. Taylor, weeping at times, denied participation in any plot to extort money from "Mr. D" although she admitted having signed a recipt which was exhibited in court and which purported to release "Mr. D" from any threat in connection with his relations with herself.

Denies Misconduct

She denied misconduct with "Mr. D" although yesterday he had testified to misconduct with her on two occasions.

Opening a preview of the defence evidence which he was about to call, Mr. Haines recalled at the reopening of the extortion trial the threatening "Spike" letters sent to Crown Counsel Norman Newton.

"Those letters were the work of a crank. Similar ones were sent to the Prime Minister of Ontario and others," said defence counsel.

Mr. Newton had also received a box of candy, which was supposed to have been poisoned, but was found to be harmless.

Mr. Haines said it likewise had been sent by a crank.

"These three accused had absolutely nothing to do with these letters. They were in jail during all that time," counsel declared.

Mrs. Rosa Taylor was then called to the witness stand.

She said she was 24 years old and had been married eight years.

After having seen Mr. D. in his store on several occasions, Mrs. Taylor said one day in the summer of 1931, he had driven her home. It was raining at the time and when they arrived at the Major Street house he asked her if she would see him again and she refused.

Called Again in Few Days.

"A few days later, he called in his car and said he was going out to collect some bills in the country and asked me to go for a drive. I told him my husband would be home early, and he said we would not be long. I said I would go.

"He stopped the car in the country and put his arm around me and asked me if I liked him. He said he liked me. He stopped on the way home and bought me a box of chocolates.

"A few days later he came around again and asked me to go out for a drive. I said I had a headache and he said a drive would help it," witness related.

"Did he give you any gifts?"

"Yes, two pair of stockings, a silk scarf and a pair of gloves," witness replied.

She and Mr. D. had gone for several drives that summer and fall.

Coming down to D's visit in April, 1932, Mrs. Taylor said he had called around to see her. They were sitting on the chesterfield together, Mr. D. with his arm around her when her husband and Mrs. Turnbull came in.

She had on a kimona.

"My husband was very angry. Mr. D. jumped up and picked up a book. "He told my husband he had come around to collect a bill," said witness.

To Crown Counsel Newton Mrs. Taylor said she was married at St. Peter's by Father Flannery when she was 16. Her maiden name was Rosa La Sace of Wyatt Street. She came here from Guernsey six months before her marriage.

DIRECTOR SOLD 15,000 SHARES

the faintest idea" that such action was to be taken. Her sale of 3,100 shares was made on her own decision, he said.

Hunt for Cover.

"In any event," said Ontario Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey, conducting the probe, "you thought it was a good time to hunt for cover." But witness denied this and said he had lost no faith in the possibilities of the mine. His sales, he said, had been made to permit repayment of bank loans and save him from posting further collateral. He admitted he had been "a little peeved" over revelation of what was described as confidential information, and added that if he "had it to do over again," it was probable he would hang on to his stock. He said he didn't know "how to sell short."

Sale of his wife's stock was made in his name, witness said, admitting this was done to "conceal the fact that she was selling."

The Commissioner suggested the selling by Wettlaufer had been "a pretty serious thing for other stockholders," but witness described it as "only a drop in the bucket."

The information complained of by witness was published in an issue of the Northern Miner on September 13—between the time of the two meetings—which said the policy of the company had been altered and would reflect in "somewhat lower gold output and net profits." It also announced a reduced shift of workers.

He had been indignant at this article, said Wettlaufer, who did not want to "blame anyone" for revealing such information to a newspaper but said he "believed it was Dr. D. L. G. Forbes," another director.

William Mansell Ketchen, assistant secretary of the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange, was called to show records of the stock exchange dating from Sept. 4 to Sept. 19. His records showed the following sales of shares:

September 11th, 28,470; 12, 89,151; 13th, 47,150; 14th, 80,898; 15th, 24,305; 17th, 32,315; 18th, 40,405; 19th, 17,650.

It was from Sept. 11 to Sept. 17 Mr. Stirrett described as the "significant period."

Conrad Wettlaufer of Buffalo who said he spent "Half my time at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., was called to certify minutes of the company in his capacity as director and secretary of the company.

Reduce Dividend

He told of directors' meeting on Sept. 11 and on Sept. 17 when it was decided to reduce the dividend on capital stock from 15 to 10 cents. A motion to reduce the dividend had been made at the first meeting, but left in abeyance until the second.

The dividend was for payment on Nov. 1 to shareholders on record of Oct. 10.

He also told of selling 10,000 shares of stock on Sept. 14 and described it as "only a drop in the bucket."

"But your drop was a very significant one," interjected the commissioner.

"It was sold when the question of the dividend was in abeyance," asked counsel.

"Yes," replied witness, who said the stock had been sold through New York, Montreal and Toronto.

Counsel asked witness if he thought his sales would be significant to brokers through whose hands they passed, knowing him as a director. "I didn't think it would make so much difference," he replied.

He also admitted his wife, Mrs. Irene Wettlaufer, had sold 31 certificates of 100 shares each. They had been transferred in witness' name "to conceal the fact she was selling." The stock was sold "about Sept. 17 through the Toronto brokerage firm of O'Hearn and Company.

A son, C. Taylor Wettlaufer, also had done some selling, as well as two adopted sons of witness' brother, Louie, who sold 1,100 shares each. Wettlaufer, who said he did not know details of his son's business, said the son, Crawford D. Wettlaufer, had sold 42 certificates of 100 shares each.

All certificates in question were entered as exhibits.

Witness said stock owned by him had not been traded in since 1926, but "by September it had all been wiped out through sale."

Witness said he had opposed reduction in the dividend because he felt "considering the amount of money in the treasury of Teck-Hughes—I think more than $3,000,000—the dividend would mean little more than $200,000 to the company and I thought it would be a good time to distribute 15 per cent. to shareholders of which I think there are about 17,000 or about 3,500 in the United States and the balance in Canada.

"I thought a dividend of 15 per cent. should have been sent to the shareholders, and then tell them at the annual meeting in November, 1934, the story of the mine and advise them a reduction in dividend would be required. Then if the people wanted to sell, they could. Anyway, they would know the story."

Reduction of dividend, he said, was discussed "very little" at the directors' meeting on September 11, attended by D. L. H. Forbes, O. Johnston, J. F. Lash K. P. Simmons, William Reilly, C Wettlaufer.

"Was there any acrimony or bitterness there," counsel asked.

"No," witness replied.

"We might get a little excited, but when it was all over we forgot all about it."

Wettlaufer maintained that he still felt the 15 per cent. should have been paid. "We could have afforded it," he asserted, "and the shareholders needed the money. It would have been all right."

six Indians were all more or less severely injured or shaken up, and that Smith, who was driving alone on his way north to Haliburton, received a fractured skull as a result of which he lay in an unconscious condition in Nicholls Hospital for 19 days.

Going into the witness box to testify on his own behalf, the accused declared that he could not recall any of the events of the morning of the accident as a result of the head injuries he had received. The Crown Attorney, in cross-examination, suggested that Smith could not remember the events of that morning because he had been drunk. Again during his cross examination of Douglas Davis, Lakefield garage operator, who denied having warned Smith not to drive his car that morning in view of his drunken condition, the Crown Attorney brought forward suggestions of drunkenness and questioned witness closely regarding the reputation of the accused.

"Petty Village Gossip"

Defence counsel offered strong objection characterizing the questions as being based "on petty gossip of the village which provincal police are too prone to dig into."

Commenting on the fact that Dr. Alexander Fraser of Lakefield had testified as to Smith's injuries and had stated positively that he found no signs of intoxication, Mr. Carley criticized the Crown Attorney for throwing out the suggestion that Smith had failed to remember events because he had been drunk.

"I appreciate that the Crown has the right to probe the memory of the accused to the depth, but I do object to the Crown inferring that the accused was drunk because he could not remember. I feel that I should call Dr. Moir to substantiate Dr. Fraser's evidence that this man's memory is impaired. That his memory is spotty," Mr. Carley stated.

Further Criticism

Defence counsel also criticized the action of the Crown in laying the minor liquor charge against the accused, who was also charged with a much more serious offence. "The general policy of the law is not to pin prick the accused," he remarked.

He added, that in laying the charge of "having," the Crown had taken the trouble to go back into the records for three years to dig up a previous conviction against the accused under the L.C.A. The beer, he claimed, was being lawfully conveyed by the accused from one lawful place of residence to another.

Mr. McElderry contended that the defence had offered no evidence to prove that the beer had been legally purchased, and therefore the onus was on the defence.

Evidence was given by Mrs. Muskrat of Curve Lake Indian Reserve that, following the accident, Smith was hanging over the steering wheel of his car, and that a bottle of beer was in the back of the car. She testified that a car bearing an American license plate drove up, and a woman in the car, whom she did not know, saw the beer and suggested that it should be removed. Acting on the suggestion, witness stated the man who was accompanying the woman took the bottle and put it behind the fence. The bottle of beer was later recovered by police, acting on the information of witness.

EYES RESTORED

have both eyes restored in this manner.

Also a new technique called the "pressure techinque" was used on her eyes. The donated eye is placed in a heavy metal cup, about the size of an eye socket. The cup is set on its own stand, so that it can be rotated.

The Operation

Under a microscope the surgeon places a trephaning instrument on the eye and as it rotates, his instrument cuts free a circular cornea the size he wants. He places this cornea in a watch crystal dish in a liquid solution.

Then he removed the blind cornea from the patient's eye, taking care to make his bared area slightly larger than the waiting section. He fixed two silk stitches in what surgeons call 'loops" in the waiting eye.

Next, the new cornea is fitted into place on the once blind eye. The silken "loops" are then drawn, the result being that they fit down over the borrowed cornea to hold it in place. In this position they look like the crossed hairs in a telescope on a range finder.

They produce a gentle pressure to hold the borrowed cornea in place until it grows there. This is the "pressure technique." Further pressure is obtained by closing the eyelid and bandaging the eye.

This was done to Mrs. Muir. At the end of about two weeks the bandage was removed, and the large print of the title of a book was held before her as a test.

"Very Heaven" was the title. It was her own book, one of five, all written while she was blind.

5,000 MEMBERS IN NEW CLUBS

Behaviour Club Organized in Winnipeg by Local Council of Women.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16 (C.P.). — Clubs in "behaviour guidance" to the number of 48 have been formed in greater Winnipeg and are performing a great work, Miss A. M. Going, of Kingston, convenor of the National Recreation Committee of the National Council of Women, reported to the parent body to-day. The membership of these clubs is approximately 5,000, and they are being tried in an effort to prevent delinquency.

"The request of the Federal Government to the N.C.W. in session in Calgary in May, 1933, that reading matter and games should be sent to the camps for unemployed men throughout Canada gave the committee an additional objective," said Miss Going.

"The many letters and reports from convenors in answer to the National convenor's letter show that the local councils have been active and many children and young people have been given an opportunity for healthful recreation."

Toronto, Miss Going said, "owes much of its success to the recreation committee. The old recory of Little Trinity Church was given over to the Local Council by the Record and has in a short time become a real centre in that dreary community. The recreation committee planned afternoon and evening classes for the boys and girls—the younger ones in the afternoon. It is hoped that more centres will be opened in Toronto."

Mrs. Ethel S. Ambrose, of Hamilton, convenor of the committee on housing and town planning, referred in detail to work which was being done in cities and towns throughout the Dominion to improve conditions.

Slum Conscious

"Your convenor feels greatly encouraged that Canada at last is not only slum conscious but is beginning to remove that blot from her fair name by slum clearance projects and the necessary building of houses for low income groups," Mrs. Ambrose said.

The co-operation which exists between social agencies and persons interested in child welfare, with the Child Welfare Committee of the National Council was commented on by Mrs. H. J. Cody, of Toronto, when she presented her report. Councils throughout the Dominion have given great attention to this scope of work, several having been active in the diets of expectant mothers and still others have been co-operating in efforts to supply cod liver oil and have adequate clinics for infants and children.

Reference was made to the standards of medical relief of the nationally organized societies in federation, the I.O.D.E. and the Canadian Nurses' Association, as being worth attention.

Public Health

Embodying a story of the struggle for better food, care of children, care of relief cases and education along health lines, Dr. Mildred Folinsbee Newell, convenor of the Standard Committee on Public Health, of Edmonton, presented an unusually interesting report. Practical accomplishments have accrued throughout all the provinces due to the zeal shown by the various local councils. Clinics have been held and surveys made with assistance given in many cases by the provincial government and the city authorities.

Dr. Newell informed the Council that to-day people are in an era of preventative medicine. "We cannot afford to spend time and money treating disease which should have been prevented," she stated. Efforts of local health convenors assisted in preventing an increase in mental defectives, and the spread of diseases such as tuberculosis.

Assassination May Bring Reconciliation

KING CAROL (1) QUEEN HELEN (2)

The ghost of King Alexander, assassinated king of Jugoslavia, is expected to influence his brother-in-law, King Carol of Roumania, in reuniting Carol with his estranged wife, Queen Helen. To do this, King Carol must be torn away from his read-headed mistress, Mme. Lupescua, who has, it is reported, retired from the royal court. Pressure is being brought to bear from outside, it is stated, to reunite the royal pair in order to preserve the peace of the Balkans, disturbed by the death of Alexander.

Here come the bride! It's a picture to thrill the heart of any belle. The handsome groom is Edward Colville of the Gordon Highlanders, former aide de camp to Lord Bessborough, Canada's governor-general. He is the second son of Admiral Stanley and Lady Adelaide Colville. The bride is Barbara Benny, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. M. Benny. She is wearing a beautiful wedding gown topped by a veil of old lace, and is carrying a beautiful bouquet of calla lilies as she leaves St. Mark's church in Staplefield after the ceremony. Socially prominent guests, including Lady Bessborough, wished them God-speed. Notice how the little flower boy looks wonderingly around him as he clutches the hand of the groom.

Every Monarch Of Jugoslavia Has Died Violent Death

LIVES IN HOME OF GRANDSIRE

WORLD GONE BACK

An interesting visitor to Toronto this week is P. P. Young of Young's Point, who lives where his grandfather landed and settled 109 years ago. What caused his progenitor exile from Erin—who left Kerry in 1825 to come to Canada to settle in that out-of-the-way place which even to-day presents much of the wilderness of pioneer times, Mr. Young cannot tell. He followed in the route of Champlain and landed at the point which bears his name, between the Otonabee river and Clear Lake.

His grandson does not regret the choice of location—at the age of 82 he is still there—honored by the countryside and many visitors. His father lived to the age of 94 and P. P., judging from his appearance, promises to pass even that mark.

"Why did your grandfather come to this country?" he was asked. "His estates were sequestered under the penal laws," was the reply. "But they must have had a little money for he was able to build a gristmill and sawmill at Young's Point." It was terribly wild those days with the country swarming with Indians, but they and my grandfather became great friends—in fact they saved his life several times.

Runs Fleet of Boats

Mr. Young is not running the mills now, but a fleet of boats that ply on the Kawartha Lakes. He has been running them since 1885 and all that time has had with him Captain Scollard. One of these boats, the Mary Ellen, he bought from the late Senator George A. Cox; another the Empress, was the first to go through the famous Lift Lock on the Trent Canal at Peterborough.

At 82, Mr. Young still takes his daily paddle, a straight two miles every evening. He loves Young's Point, the lakes, the woods and the rivers, and would not exchange them for the close confinement of a city. On several occasions he has saved lives, one, that of a woman, who fell off the dam—this at 72.

There is a family tradition that his great-grandmother was a cousin of Bonnie Prince Charles. A devout Catholic, he leads the congregation in the rosary on the Sunday evenings when the Priest cannot come to Young's Point.

Two years ago he lost his wife, just after they had celebrated the 55th anniversary of their wedding.

A great admirer of Sir John A. MacDonald, when that statesman was living, Mr. Young confessed that in his later years, although independent in his views, voting for the man rather than the party, he had swung more to the Liberal side following a boast of the late Hon. J. R. Stratton of Peterborough, "P. P., I'll get you yet."

Not As Neighborly

Mr. Young thinks that the world in one way has receded instead of progressed. "People are not as neighborly as they were in the early days," he said. "I think we have to go back, in some way, to the old times. The people have soon got to change; they have to realize that they have to make some sacrifice; that they have to go through some hardship before they can become better," and he told how the neighbors turned in to help one another in time of trouble.

RELIEF WORKERS CONGEST LIBRARY

Trenton Tries to Discourage 800 Menu at Airport.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 16 (C.P.) — Members of the relief project force at the Trenton airport have been advised by the posting of a large sign on the Trenton Public Library, that their presence is not desired. There are some 800 men at the Trenton airport at the present time.

Don Fraser, librarian, states that the action was necessary as the Trenton residents and subscribers could not find room in which to exchange their books, due to the congestion caused by the airport residents using the building at practically no cost.

Outside members are allowed to join the library for a nominal fee but residents at the airport with the exceptions of the officers and men of the R.C.A.F. do not come under this category.

As a result of a minor volcanic upheaval a new stretch of veach has suddenly appeared out of the sea on the coast of the island of Trinidad.

INVENT METHOD TO EXTRACT OIL

Secret Apparatus May Solve Alberta Tar Sands Problem.

LOW COST RECOVERY.

TORONTO, Oct. 16 (C.P.) — A small, simple apparatus in a building in downtown Toronto yesterday was credited with holding out the possibility of opening up the oil deposits in Alberta's 15,000 to 50,000 square miles of tar sands and making the British Empire independent of foreign oil.

Constructed by a company headed by Max W. Ball of Denver, Col., with B. O. Jones of Toronto as vice-president, the apparatus will be kept a secret till Mr. Ball comes here late in the month and gives it final, definite approval.

From the Alberta Trade Commissioner's office, however, was learned the feature of the new development. Briefly it is proposed to construct a number of portable extracting plants, each capable of handling 300 to 500 tons of raw material a day. These will be hauled behind dredging machines, cutting down the high cost of haulage to a central establishment.

From these 500 tons of raw material it is hoped to obtain about 300 barrels of crude bitumin a day. This will be transported to a refinery.

The problem in the past has been to discover a method of extraction which will bring the oil to the refinery as cheap as the product from wells. Cost of recovery under the new plan will be about 30 cents a barrel, approximately half the present costs.

If the process proves successful, gasolene and other crude oil products will be obtained. It is planned to have at least the first unit working by spring.

NEW COMMISSION WILL BE NAMED

Be Up to New Body to Appoint Manager for Ontario's Railroad.

TORONTO, Oct. 16 (C.P.)—The Ontario Government will appoint a new commission for the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway which in turn will nominate a general manager and carry out other recommendations made in the report of Armand Racine, K.C., who conducted an investigation into administration and operation of the railway. The announcement was made yesterday by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, following a cabinet council meeting.

There would be a considerable saving in this regard, said Mr. Hepburn, who pointed out that George Lee, chairman of the former commission, and general manager had received $10,000 annual salary, along with $3,500 on a special warrant from the prime minister and $600 for motor car allowance.

"That is a matter of great controversy," said Mr. Hepburn when asked for his opinion regarding Mr. Racine's recommendation that Lee be retained in lesser capacity. "We have many letters and wires in here opposing retaining him at all, while there are others which support the commissioner's recommendation. But he is eligible for $2,000 a year superannuation, so there would not be much point in giving him a $2,500 a year job."

Janetville Society Plans Annual Supper

JANETVILLE, Oct. 16.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Mrs. Wilmer Fitze entertained the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church at her home on Tuesday afternoon when an exceptionally large number of members gathered for an interesting October rally.

Mrs. (Rev.) Walker, the president, was in charge of the meeting. The chief item of business was the final arrangement for a hot roast chicken supper which the ladies are giving in the Foresters' Hall on Wednesday evening, October 24. The supper will be followed by a played, entitled "Three Pegs."

A vote of thanks was tendered by Mrs. Capstick to the ladies of the church who so kindly decorated the interior of the building for the recent marriage of her daughter. As this was the initial ceremony to be performed in this church, the bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hagen, were presented, on behalf of the pastor and congregation, with a handsome Bible in honor of this outstanding feature in the history of the church.

After further business was concluded, the following program was presented: Reading, "The Day," by Mrs. Stanley McGill; instrumental, by Mrs. Charles McNeil; reading, "Sweets and Pickles," by Mrs. Wilmer Fitze; reading, by Mrs. H. Johnston; vocal duet, "Sweeter as the Years Go By," by Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Hill.

When the meeting closed with hymn and benediction, delicious lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. L. Wright, Mrs. V. Walker and Mrs. N. D. McGill.

MANY TOO WEAK TO BE REMOVED

experience in its history was over.

Only a few hours before the settlement, the desperate miners threatened to kill General Janos Estergalyos, member of parliament who tried to mediate with them.

After one trip down, he was warned not to make another or "you won't return."

"The most terrible remembrance of my life" was the effect the scenes below had on Estergalyos. He described the men as "absolutely insane."

Some of them, crazed by hunger and thirst, had been tied to posts to keep them from killing themselves.

"Utterly exhausted," the general said, "they are huddled down there in the heat, lying on the dirty, watersoaked beds of the mine with huge chunks of coal for pillows. Some are unconscious. Nearly five days without water to drink has parched their throats. Some of them utter sounds like tortured animals."

NEW PASTOR IS GIVEN WELCOME

Rev. Harold B. Neal to Take Over Duties in St. John's Church, Campbellford.

MUSICAL PROGRAM.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 16. (By Examiner Correspondent). — A reception was held at St. John's United Church by the congregation on Monday evening to welcome the new pastor, Rev. Harold B. Neal, and Mrs. Neal.

In the absence of Thomas Hall, George Kingston acted as chairman and extended words of welcome on behalf of the session, speaking of the good work which had already been done and looking forward to a happy future.

The program opened with a piano duet by Miss Gladys Stephen and Albert Hazell; solo by Mrs. Allan G. Watson, followed by an address from Charles W. Palliser with words of welcome and greetings on behalf of the stewards of the church. At this point little Miss Dorothy Greig, prettily dressed in white, presented Mrs. Neal with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums. Mrs. Neal thanking those present for their thoughtfulness and kind spirit of welcome. The balance of the program consisted of a violin solo by Clarke McKelvie; quartette, Mrs. Dr. H. O. Richardson, Miss Nellie Hoover, George Lucy, and Walter Henson, and community singing led by Albert Hazell.

In replying to the kind words of welcome, Mr. Neal thanked his congregation, and in a few well-chosen words, stressed the great need of the church for effective service.

Refreshments were then served and a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem, followed by the Benediction.

Grandmothers Guests Lakefield Institute

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 16. (Examiner Correspondence). — The Woman's Institute entertained the grandmothers of the community on Thursday afternoon in the Town Hall and the response of the grandmothers, larger than ever before, was highly gratifying to the committee.

Mrs. S. E. White, president, was in the chair and conducted the business of the afternoon, welcoming the visitors most cordially. An appeal for shoes for some little children to enable them to attend school was made and a subscription list started which brought a generous response.

The grandmothers were measured to ascertain the grandmother with the smallest waist; the award went to Mrs. J. W. Walsh of Vancouver who might also have won the award of being the grandmother who lived at the greatest distance. Afternoon tea was served by the committee and a social hour was spent which will remain as a pleasant memory to both guests and hostesses.

Mrs. Burrows contributed a delightful solo "Love's Old Sweet Song" which was particularly appropriate, and Mrs. Chaplin gave one of Nina Moore Jamison's selections, "The Cure", which found an echo in more than one woman's heart.

Mrs. Kingdon, one of the grandmothers, gave a Scotch dialect number, "Bairnies Cuddle Doon" which was so much enjoyed. Mrs. Kingdon is herself a Scots woman, born in Blantyre, a place made famous by being the birthplace of David Livingstone.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Howard Bullock and Mrs. J. A. Murphy.

Grandmothers' Day is becoming an institution in the Woman's Institute and is looked forward to as one of the red letter days in the year's program.

Serious Fire Is Narrowly Averted

HASTINGS, Oct. 16.—(Examiner Correspondence.)— A very serious fire was narrowly averted in the village on Monday night. Messrs. J. Turcotte and E. Simpson were working on Mr. Simpson's big truck in Turcotte Bros.' garage on Bridge street when the stove pipes fell on the front of the truck and started a fire. The two men saw they were powerless to shove the heavy vehicle outside themselves, so they made the building airtigth by shutting the doors and turned in the alarm. For a short time both sides of the street were lined with citizens, who on account of the possibility of an explosion when the fire got to the gas tank, stayed considerable distance back. On arrival of the volunteer brigade the truck was pushed out and the flames quickly extinguished with the use of water and chemicals. The front of the truck and the cab was badly burned.

$500,000 for Relief

After a survey of damage here, Governor General Frank Murphy announced Secretary of Finance Antonio de Alas would release $500,000 for relief in the city and other affected districts.

He declared the day a bank holiday and ordered police to take prisoners from Bilibid, the insular penitentiary, to aid city workmen in clearing wreckage from the strets.

REV. D. N. McCAMUS SERVICE SPEAKER

Cavan United Church Observes Anniversary—Large Attendance.

CAVAN, Oct. 16 (Examiner Correspondence).—Very successful anniversary services were held at Cavan United Church on Sunday, October 14th, when the Rev. D. N. McCamus preached morning and evening.

Mr. McCamus, who has reached his eightieth year was pastor, during the Methodist Church itineracy, on Bethany, Omemee, South Monaghan, Millbrook and Cavan circuits. He has many warm friends in the district, and when preaching in the locality is always sure of a large congregation. His splendid sermons were listened to by large, appreciative congregations, morning and evening.

He sang, by request, at both services, much to the pleasure of his hearers. Considering his advanced age, it was marvellous that he could so sweetly sing the two beautiful solos, using neither words nor music for reference.

His sermon were delivered in the same manner, entirely without notes.

The choir added to the pleasure of the anniversary by the good music which they contributed.

One hundred and eighty dollars was the thank offering.

The funeral is to be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. from the residence, Lot 19, Concession 5, Douro Township, with the Rev. W. B. Walker officiating. Interment at Lakefield Cemetery.

MRS. WILLIAM PORTER

BALLYDUFF, Oct. 16 (Examiner Correspondence).—Ballyduff Presbyterian Church was filled to capacity on Wednesday afternoon with relatives and friends of the late Mrs. Porter, whose maiden name was Lydia Fallis, a life-long resident of this particular section of Manvers township. She was 52 years of age and a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fallis, also residents of Ballyduff for many years. Thomas Fallis of Manvers Station and John Fallis, near Ballyduff, are brothers.

One week previous to her funeral the late Mrs. Porter suddenly became stricken with a severe paralytic stroke, which rendered the left part of her body entirely useless and from which she never regained consciousness, passing away the following Monday.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. V. Walker of Janetville, pastor of Ballyduff Church, who spoke appropriate words of comfort to the suddenly bereaved. A touching solo, "Somewhere, Sometime," was sung by Mr. Percy Preston.

The remains were laid to rest in the nearby cemetery with the following neighbors acting as pallbearers: Messrs. Wilbert Gainer, Evie Mitchell, Austin Fallis, George Chapman, William Clarke, Joseph McCullough. Left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother are her sorrowing husband and one son Garnet.

Many beautiful floral tributes were laid on the casket as a final tribute of respect to a widely-known and highly respected citizen of Manvers.

INSTITUTE MEETS AT GRANDY HOME

Mrs. Wesley Brown Represents Millbrook Branch at Provincial Meeting.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 16.—(Examiner Corresondence.)— The October meeting of the local branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Miss E. J. Grady, on Saturday at 8 .m., with the president, Mrs. T. G. Harkness, in the chair, and twenty-nine present.

The secretary, Mrs. George Fallis, read a letter from G. A. Putnam, who is resigning from his position as Superintendent of Women's Institutes after thirty years in that position, and who explained the wonderful development in W. I. work since he first took office, and his personal regret at the severance of the bond which has for so long connected him with this fine organization. The new superintendent is Miss B. McDermid, who assumes office at the eid of the current month. The secretary was instructed to write Mr. Putnam expressing appreciation of his unfailing courtesy and helpfulness, and the regret felt at his retirement from his office.

The treasurer, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, reported payment of three dollars as prize money for solo singing at the recent school fair, $5.25 cleared from the booth on the grounds at that event, and the payment of Federation fee and speaker's expenses amounting to $6.55. On motion of Miss Grandy and Miss M. Christie, it was decided to send a letter of thanks to Messrs. H. J. Armstrong and T. G. Harkuess for repairing tourist sign boards at the entrance to the village. On a standing vote it was decided to procure a play and present it by W. I. members, the committee to secure same being Mrs. R. J. McKnight and Mrs. J. W. Hilton.

Mrs. Wesley Brown was appointed delegate to the Provincial W. I. Convention to be held in Toronto in November, with Mrs. G. Fallis as alternate. Mrs. Bentley, convenor of the committee on relief, took the chair for the program, giving a report of what clothing had been distributed, and what is still on hand; also mentioning that an overcoat for a boy is urgently needed.

The district secretary, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, gave an instructive paper on the origin of the Women's Institutes in 1897, and the remarkable growth of the organization since; humorous readings were given by Mrs. Hilliard Lang, and Mrs. D. Lunn, and little Leatha Rowland was heard in a recitation, "My Lover," with a song, "Alice in Wonderland," as encore. Miss Grady and Mrs. Harry Armstrong sponsored the vote of thanks to the program committee, and Mrs. L. Lang and Miss Christie that to the hostess for the use of her home.

A treat of grapes was served by the hostess during the social hour at the close. The place of meeting for the November gathering was left undecided.

MARMORA SUPPER IS WELL ATTENDED

Two of Oldest Members of Church Cut the Birthday Cakes.

MARMORA, October 16 (Examiner Correspondence). — The fowl supper served in St. Andrew's Hall on Monday evening in connection with the diamond jubilee of that church was an outstanding success. The ladies of the Women's Association who served the supper, well catered to the wants of over 300 at six nicely decorated tables. The birthday cake was cut by two of the oldest members of the congregation, Mrs. Alexander Anderson, representing the former Methodist congregation, and Mrs. Edward Caverly, representing the former St. Andrew's Presbyterian congregation. All who partook of the supper were given a slice. At the conclusion of the supper, adjournment was made to the cnurch, where the president, Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth, presided as an excellent miscellaneous program. J. F. Baker delighted the gathering with his rendition of "Lassie o' Mine." Canon W. G. Swayne of Bonarlaw brought greetings from the Anglican congregations of Rawdon. He drew attention to the energy and zeal on the part of the pastor and congregation which the event suggested, and mentioned that the spirit of unity which had been pointed out by the chairman as existing locally was what it ought to be. The devil always separates, he reminded his hearers, while God unites.

Rev. F. G. Joblin, pastor of the Rawdon charge of the United Church, in his usual cheery style, tendered the congratulations and best wishes of himself and flock, after which J. F. Baker choicely rendered "Sing Me to Sleep." Brief but well expressed congratulatory messages were then given by Rev. G. W. Rivers of Madoc and Rev. E. W. Rowland of Stirling. Rev. R. R. Nicholson of Tweed followed with an interesting illustrated lecture on "Our Canadian Birds," in which well placed humor added to the pleasure of the listener. In his opening remarks he mentioned that the insects were the lords of the earth. Man can guard himself against wild beasts with a great measure of success and combat with deadly serpents, but with insects of which there are more species in the world than of other living creatures, man would find it impossible to live on the earth were it not for the birds. The birds are valuable to man for four reasons. They devour insects in large numbers. They eat the seeds of harmful weeds. They devour field mice and other rodents. They also act as scavengers.

After a hearty vote of thanks had been extended the lecturer, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell conveyed the greetings of St. Paul's Anglican congregation, which the previous week had celebrated the diamond jubilee of the church. The gathering dispersed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Port Hope Shelter Observes Birthday

MILLBROOK, Oct. 16.—(Examiner Correspondence).—A "coming of age" birthday party was celebrated at the Children's Shelter, Port Hope, on Friday, beginning at 3 p.m., the completion of twenty-one years of service by this very fine institution being fittingly observed with a public gathering, of which a business session, with the president, H. Fulford, in the chair, was an initial feature, followed by addresses, a tour through the building by the interested guests, and the service of afternoon tea with the matron, Miss Ferguson, as hostess.

A large table in the reception room was reserved for donations from the incoming guests, Mrs. Philp receiving these on behalf of the society, entering the names on the register, with the gift presented, fruit, canned goods, groceries, etc., being included and assisting materially with the food supply of the home and providing an added treat possibly for the children's meals.

The financial report, presented by the secretary, Mr. Melville Hancock, showed that while over six hundred dollars represented the expense account for September, but little over five hundred dollars had been received. The Counties Council allows two dollars for every three spent by the board as its grant, and donations from other sources are necessary to balance accounts. However, a pleasing feature of the report was the fact that in the savings account there is a surplus of over $1,300, and during discussion of the financial report, on motion of F. W. Galbraith, seconded by Rev. Mr. McTavish, it was decided to invest one thousand dollars of this amount with the Midland Loan Co., the interest paid being higher than is now available from chartered banks.

DUKE OF KENT IS IN BELGRADE

FIANCE IS ALONG.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Oct. 16. —(A.P.)—The Duke of Kent, fourth son of King George of England, and his fiance, Princess Marina of Greece, arrived quietly to-day for the funeral of King Alexander.

The couple left immediately for Dedinje to visit little King Peter II and his widowed mother, the Dowager Queen Marie.

Alexander's body, which arrived from Split shortly after last midnight, will lie in state until the funeral service Thursday.

Half a million Yugoslavs and distinguished representatives of nearly every European nation, including many noblemen, crowded Belgrade to-day.

After a brief religious service, during which Marie and Peter prayed beside the coffin, Alexander's body was taken to a catafalque of the old palace. Some time to-day it was to be transferred to a sarcophagus made by an Austrian firm and almost a replica of the one in which the late Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria, whose murder touched off the Great War, was placed.

Mrs. Parish did just that; the robber scooped up about $28, and walked away.

HEALTH BOARD HEARS REPORT

Dr. Fraser Gives Explanation Regarding Bacterial Count in Milk Samples.

SOME MISUNDERSTANDING.

Dr. G. Murray Fraser this morning drew to the attention of the Board of Health the fact that the city is free from any cases of infantile paralysis. "The city is extremely fortunate and can congratulate itself on that state of affairs" the M.O.H. believed, "in view of the fact that there are seventy cases of infantile paralysis in Toronto".

In his monthly report to the Board Dr. Fraser remarked upon the completion of the new offices of the department which were opened at the beginning of the month. "These rooms are very satisfactory and are I believe a credit to the city", his report stated.

During the month considerable equipment was ordered and installed and the department is now in the position to render satisfactory service to the city.

Commenting on the collection of milk samples, which is a different procedure from that practised formerly, Dr. Fraser stated, "the report of the analysis of milk samples published in the press had unfortunately led to some misunderstanding on the part of certain consumers and vendors".

"The bacterial count is a source of information which is often misunderstood. Anyone familiar with the testing of milk knows that bacteria multiply very rapidly in milk if it is not kept at a low temperature. Pasteurization kills all disease producing germs in milk, but certain harmless bacteria, which are resistant to heat, are not destroyed and continue to multiply if the temperature of the milk is allowed to rise. It is therefore possible for pasteurized milk to have a higher bacterial count than raw milk. Pasteurized milk with a high count is safer than raw milk with a low count because it contains no disease producing bacteria".

During the month the M.O.H. reports he made an inspection of all fruit stores in the city, and as required by the Public Health Act, he made a sanitary inspection of all the schools, which resulted in a number of recommendations to the school boards. "On the whole I found the schools in a satisfactory condition", he stated.

JAPAN OPPOSES NAVAL TREATY

Asserts Priority Right to Maintain National Security by Arms.

ISSUES FIVE POINTS.

TOKYO, Oct. 16. (C.P.-Havas).—Japan has definitely decided to denounce the Washington Naval Limitation Treaty, the foreign office spokesman announced to-day.

This was disclosed in a statement which the spokesman outlined to the press the five-point instructions given to Admiral Yamamoto, Japanese delegate to the Bilateral naval conversations in London, which will be resumed Oct. 20.

The five points are:

1. Every country has the right to have national security, and consequently, Japan has the right and power to ensure her security and maintain peace in the Far East.
2. Reduction of eeffectives and armaments.
3. Reduction, even supression of offensive weapons and strengthening of defensive weapons.
4. Japan will denounce the Washington Treaty with the hope that it will be replaced by a new and equitable pact.
5. In the event of a failure of the conference, Japan will take appropriate measures to ensure her security, preserving meanwhile her Pacific attitude.

KIDNAP MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

Solution of Mystery Depends on Finding of Two Men.

STRAIN TERRIFIC.

By Richard Rendell.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 16 (A.P.). —Solution of the Stoll kidnap mystery was represented by police today to rest on the capture of two men—one the short and muscular man who executed the actual abduction—and the other a strapping six-footer.

As nerve-worn peace officers — Federal and municipal — groped through the maze of clues that have arisen since the disappearance of Alice Speed Stoll, it became known that the second man sought for questioning in the case is blonde and about 40 years old.

His features are described as thin —long pointed nose, narrow lips and close set eyes.

Fiendish Face.

The description of the kidnapper given authorities by Anne Woolet, the Stoll maid, outlined him as having an extremely pale face that was twisted into a 'fiendish' grimace all during the time he was in sight.

He is thought to be about five feet eight inches in height and 150 pounds in weight. His black hair was parted in the center.

Tenseness characterized the family's attitude for a time last night giving rise to the belief that an important development was near. But soon the feeling ebbed away.

George Stoll, a brother-in-law, spoke the thoughts of the clan. "If we could get some word it wouldn't be such a terrific strain. If there were only some way of knowing how she is..."

There are those who believe Mrs. Stoll is dead. The $50,000 ransom note is reported to have set yesterday as the time either for the murder of the woman or for a second communication.

Judging from George Stoll's remark, there was no communication.

Major William Schmidt pointed to another angle. "Figure it out for yourself," he said. "Mrs. Stoll was sick and thirtly clothed. It was the coldest night of the season, and she was struck. It looks bad."

Police to-day expressed the theory that the actual abductor was dominated by another individual, either the tall blonde or a third person.

Chatham Fire Sweeps 300 Acres Of Pasture

CHATHAM, Ont., Oct. 16 (C.P.).—Fire last night broke out on pasture land in Dover West, and swept over 300 acres on the respective properties of Gilbert Beaume, farmer, and Dr J. W. Rutherford of this city. The latter used the property for hunting. Reaume's men worked all night and battled the fire successfully. The fire is still raging on the Rutherford property, but no buildings are endangered. Fire of unknown origin last night destroyed a 35-foot wood bridge on the farm of Mrs. Wallings, Concession 9, Dover. Both fires are thought to have originated from dropped cigarette ends.

King Carol Attending Funeral of Alexander

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—King Carol is on his way to Belgrade to-day to attend the funeral of his brother sovereign, King Alexander of Yugoslavia, but his subjects, with few exceptions, do not know it.

By government order, the newspapers were forbidden to mention the fact that the King was absent.

It was the first time he had risked leaving Rumania since his dramatic and secret return to the country, when he seized the throne more than four years ago.

PAQUETTE SUIT IS DISMISSED

Appeal Against Judgment of Mr. Justice McEvoy Fails at Osgoode Hall.

TWO LOCAL CASES.

Two local appeals were dismissed in judgments given at Osgoode Hall yesterday.

In the case of J. Raymond Paquette and all other creditors of James B. Brown vs. James B., Lillie A. and Elizabeth A. Brown on an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment of Mr. Justice J. A. McEvoy dated June 6, 1934, dismissing the action of J. R. Paquette to set aside judgments for $929.89 and $5,200 obtained by the defendants, Lillia A. Brown and Elizabeth A. Brown, the appeal was dismissed with costs payable by the appellants. G. N. Gordon, K.C., for the appellant, J. R. Paquette and B. D. Hall, for the respondents, Lillia A. Brown and Elizabeth Brown.

The other case was that of Wallace Dewart et al, executors of Lavinia Payne, vs. Addie Evelyn Payne, personally, and as administratrix of the estate of William K. Payne.

This was an appeal by the plaintiffs from the judgment of the Honorable Mr. Justice J. A. McEvoy dated the tenth day of May, 1934, in an action by which the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to share in joint bank accounts in the names of William K. Payne and Addie Evelyn Payne, and in certain bonds held in a safety deposit box in the joint names of the said William K. Payne and Addie Evelyn Payne, such bonds being bearer bonds and both parties having access to the box independently of the other. On the appeal before the Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, the Hon. Mr. Justice Masten and the Hon. Mr. Justice Macdonnell from the judgment of the Hon. Mr. Justice McEvoy, dismissing the action with costs, G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for the plaintiffs as appellants and J. W. Stevenson appeared for the defendant as respondent, and the appeal was dismissed with costs against the appellant.

In both appeals all three judges of the Appellate Division concurred in the dismissing judgments.

BLAME U.S. PRESS.

VIENNA, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Reports abroad that Yugoslavia planned an ultimatum to Hungary brought immediate and vigorous denials today from the Yugoslav legation.

"If American newspapers continue their sensational and unfounded reporting," was the angry retort of a legation spokesman, "then they'll have to bear the responsibility for whatever may happen. No one in a responsible position in Yugoslavia even thinks about sending an ultimatum to any government."

"The situation in Europe is delicate and dangerous enough," the spokesman continued, "without these fake dispatches. There already is so much dynamite strewn around Europe that even thoughts about an ultimatum could originate only in a distracted mind or from a professional firebug wishing to set all Europe afire again."

Ready To Start East With H. W. Vermilyea

LOS ANGELES, October 16 (C.P.). — Inspector Hamar K. Gardiner of the Ontario Provincial Police expected to start the long return trip to Belleville Ont. today with Harold W. Vermilyea, charged with murdering his mother on October 4, in custody.

Vermilyea, arrested at his Ontario, Calif., home after Mrs. Nathaniel Vermilyea, 72, had been fatally attacked by an axe-wielder at Belleville, formally waived final extradition proceedings yesterday. David Head, United States Commissioner here, was scheduled to sign an order this morning placing the suspect in charge of Inspector Gardiner.

The accused man, who professes his innocence, declaring he has not been out of California in more than a decade, wound up his business affairs over the week-end. He already has said good-bye to his 18-year-old daughter and 13-year-old son.

KINGSFORD-SMITH IS OUT OF BIG RACE

"Official Tardiness" is Blamed for amous Pilot Not Entering Race.

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 16.—(A.P.)—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian aviator, to-day said "official tardiness" and an unforeseen accident made it impossible for him to face the starter's gun in the England to Australia air race starting next Saturday.

Part of the responsibility for his failure to enter the race rests with a testing pilot who flew his reconditioned plane to the United States' Department of Commerce airdrome near Los Angeles.

He said the pilot failed to obtain a departmental certificate, and that this omission caused a month's delay.

Kingsford-Smith is preparing to start a flight for San Francisco, planning to take off shortly after dawn Saturday.

"In this flight, more difficult than the England to Australia race, I will show that I am no squib," he said.

Temperance Talk Feature Of Meet

At the October meeting of the Living Link Mission Circle, held last evening at the home of Mrs. W. Fanjoy, Crescent street, consideration was given to temperance matters, the Temperance secretary stating that the use of intoxicating liquors was contributing largely to the lack of safety in driving on streets and highways.

The president, Miss E. Forester, opened the meeting for the business session. Later, Miss B. Edmondson took charge.

Two chapters of the Study Book, which was completed recently, were reviewed by Miss I. Stanbury and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, after many helpful and inspirational ideas were derived from the discussions.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Football injuries in a certain boys' school have been reduced from 243 to 75 in one season. This has been accomplished by intelligently planned and enforced preventive measures. The enforcement is quite as important as the planning, as boys are not only careless about the possibilities of harm, but even inclined to be braggadocio on the subject.

The reduction in the number of injuries was developed "as the causes for special regional injuries were examined in respect to the anatomic strength or vulnerability of the part, the character and direction of the force inflicting the injury, the distribution of padding within the uniform, and the style or form of play".

Formerly the fingers were injured more often than any other spot, during last season the knee.

The finger injuries were due to spreading of the thumb and fingers in the process of tackling and straight arming. Instruction by coaches in proper spacing of fingers and use of hands reduced these injuries to one-sixth their former frequency. (In this school 80 per cent. of the boys play football: They are not, therefore, seasoned players).

Ankle injuries, which formerly were frequent, are reduced by the use of ankle bandages.

Muscle injuries, due to a direct blow, are among the most frequent still encountered. The muscles of the neck and thigh are the ones which bear the brunt. These bruises cannot be stopped entirely but careful padding, with especial reference to fitting the padding to the parts so it will stay put, reduces them by about two-thirds.

Knee injuries increased last year, possibly due to a change in the style of play, lateral passes and lateral runs.

In directing football athletics among younger and less experienced players, much grief can be avoided by watching the general physical reactions. Removal from scrimmages of boys who are losing weight, and removing from the game players who get tired during the closing periods of play, are items of this sort.

An interesting observation is that salt will relieve the exhaustion of strenuous play. This has its basis in many other instances of severe labor: The amounts of salt lost in the body from the excessive sweating is astonishingly large and depletes the salt reserve of the body to the danger point. In experiments in a sweat box it was found that 20 to 46 gms. of salt were lost in a single treatment, and replacement entirely abolished the sense of fatigue and exhaustion resultant.

TOMATOES TABOO THOUGHT POISON

Party of 70-Year-Olds Recalls Some Inedibles of Their Baby Days.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Oct. 16 (C.P.) —Another of hte famous birthday parties of Blenheim's "Babies of 1860" has been held. This time it was for W. E. Hall. The Club gives a party when any member has a birthday.

All of the members are 74 years of age except one. They state that there are several others in the town and surrounding district who are eligible to join the club, "but they do not wish to do so for fear of disclosing their ages."

Each one of the members present gave a little talk, but the main speaker of the "Hall" party was Dr. A. R. Hanks who told of the improvements of medicine and surgery since they were born.

"Why," he said, "in the days when we were babies tomatoes were not thought fit to eat. They were looked at as poisonous, and a cause of cancer. Positively, cancer and consumption are not carried down from generation to generation. "He held that there is more progress in medicine and surgery than in any other branch of science."

She Plays Organ at 75 Years

TAKES KRUSCHEN TO KEEP RHEUMATISM AWAY.

Writing to tell how she keeps her activity, this wonderful old woman states:

"My hands were becoming so crippled that I had to give up piano and organ playing—and almost entirely gave up knitting. I have been using Kruschen Salts for nearly two years, and am very pleased with the result. Last August I played two church services on the organ, and hope to do so again this August. My fingers are nearly straight, and quite supple, and I am 75. I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many people."—A.A.C.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

Sleeping Sickness

By DR. T. P. McCULLOUGH
166 Brock St.

Encephalitis lethargica, erroneously called sleeping sickness, the latter being a tropical disease of entirely different cause and character, appears in epidemic form. It is an acute infectious disease of the brain, mildly contagious, which has been known to exist since the early part of the eighteenth century. Its contagiousness is about the same in degree as that of infantile paralysis, that is, not severely contagious as in the case of measles or smallpox. It affects both sexes about equally and is more common in cold weather. Like infantile paralysis, the cause is a filterable virus, the germ actually producing the disease being so small as to be invisible under the microscope, and which passes through a porcelain filter.

It is probable that mild cases and healthy carriers act as distributors of the disease. The most constant signs of the disease are fever, lethargy or sleepiness and paralysis of certain muscles, especially those of the eye. Whilst the onset may be sudden, it is usually gradual and marked by malaise or bronchial catarrh, loss of appetite, nausea, general pains and giddiness. A moderate fever lasting from a few days to two or three weeks is nearly always present in the severer forms. In the great majority of the cases, lethargy, sleepiness or stupor are striking features. Sometimes there is actual coma, not only in children but in adults. Loud speaking generally suffices to rouse the patient, but he is dull and takes little interest in what goes on about him, although he may hear what is said. The face is without expression. The eye symptoms such as double vision and ptosis (drooping of the eye-lids) or paralysis of the muscles, such as the elevators of the lids, the face, palate, larynx and tongue. The reason for this paralysis is the toxin of Encephalitis lethargica has a selective action upon the oculo-motor nerve cells in the floor of the third and fourth ventricles and later on may involve nerve cells lower down, that of the facial, the vagus and hypoglossal nerve cells. Headache followed by soreness of the scalp is fairly common. Paralysis of the upper and lower limbs or of one side frequently occurs. The death rate is about twenty per cent. of known cases, but if the mild and undiscovered ones were counted, the rate would be lower. Fatal cases usually end in a few days to two or three weeks, and may eventually be due to a complication such as pneumonia, weakness, insomnia, depression or some mental deficiency may persist after apparent recovery, but the conditions to look for are lethargy, sleepiness and eye paralysis with a normal spinal fluid. The somnolence is such a marked feature that the disease is often called in this country "sleeping sickness," but the real sleeping sickness is a tropical disease caused by a bite of the tsetse fly, and there is no relation between the two.

TREATMENT

Care should be taken to keep the sick person apart from others in the household. There is no specific remedy. Rest in bed, absence of excitement, plenty of liquid and semi-liquid fluid, regulation of the bowels and careful nursing are the essentials. Remedies to relieve the headache, restlessness and want of sleep (if a feature of the disease) should be treated.

Encephalitis lethargica is one of the diseases which merits further investigation. Doubtless the research of scientific men will increase our knowledge of the disease and, it is hoped, render its prevention and cure more satisfactory.

Bobcaygeon Woman Observes Birthday

LINDSAY, Oct. 16.—On the occasion of her ninetieth birthday best wishes were extended to Mrs. William Patterson, one of the oldest surviving pioneers of Bobcaygeon district. Born in Consecon, in Prince Edward County, Mrs. Patterson first came to Bobcaygeon when she was 16 years of age. The trip up the lakes was made in a rowboat, and they landed at McConnell's Island. Mrs. Patterson has seen Bobcaygeon develop from a few scattered houses to a well-known summer resort. She not only remembers the first train and automobile to come into the village, but can tell the name of the owner of the first horses. The gravel and cement road between Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon was in those days a rough corduroy road for as far as it went, and very little land was cleared.

In those early days she did all the work the farm women did and she likes to tell about them. Mrs. Patterson has a very keen memory, and she still does light work, and patches and darns.

BEHIND the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CAROLL.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 16.—Take it from those who heard it, the swellest retort in weeks was unconsciously pulled by a 10-year-old at the preview of "The Gay Divorce".

Alice Brady

The picture was just over, and a group of youngsters were begging autographs from Alice Brady, Edward Everett Horton and several other stars in the lobby. Suddenly, Katherine Hepburn made a dash from the theater.

"Oh, go take a jump in The Lake!"

Kate hasn't been so red since she saw the reviews of the play.

THE RALPH

Raingers' baby son owes his first name to Marlene Dietrich. Ralph and Leo Robin, composers of "Love in Bloom", have been assigned to write the music for the new Dietrich picture, "Caprice Espagnole". When the German star found that Ralph and his wife were still looking for a name for the baby, she made a suggestion. Mrs. Rainger had three other names in mind, but she couldn't make up her mind. So they put all four names in a hat and she drew one. Which turned out to be Miss Dietrich's selection—"Douglas".

"IT HAPPENED

One Night", the new attraction at the Regent Theatre, co-starring Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, starting yesterday, is definitely a must-see. It will surely be one of the ten best pictures of the year, it is certainly the finest of the month, and what's more, we guarantee that no matter what kind of production you usually like, you'll agree with us that "It Happened One Night" is sure-fire entertainment of the highest calibre.

The supporting cast, as in every Capra-directed picture, is excellent. Walter Connolly plays Claudette's father; Jameson Thomas is the man she is struggling north to join. Roscoe Karns is a traveling salesman who recognizes the girl as the runaway Ellen Andrews and who tries to bluff Gable, but finds himself out-bluffed. Alan Hale, Blanche Frederici, Ward Bond, Mickey Daniels, George Breakston, Father Dodd and Irving Bacon were spotted in small but important roles, and even the minor bits are played by seasoned and experienced troupers.

Vincent Lopez

Waxing sentimental, Lopez recalled how the famous tunesmiths, from humble starts, had grown and grown until they are now tops in Hollywood.

It was 250-pound Jack Gordon, who got up and said:

"Vince, you say you've seen us grow and grow. I wish you'd stopped me a long time back."

The Brisson cheese, enhanced by a special wine treatment, is strong and rich. The actor values it at $100 a pound and serves guests only a small portion after dinner on a single cracker.

Garment hangers require correct use to be of best service. It is not enough that the clothes are put over their branching arms. They must be so put on that they hang straight from the shoulders. If the frock or coat does not fit the hanger it is almost better not to use a hanger at all for the garment will bulge in odd place where the ends of the hanger-arms push out the material. When a garment remains long in such a peculiar position, it is difficult to restore the right shape even with good pressing. The textile is stretched out of shape and has to be coaxed back by steaming with a hot iron pressed down over a wet cloth. A tailor's services may be required, and all for the lack of a moment's attention to putting the garment on the hanger in the correct way.

* * * * * * *

If a coat hanger is rightly used, it will save trouble and time otherwise needed in pressing garments. So why not let your coat hangers give you the best of service? See that the arms if it come directly under the top of the shoulder. In some cuts of garments this place is the shoulder seam, but not always is this true. See that the garment hangs in its right folds, that the hem at bottom of skirt, or the lower edge of a coat or blouse is not turned up, and that the sleeves fall as they should. There are women who are so particular about proper adjusting of garment to hanger that they seldom have to iron their garments. Dresses will have to be laundered or cleaned when soiled and some materials, which have to be crisp and which rumple easily, will need pressing, of course. But a correct use of hangers will reduce work amazingly.

* * * * * * *

After garments are put on hangers properly they must not be crowded together in a closet. There are more ways of pressing clothes than with a flatiron. One of them is to hang them so close together that they press against each other and crush materials badly. So don't crowd hangers on rods. Some day soon I shall tell you about various rods, poles, arms and devices on which to suspend garment hangers in closets. Some of them keep the hangers sufficiently far distant from one another to eliminate crowding.

NUNS WATCH OVER POINCARE

Funeral of France's War-time President to be Held on Saturday.

PLAIN OAK COFFIN.

PARIS, Oct. 16 (AP)—The body of former President Raymond Poincare lay in his study to-day, watched over by nuns, while President Albert LeBrun was speeding to Belgrade.

There he will pay France's tribute to King Alexander, whose killing on French soil hastened Poincare's end. The great Frenchman died early yesterday.

The body of the Great War President was placed in a coffin last night in the presence of his nephews and nieces and a few intimate friends. His widow, overcome with emotion, kept to her room.

The coffin, as Poincare desired, was of plain oak with silver handles and was lined with blue satin. Its plate bears the simple inscription: "Raymond Poincare, 20th of August, 1860—15th of October, 1934."

Flowers were heaped around the casket, placed on a low black-draped platform in the study. It will remain there until it is taken to the Pantheon to lie in state as France pays her last tribute to him.

His funeral will be held Saturday. Burial will be in the little family cemetery at Nubecourt near Barle-Duc.

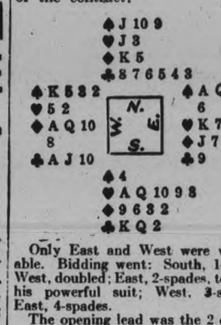
CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

HASTE LOSES GAME.

Time and again lack of due consideration of the opening lead costs game. Remember that about half the time the opening lead and its response by declarer settles the fate of the contract.



Only East and West were vulnerable. Bidding went: South, 1-heart; West, doubled; East, 2-spades, to show his powerful suit; West, 3-spades; East, 4-spades.

The opening lead was the 2 of diamonds, plainly marking the K in partner's hand, but the declarer thought he did not care for that. He expected to lose only a single diamond and two hearts, at worst. Dummy played low. North's K won. Back came the J of hearts, holding the trick. The 3 of hearts was overtaken by the 8. A low heart was led. That ruined East.

All that the declarer could do was to ruff with dummy's K, hoping that the adverse trumps were divided two-two, so that he could pick them up with his A-Q. When South showed out on the second lead of spades East conceded a trick to opponents going down a trick and receiving his partner's comments meekly.

While it is customary to play for the break, four missing cards are divided three-one about 11 times to nine times for the two-two split. Of course East never thought of the possibility that a heart ruff might defeat the contract, even if he should have done so.

Play the hand normally and safely. Win the opening lead with the ace of diamonds. Take three rounds of winning trumps, leaving a single trump in dummy and two in the declaring hand. Lead the J of diamonds, giving the holder of the K a trick. The declarer then must lose two heart tricks, but that ends his troubles. The dummy will ruff one of East's losing hearts. The other heart will go on a good diamond in dummy. East will fulfill his 4-spades contract.

Can West Make 5-Odd?

West is the declarer. The contract is 5-hearts. The first three leads are the ace of clubs, the ace of spades and the 5 of spades. Before tomorrow think whether West has to lose another trick than the two aces led.

At the Theatres

AT THE REGENT

"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT"

This is one of the most refreshing pictures seen in some time. It is delightful entertainment. It has a different plot, a different hero and heroine, and a different father.

Shakespeare probably thought of the idea first when he wrote "The Taming of the Shrew," but it is a theme that carries with a universal appeal.

Claudette Colbert is the lovely and wilful Ellen Andrews, daughter of a millionaire banker. She marries in haste and then runs away from her father, who threatens to annul the ceremony. On the way, she meets up with Clark Gable, a reporter in search of sensational stories. And they have a great time, riding on a 'bus, thumbing a ride, going hungry, and, quite incidentally, falling in love. The sentimental interest is subordinated at all times to the peculiar temperament of Peter Warne (Clark Gable), who is at his best in the role of a hot-tempered, warm-hearted guy with no liking for a rich gal.

The scenes on the 'bus during a long ride, are some of the best in the story. The impromptu concert in which a trio sings about the "daring young man" is as real as anything encountered in a picture for many long moons. And Warne's scene with Roscoe Karns, as the snooping passenger, is immense.

Walter Connolly has the part of the father who wants his girl to be happy first of all. He shines during the final episode, with a runaway bride in full flight to her herd-tongued admirer.

As a charming interlude in screened stories which range all the way from tragedy to farce, "It Happened One Night" is real, honest-to-goodness entertainment. It is one of those unusual pictures that appear to have evolved themselves so spontaneous is the acting. The back-stage machinery never creaks in this feature. Anyone who is just a little tired of sterotyped screen stories will get a great kick out of Gable and Colbert teamed in a story that seems made to order, so well does it suit them and the light touch that accompanies its screening.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"OF HUMAN BONDAGE"

This film has been called the picturization of an attitude and is in reality an effort to bring to the screen a mental phase—the mentality of a man who cannot help thinking crookedly, as it were, because he has a defect in his physical makeup. It is a theory held by many that a cripple usually has a twist in his brain and the picture brings that theory to the silver sheet. Philip Carey, while his club foot imposes upon him an almost intolerable sense of deficiency and inferiority, remains under the spell of a weak and evil woman. When his physical defect is remedied, he stands free of her lure.

The restrained and charming acting of Leslie Howard goes with a lagging tempo in this feature. One can understand how the blonde and vital Mildred Rogers, the cheap waitress of a cheap eating-house, has difficulty in concealing her contempt for him. In this role, Bette Davis is absolutely superb. It is seldom that so splendid a bit of acting is seen. And her cockney accent is marvellous—for a real Yankee.

It may be of interest to know that this picture is filmed from a book said to be autobiogrphical. Somerset Maughan, the author, is divorced and lives now in an aloof and cynical atmosphere of his own.

The story, briefly and roughly, has to do with the infatuation of a sentimental toff for a cheap and tawdry girl with a wonderful figure and a big pair of eyes. This infatuation persists through many sordid disillusionments, until Frances Dee, a sweet young thing, comes along to help destroy the obsession which darkens the life of Philip Carey.

Kay Johnson has the minor role of Norah, Reginald Denny is the bounder, Harry Griffiths, and Alan Hale, who was admirable in the role of the curly-headed adventurer in "Little Man, What Now?", is the equally dramatic Emil Miller, in this piece. It is a splendid cast.

With the feature is a comedy that includes the two cut ups, Clark and McCullough, and those who like rough and ready jazz music will appreciate the bountiful efforts at entertaining of Cab Calloway and his band.

Mis Simplicity

The Inside Story of a Smart Figure

Depends on the foundation garment you wear. With this season's styles so trim and tailored, and svelte lines in afternoon and evening frocks, it is absolutely essential that you wear the right type of gament.

We advise the MisSimplicity, that sculptures the figure to perfect princess lines. . . . The secret of this garment's qualities lies in the clever straps that cross and button in back! The diagonal "cross pull" of the straps scientifically uplifts the bust to a natural curve, flattens the diaphram and abdomen and slenderizes the waistline.

Chabot Refuses To Sign Contract With Hawks

INSIDE THE PADDOCK

BY ART MURRAY

IT WAS LIKE old old times the other day at Dufferin to see Broadway Lights come down in front. Up until a year ago last July when he met with a serious accident at Windsor the five year old son of Broadway Jones was considered the best handicap horse in Canada. Since that time his proud owner Brooklyn Tommy McCarthy has been nursing him along in the hope that he would regain his form. Most owners would have cut him loose, but not so with McCarthy, who appreciated all the purse money that this good horse had won for him in days gone by, and his long efforts were rewarded on Saturday, when Broadway made a show of his field by romping home an easy winner by some five open lengths and just galloping. The best part of it was that he showed no signs of lameness and is as sound as a bell again. He will win a lot of races down south this winter so keep both eyes on him.

Jockeys Remillard and Jelly who figured in the spill on opening day were not as seriously injured as thought at first. The former suffered a broken leg and the latter three broken ribs. Neither boy will do any more riding untill next year. While speaking of jockeys we hear that Frankie Mann now weighs 126 pounds and that likely means the end of his riding career, as iit would weaken him too much to try and reduce. He has a thorough knowledge of the racing game and will have no trouble locating a position as trainer although he will be sadly missed from the ranks of the riders as he was one of the best. It was only this past summer that he rode Horometer in all his important wins. The McLaughlin Stable will have to obtain some new riders as with the loss of Mann, comes the announcement that their other jockey, Thomas has had his license revoked by the Canadian Racing Association for rough riding.

CHICKPEN and Sweepstaff from the Harry Hatch barn each should cop a purse before the present Dufferin meeting comes to a close. Both are in grand form and raring to go. Sir Byron is another who favors this track and will make them all sit up and take notice before the week is over. Don't forget that Dougherty is the best half mile rider plying his trade at the present meeting and any horse he is on is sure of getting an intelligent ride.

Our old friend Faux Pas is down at Laurel and will be heard from in the near future in these long distance events. This one can run all day without tiring. Unencumbered is also at the same place and is getting ready for a winning effort. This one can sprint or go over a distance of ground. Over at Narragansett is Indian Runner, a handicap horse of more than ordinary ability. He will defeat all the top notchers one of these fine days so don't miss him. Also down there they have one called War Plane who always pays a good price when he wins and it won't be long now. Old Granite Rock is up at Dufferin just waiting for the proper spot. He always favored this track and this fall will be no exception. Dougherty will likely ride him which makes iit that much better. Candyman is another we expect to see led into the winner's circle. He has an abundanceof early speed which is a big asset at Dufferin.

West Seeking Revision Of Amateur Code

VETERAN A.A.U. OF C. EXECUTIVE DECLARES 'NO REAL AMATEURS'

Judge Jackson Shows Rules Barring Athletes Accepting Salary While Playing.

ONE WAY OUT

By W. M. GLADISH, Central Press Canadian Sports Writer.

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Another East vs. West issue with regard to the amateur code looms for consideration of delegates to the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada scheduled to be held in Toronto November 15-16-17.

Once more it is the west which is pressing for amelioration of the law governing amateurism throughout the Dominion. On several occasions in past years the amateur union has almost suffered permanent cleavage on the amateur question, and the argument is coming up once again in another form.

The proposal has been made by Judge J. A. Jackson, of Lethbridge, Alta., a past president of the union and a veteran figure in amateur athletics, that few amateurs should be regarded as such in the true sense of the term. The representative of judiciary in the upper house of the Canadian union has submitted a suggestion for classing of all sports participants, other than recognized and admitted professionals, as "non-professionals." He would drop the name "amateur" from the code.

Are Not Amateurs.

One reason why Judge Jackson has presented this plan for the consideration of the annual conclave is that, he says, practically no athletic in any sport qualifies as a strict amateur, either voluntarily or otherwise. There is almost a total absence in the Dominion of the so-called "amateur gentleman" who is not compelled to make a living. If the athlete is drawing a salary or weekly wage, then he is not an amateur if he goes away for a day or two in order to compete as an individual or in team sports and continues to draw his living stipend. The case is clearly set down in black and white in the union's "definition of an amateur." Incidentally it has often been said that the A.A.U. of C. is opposed to the idea that an amateur should make a living.

"An amateur is one who has never:

"Received any bonus or payment in lieu of loss of time while playing as a member of any club, or engaged in any athletic sport or exercise; or any consideration whatever, for any service as an athlete, except actual travelling or hotel expenses.'"

The actual fact is that countless amateurs in Canada have continued to receive their salaries from employers while away for half a day, a week or month in the cause of sport. It is quite possible that a number of those who competed at the British Empire games in England last August continued to receive their salaries while representing Canada—a sort of extended annual vacation with pay. They were not amateurs then, according to the rule of the Canadian Amateur Union. There are countless minor instances of a trip to another Canadian city for a day or two days where the athlete is not docked for time out.

To get away from this angle of amateur hypocrisy at least, Judge Jackson has proposed that all athletes now regarded as amateur be classed as "non-professional" so that they can continue to make their full-time living and engage in "amateur" sports.

Strict die-hards of the east will probably oppose the measure with all the fire of reformers. They have fought all suggestions for anything but full enforcement of amateur laws—a code that forbids Sunday sports, for instance, when it is broken regularly in this respect in Quebec and Northern Ontario, if not elsewhere.

Must Have Permission.

Four years ago the prairie branches urged for a provision which would enable amateur teams to play against professionals because of difficulty in getting any kind of competition through the remote nature of many communities. A split almost occurred in the Canadian Union when the eastern moguls held up their hands in holy horror. This was averted, however, when a compromise was effected whereby an amateur team could play a professional club under written permission when all proceeds were devoted to charity. This is the reason that such a rule was written into the A.A.U. constitution.

Under this law, the union permitted amateurs to play against pros. under stipulated conditions, but it was forbidden that an amateur should appear on the professional line-up against other pros. or other amateurs without being automatically outlawed. In other words, in one way it is an offence, Veteran AAU—C Mail Sport but in the other the amateur still retains his card.

One Way Out.

One year ago there was another flare-up over the question of the mingling of amateurs and pros. and again the west was keen for the privilege. A learned commission was appointed to go into the matter and a voluminous report was issued to show how other countries treated the matter. The memorandum was very involved, it was theoretically tabled and the question was left in the air.

Now the west, through Judge Jackson, who has been through the mill and should know whereof he speaks, is urging "non-professionalism" as a means of avoiding sport hypocrisy and of meeting modern every-day conditions in a practical manner. True, it is an acquiescing way of getting around a self-evident truth in amateur circles. If it is adopted, it means that well-meaning amateurs will not be asked to perjure themselves in signing a declaration that they have received nothing in lieu of loss of time while playing as an amateur. But will the Amateur Union look at it that way?

Dean Boys Jeered

MILWAUKEE, Wis., October 16. — The Dean brothers, loudly cheered as heroes of the World Series, were loudly jeered yesterday and disappointed fans raised such a roar police squads appeared at Borchert Field.

Scheduled to divide nine innings of an exhibition game, "Dizzy" and "Daffy" Dean did as little as possible for 5½ innings, and went to collect their portion from a gate of about $3,300.

A few minutes later some of the fans followed the pair to the box office to demand a refund. Riot squads arrived.

Supported by seven barnstormers, the Deans opposed the Kansas City Monarchs, a negro team, in a game called at the end of the ninth with the score eight-all. "Dizzy" pitched the first two innings, allowed a run on two walks, and a single and then retired to left field for four more innings.

Presumably because of his sore arm, "Daffy" remained aloof of the pitcher's box, working in right-field. Without waiting for their time at bat in the last of the sixth the Deans walked off the field and the catcalls arose.

Lacrosse Split Imminent As Orillia Heads West

Lacrosse champions of Canada, winners of the Mann Cup by virtue of three straight wins over New Westminster Salmon Bellies, Orillia Terriers are heading for Vancouver and a post-season series with St. Helen's club there, despite plain worded threats from the C.A.L.A. that suspensions to all players and officials would follow the trip. Secretary Fred Waghorne of the Ontario Lacrosse Association beamed an affirmative when his permission was asked. The C.A.L.A., headed by President Dan McKenzie and B.C.L.A. officials, marked a decisive "no". Orillia left just the same while the Dominion body breathes threats of retribution and holds the Mann Cup in abeyance. The O.L.A. is already widely split and the same condition is certain in British Columbia if the clubs play in Vancouver. Here are the defiant Terriers: Back row, Andy Tudhope, Stan Partridge, Bill Curran, Johnny Quinn, Gordon Boettger, centre. Middle row: Dr. Hipwell and Walter Scott, executives; Ed Downey, Bill Mulliss, W. L. Pratt, president; R. J. Miller, secretary-treasurer. Front row: Jack Bonthron, Bill Wilkes, Tommy Scott, Norman Cooke, coach; Bill Wilson, KenPethick, Ernie Curran. Seated: Norman L. Reid, trainer. —(Photo by Clifton Stewart).

BOXING'S FORGOTTEN CHAMP TRAINS NEAR WRECKED SHIP

Primo Carnera Still Confident of Fistic Ability—Prepares for South American Tour—Promoters Leave Him Out of Winter Plans.

By L. S. B. SHAPIRO, Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—In a gym at Asbury Park, N.J., almost in the shadow of the wrecked Morro Castle, a forgotten man of boxing trains for a comeback. Only his handlers and a few stragglers off the boardwalk stand beside the ring and watch the forgotten one go through his paces.

His name is Primo Carnera—remember it? Five months ago he was heavyweight champion of the world. His every move was recorded in the newspapers, people trailed him in the streets, he had friends in legion, he was the national hero of his native Italy and the idol of Manhattan's Italian section. The mid-town hotel in which he made his New York residence reserved a special elevator for him; he was heavyweight champion of the world.

Still Confident

Primo has still supreme confidence in himself, even if the boxing world hasn't. The same blind courage that sent him staggering toward Max Baer's sledgehammer fists is driving him through his training siege. Some time this week he will slip on a train for Miami. From there he will board an air-liner for South America, and there he will fight the tune-up bouts he feels he needs before he can face Max Baer again.

His manager, Louis Seresi, left last week to arrange for the bouts. The former champion, still a hero in Latin-America, will rate $30,000 for the first bout in Buenos Aires.

Carnera has his dreams of a comeback, but along boxing row any mention of Carnera is greeted with a protracted silence. Plans for the winter and spring heavyweight campaign are being formulated by promoters, and Carnera is not included. They name Steve Hamas, Art Lasky and Max Schmeling, and from these three will be chosen the opponent for next June's big bout against Baer.

Not Quite Wrecked

Unless Carnera burns up the cables with his exploits in South America, there seems little chance that the big fellow will get the opportunity to regain his title next season.

But he refuses to believe that. He feels that it is in the cards for him to regain that title and bring it back to Mussolini. Baer may have punched the daylights out of him last June, and dragging his hulk around on crutches for six weeks may have weakened him, but this massive Italian still retains an amazing faith in himself.

When boardwalk strollers pass by the wreck of the Morro Castle they remember the night sports writers likened Carnera to a battered dreadnought, careening in the wind and buffeted by huge waves. They glance toward Carnera's camp. Some of them drop in and watch the big boy train. Then they walk out again, look at the wreck and shake their heads slowly. They figure the sports writers are wrong. Carnera isn't ready for the scrap heap.

GOALTENDER REJECTS TERMS OFFERED BY CHICAGO CLUB

Chabot Reported to Have Asked for Same Salary Paid Late Charlie Gardiner.

MAY QUIT GAME.

(By the Canadian Press.)

The late Charlie Gardiner accepted no salary reductions from the Chicago Black Hawks, but the greatest of all goal tenders had more than one contract battle with Major Frederic McLaughlin. Chuck won them all and at his death was considered the highest paid puck-stopper in the sport.

Lorne Chabot, who went to Chicago from Montreal Canadiens in the player deal which also sent Homie Morenz and Marty Birke to the Hawks, wanted a contract that called for the same amount Gardiner received last season. On this basis the Hawk management refused to do business. The former Port Arthur player is out in the cold.

Either Joe Starks, former Toronto amateur who was Gardiner's understudy, or Pork Levine, sensation of the American Association with Kansas City, will play goal for the Hawks. The Hawks started training yesterday at Champagne, Ill.

Goal trouble may be somewhat widespread in the N.H.L. this season. Jack Adams at Detroit is looking for a successor to Wilf Cude, who was recalled by Canadiens, and it is a question whether Lester Patrick of New York will depend again on Andy Aitkenhead.

For more than a week Patrick has operated a training school at Winnipeg, coaching a large squad of amateurs in fundamentals. He hopes to pick up a couple of promising players from the group before his own Rangers arrive on the scene to start training.

It was nearly 15 years ago that Howie Morenz and Frank Carson started their hockey careers together in Stratford, Ont. They were spectacular juniors and cracking good intermediates. Then Morenz went to Montreal to become the most colorful figure in the sport. Fran didn't go to the Canadiens and he never achieved the prominence of his junior partner.

Yesterday Carson announced his retirement from hockey. Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings asked waivers on the grayhaired winger a few days ago which meant the end of Frank's major league existence anyway. Adams was not pleased with the veteran's work in the N.H.L. finals against Toronto Maple Leafs last spring.

Carson, who played with Stratford, Windsor, New York Americans, Montreal Maroons and Detroit during his professional career, is ready to settle down to business in Windsor and forget hockey. He won't be a minor leaguer again.

Four brilliant amateurs were included in the squad when Canadiens opened the training season last night at Saint John, N.B. Maxie Bennett, chunky little winger of Hamilton Tigers, Ontario senior champions last season; Adelard LaFrance of Sudbury Wolves; Jack McGill and Nels Crutchford of McGill are the four. LaFrance played a few games with the Flying Frenchmen near the end of the last campaign.

HORSE STOPS BUS

SAN FRANCISCO.—From an encounter with a draft horse, 20 members of the Sunset Athletic Club football squad and their coach came home rubbing bruises.

The horse made a surprise play by running onto the highway and blocking the bus in which the team was returning from a game at Pittsburgh, Calif. There was a big pileup inside the bus as it came to a stop.

Professional Offer Considered By Perry

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 16. — Fred Perry, the world's premier tennis player, informed Reuter's News Agency yesterday that he would definitely decide today upon offers to turn professional.

The English ace said it was estimated he could earn £10,000 (roughly $48,000) inside of five months touring the United States with Ellsworth Vines and other professionals.

Perry said that if he decided upon quitting the amateur ranks he would not return to England. Presumably he meant he would not see his homeland for some time. He is scheduled to leave for Australia Wednesday.

FRISCH SIGNS YEAR CONTRACT

"Fordham Flash" to Lead World's Baseball Champions Next Season.

TERMS NOT REVEALED.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Frankie Frisch, who drove the madcap Cardinals to the National League pennant and a World Series triumph over the Detroit Tigers in his first full year as a manager, yesterday quietly signed a contract to lead the club again in 1935.

The signing, which followed brief conferences with President Sam Breadon and Vice-President Branch Rickey, was a mere formality. Both Breadon and Rickey had said the old Fordham Flash, still a spry second baseman after sixteen years of National League campaigning, would be back next year.

Terms Not Revealed

The terms of the contract, which is for one year, were not announced, and Frisch said they would not be disclosed.

One of the greatest infielders of modern baseball, Frisch jumped directly from the Fordham campus to New York Giants, and came to St. Louis in the winter of 1926-27 in a trade which sent Rogers Hornsby to New York. In the middle of the 1933 campaign he relieved Gabby Street as manager of the Cardinals.

With the formality of signing Frisch out of the way, club officials planned, as usual, to wait until about the first of the year before starting negotiations with the rest of the players.

Negotiations with the pitching brothers Dean — Jerome Herman 'Dizzy' and Paul 'Daffy'—are, of course, expected to attract the major attention.

Deans Quite Amicable

The Deans, now raking in the cash in a barnstorming tour before turning to vaudeville and maybe motion pictures, say they expect no trouble in reaching terms. Breadon and Rickey, on the surface, at least, indicate they can foresee nothing but sweet words when the contract talk begins. Except for centre-field, regarded as the team's one glaring weakness, the Cardinals are expected to start the 1935 campaign with virtually the 1934 line-up. It was good enough to nose out New York Giants for the 1934 National League title and defeat Detroit in the World Series.

LITZENBERGER SUSPENDED.

NEW YORK, October 16. — Eddie Litzenberger, Calgary's famous jockey, was suspended yesterday for the remainder of the two weeks of the Empire meeting following rough-riding aboard G. L. Arvin's Luck In, in the third race. Luck In, which finished second, appeared to interfere with Thundertone, the favorite, several times around the final bend, and the little Canadian rider was charged with "deliberate herding and foul riding."

GRAY HAS 15 POINT TOTAL

Welch Tops Interprovincial While Stirling is Leader in O.R.F.U.

CANADIAN PRESS SUMMARY.

TORONTO, Oct. 16.—Youthful "Cam" Gray, University of Toronto's clever field-goal expert, has produced the most pressing claim so far in this young football season to the Intercollegiate high-scoring mantle Jack Sinclair shed when he retired from the game.

In two games Gray, a substitute backfielder, has scored 15 points, 9 more than Bob Isbister, star backfielder of Toronto's Intercollegiate squad. He has scored a touchdown, two field goals, a single and converted three tries.

While Gray took over the college group leadership in the Canadian Press's first scoring summary of the season, "Huck" Welch, Montreal back, led the Big Four, and Hugh Stirling, Sarnia, the Ontario Union.

Welch, with nine points, had two more than Frank Turville, the Hamilton Tiger. Four players were grouped behind Turville with five points—Johnny Ferraro, Hamilton, and Billy Wilson, Ab Box and Ted Morris, all of Toronto Argonauts.

Norman Perry, leader in the O.R.F.U. last year, was in second place to-day with 15 points, two less than Stirling.

ELECTRIC CLUB SOUND POSITION

1934-35 OFFICERS.

Alderman Bob Cotton was elected president of the Canadian General Electric Co. Social and Athletic Club, for the fourth consecutive term last night at the Legion Hall, when the eighth annual meeting of the association was held. Most of last year's executive was returned to office, and are as follows: J. Pilling, H. A. Cranfield, B. I. Burgess, F. Batterson, and W. G. Shiner. Alf. Day was elected vice-president, and W. G. Swanger, auditor.

A clear, detailed financial statement read by the treasurer, showed the club to be in a sound financial position, and the meeting approved the continuing of the usual activities which are staged each year for the benefit of the members. Chief among these undertakings are the annual picnic and annual Christmas Tree, which are held on an elaborate scale and afford much real entertainment for the families of C.G.E. employees.

The picnic which has been held for the last two years at Nicholls Oval will be run off in the same location next summer, and the Christmas Tree will in all probability be staged on similar lines to other years.

Chief among the other activities sponsored and financed by this organization during the current year was softball for ladies and men, and bowling. Soccer, hardball, shop hockey, intermediate hockey, ladies' basketball, and horticulture were also carried on successfully. The membership of the association, according to the list available at the meeting, showed that more than 80 per cent of the employees in the factory and office were members in good standing.

The following C.G.E. employees won door prizes at the annual meeting of the C.G.E. Social and Athletic Club held last night in the Legion Hall:

Shooting Arrows Without Bows

Hul-che, deadly art of the throwing-stick, with which the ancient Mayan warriors of Yucatan fought their battles and hunted game, is being revived as a sport. Used instead of a bow to hurl arrows long distances and with deadly accuracy, the Mayan race became super-efficient in the use of this weapon. Specimens were found by Robert B. Stacy-Judd, explorer, in Yucatan, whose wife is shown with the unique throwing-stick reproduced for modern sport.

Contrary to the announceemnt yesterday that the Peterborough intermediate rugby team would have a lay-off of two weeks before its next game, comes official word today that the Petes will resume their series with Belleville in the Quinte City this Saturday. Although the original schedule called for a two weeks' adjournment of hostilities at this time, team managers decided that it was unwise to have any unnecessary delay in proceedings and arrangements were completed to have the game Saturday in Belleville with a game here the following week.

A Toronto official of the O.R.F.U. who was a spectator of Saturday's gridiron combat was much impressed by the brand of rugby played by both squads. He commented on the weight of the Belleville team and stated that if the Petes get by the Quinte crew it is doubtful if they will encounter such a heavy team in the playdowns.

Lionel Blaker, left-footed punter, is being groomed to take over the team's kicking duties.

After one of the stiffest lacrosse series played in this district in recent years Millbrook won the inter-county shield by defeating Dinty's Inn last night in the fifth and deciding game 5-3. At the end of the third period the score was tied 3-3, but in the final gallop the winners ran in two counters on smart combination efforts.

Plans for the proposed new skating rink in Lindsay have had to be revised again. It had been planned to build a $15,000 arena, but the donations are not coming in as expected, and even the most optimistic member of the committee considers that the subscriptions will not total more than $10,000. Representatives of the rink building committee will visit other towns in order to study their arenas in order to obtain ideas for the Lindsay building. It is expected that a start will be made in the construction this month.

BOWLING PLANT BOARD ELECTED

Ernie Wall and James Matthews Replace Fitzpatrick and Sedgewick on 1934-35 Executive.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, Ltd., held its annual meeting in the clubhouse last evening and, while there was an interesting gathering, yet it was felt that more interest should have been shown.

J. T. Braund, president, opened the meeting with an address that was full of encouragement, and good advice—especially for the younger members who would seek positions of responsibility with the company. The secretary-treasurer read a report covering the activities of the club and a complete review of the financial statement was also read. While the club has not made any great advance on the financial end, still a balance of $15.15 was shown.

Suggestions Offered

The general feeling of the club was that the city of Peterborough did not realize just what the bowling and tennis club was doing for sport in the community and several suggestions were also offered along that line.

Several members took part in an open discussion and J. McTaggart and Dr. McPherson, speaking for the tennis players, offered some very helpful and timely suggestions by way of improving conditions for the net players.

The election of Board of Directors resulted in Ernie Wall and James Matthews replacing J. D. Fitzpatrick (retired) and J. H. Sedgewick on the new board. This board will meet on Thursday night to elect its officers and the chairman of the different committees.

Members of the association would be supplied with badges and persons without these badges, if found hunting on posted ground, would be liable to prosecution.

The scheme has already been adopted by the Leamington branch of the association and other branches in the county are expected to follow suit before the season opens.

Getting Bit Cold For Two Alligators

It's getting a bit cold for alligators around Peterborough now so the indoor tank in which they spent last winter is being rigged up again for the two pet reptiles at the Filtration plant. They will be moved indoors any day now.

Ross Dobbin, who brought the alligators from Florida two years ago, says they will likely spend a very quiet winter. Lying in the heated water indoors, perhaps dreaming of life in sunny Florida bayous, they will take little interest in their surroundings until the returning warmth of the Canadian sun again permits their removal outdoors. They eat only one meal a week each in summer and in winter they show even less interest in food.

And, by the way, the ugly twins have never yet been named. Have you any suggestions to make to Mr. Dobbin?

LEVINE AFTER GOALIE BERTH WITH CHICAGO

190 Pound Net Guardian Played With Detroit and Windsor in Pro Ranks.

PEPPERY NATURE.

WINDSOR, Ont., October 16 (C. P.). — Pudgy "Porky" Levine, contender for the Chicago Black Hawk goalkeeping berth in this year's National Hockey League race, made the jump into monied ranks from Windsor. Peppery by nature, one of Levine's outstanding characteristics is his unlimited flow of chatter, whether on or off the ice. This has often involved him in bodily combat, and he is known in the minor league circles as a "fighting" man.

Named Samuel by his parents, "Porky" came by his nickname honestly, for while only five feet eight inches in height, he scales close to 190 pounds. In order to keep his girth within bounds, Levine works in Northern Ontario mines during the summer months.

Played in North.

He first gained prominence with South Porcupine in the Northern Hockey Association. Later he was with Timmins in the same circuit, and from there he came to this border area where he turned professional, playing first with Detroit and then with Windsor in the International League.

Levine is one of three Hebrew goal-tenders who have made the big league. Joe Ironstone of Sudbury, guarded the nets for Ottawa Senators for a few games several years ago, while last year Morris Roberts played for Cleveland in the I.H.L.

If he makes the grade, "Porky" will be the second Hebrew player in the National Hockey League this year. New York Rangers have the other in Alex Levinsky, who served his apprenticeship in pro company with the Toronto Leafs

STANFORD RULES ON PACIFIC COAST

Trojans Practically Out of Picture by Virtue of Their Two Straight Losses.

By Bob Cavagnaro

(Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—The pages of United States gridiron history don't tell of a time in the past when so early in the season divisional leaderships are as topsy-turvy as they are in the current college campaign.

Notwithstanding that next Saturday's games might bring forth in the way of additional upsets, the 1934 season, only three weeks old, has produced standout teams in every major section of the country with the exception of the Middle-west.

In two sectors the issue is cut and dried for the nonce and, perhaps, the remainder of the season.

Stanford rules on the Pacific coast, the Indians have things pretty much their own way with the Southern California trojans toppled out of the picture by virtue of two successive defeats and St. Mary's an upset victim of Little Nevada.

Pittsburgh's Panthers are kings of the Eastern lair, taking over control of the jungle on the strength of their 20-6 victory over Southern and Jefferson and West Virginia. California last week-end and decisive triumphs over Washington and Jefferson and West Virginia.

The Eighth Commandment

By NORMA HENDRICKS

READ THIS FIRST:

Donald Reeves, young instructor, is found shot to death in his office on the campus of Center City university. The janitor who discovered the body summons Officer Callaghan. The policeman, after calling headquarters, learns from Dan, the janitor, that Reeves, although not popular, was much loved by his wife. Inspector Lee arrives at the scene of tragedy, with his frequent co-worker, Timothy Blade, newspaper reporter, and finds the gun that was beside the body has disappeared. After the coroner's visit, Inspector Lee greets Professor Wilson, head of the English department, and his pretty secretary, Ruth Turner, and tells them of the tragedy. The girl seems relieved.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 5

Lee quickly followed the sergeant upstairs. The room to which he was led was a small one, with a deep gabled ceiling, dipping sharply to the farther wall, where a single window let in the May sunshine. Dust particles danced in the sunlight's path. Dust covered the floor and bore the imprints of a man's shoes. A trail led from the door to the window.

The room had probably been a maid's in the days when its former owners lived in the house. Now its furnishings consisted of an ordinary folding canvas cot against the wall by the window, a kitchen chair standing near it with a wax candle stuck in a saucer. The cheap blankets were rumpled as if the sleeper had just crawled out of them. On top of them had been tossed a copy of an expensive magazine.

Lee noted that last and wondered what it meant. When he first entered the room, he had thought its occupant might be just an ordinary tramp who had somehow heard of the vacant third floor. It was an obvious guess and didn't fit the murder, but Lee had learned not to despise obvious guesses. They were too often correct. Now the magazine threw him off again. The ordinary tramps he had seen brought into the station would never have kept such a magazine about.

The chair and saucer, he thought might be traced. The bedclothes and cot were of the common sort that could be bought at a dozen or more army supply stores in the less prosperous business section. Probably not much luck there. But the footprints were something tangible. At least they would tell if a member of the English department had been using that room.

As he stood there in a study, he heard Dr. Holmes' penetrating monotonous voice below him. He couldn't understand what the coroner said, but the tone was enough. Still griping, was he? The inspector chuckled softly.

Then he turned to the sergeant, who had guided him to the room. "Any other stairs up here but the ones we used?"

"No, sir."

"Watch them, then, till after Grimes goes over the place. Tell him to come up when he finishes downstairs."

On the second floor, Lee waited until the sergeant had delivered his order to Grimes in Reeves' office and had taken up his post at the staircase door. As he went down toward the seminar room Jenkins hurried in from outside.

"Inspector, there's a bunch o' young fellas out here insistin' they got to come in for classes. I never seen kids so anxious for learnin'. They keep askin' if they get a cut. Cut o' what, I ask you?" Jenkins' tone was injured.

"Tell them they'll get worse than a cut if they don't beat it and that there won't be any classes in here today. Where's Blade?"

"He went around back to find that janitor."

Lee nodded and re-entered the seminar room.

Two strangers had joined Professor Wilson and Ruth Turner, a man and a woman. The woman was talking rapidly to Wilson in indignant tones, while he stared blankly ahead of him. Lee looked at her ruefully. She reminded him of a teacher he had had in the fifth grade, whom he'd never forgotten. She was about 50, with iron-gray hair done high on her head. In spite of the warm day, she wore a long-sleeved blue dress.

While he watched her, she stopped her tirade to Wilson, drew her lips into a thin, firm line above her stubborn chin, and turning her head, discovered him. The look she gave him made him feel as he had the day his teacher caught him shooting paper wads. She'd be lots of help, she would, he thought viciously. He hadn't liked that other school teacher and he didn't like this one.

He turned his gaze from her to the young fellow sitting beside Miss Turner. He had swung away from her and was looking moodily out the window as Jenkins scattered from the front of the house the group of curious co-eds in bright sleeveless frocks, and their equally curious escorts. One of the young chaps on the lawn caught sight of the man at the window and waved at him. The man turned abruptly into the room.

Nothing unusual about him, decided Lee. He looked like one of the young cubs who came down as police reporters when they were just out of college, nice looking, eager, but kind of dumb with a lot to learn.

"Whom did you wish to see?"

It was that woman's voice, sweetened to a candied hardness and rather patronizing. The inspector looked at her quickly.

"I am Detective Inspector Lee," he explained heavily and coldly.

Wilson introduced her. "This is Miss Edwards, another member of our department. And this is Mr. Jamieson, who shared the office with Reeves." Lee nodded to both of them, but neither of them spoke.

"It's hit him pretty hard, poor chap," murmured Wilson, indicating the young man.

Lee nodded in a vague fashion. "There are a number of things I want to ask you," he said clearly so that they all could hear. "Suppose we just pull up around this long table and get down to business. They observed him, Miss Turner drawing a chair close to Jamieson's.

When they were settled, Lee turned to Wilson. "Dan McManus says there is only one key to all the doors around here, inside and out. Is that right?"

Wilson nodded assent.

"Rather odd, isn't it?"

Wilson looked indignant. "It was my idea, inspector. I can't see why it should be called odd. A key for each office and for every outside door would mean almost a dozen to keep track of. Besides, we frequently enter one of the other offices besides our own for reference books or papers and the same key to all doors simplifies matters."

"I shouldn't say that it does—for us," muttered Lee. "Suppose you give me a list of people who carry these keys."

Wilson was startled, but complied.

"I shouldn't say that it does—for us," muttered Lee. "Suppose you give me a list of people who carry these keys."

Wilson was startled, but complied. "The four of us here, of course, and Dan whom you've seen. Then Professor Walker and Professor Henderson each have one. They are the other two members of the department. And Reeves, of course." This last was low.

"Where are Walker and Henderson now?"

"Home, I should think, inspector. They have no classes until later this morning."

"Just let me have their addresses and I'll send someone for them."

Because he was a peaceable man, Wilson did as the inspector asked, but nothing could disguise his growing anger at the man's intimations.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, October 17.

According to the planetary operations wielding influence on the affairs of this day a sudden and abrupt whirl of events may be expected, with things stirring at a particularly lively pace and possibly instigated from a most unforeseen quarter. Benefits connected with property or industry may be looked for, but sign all documents with extreme precaution. Private affairs should flourish and largely engage the attention, especially in home affiliations.

If It Is Your Birthday,

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of lively and stirring events arising from quite unexpected quarters, with abrupt developments in connection with labor, real possessions or possibly inheritances. Sign all papers with great caution. Domestic, social and affectional matters thrive and bring much gratification.

A child born on this day may be profound, studious and may have some outstanding flairs of genius. At the same time it may be home-loving, friendly and socially popular; also lean to art or culture.

As the result of running a splinter into her thumb three years ago, Susan C. Raynsford has died at Battersea, England.

COBOURG CHURCH MARKS CENTENARY

Rev. William Barclay of Hamilton, is Special Preacher.

COBOURG, October 15. — Large congregations and special services yesterday marked the observance of the centenary of Presbyterianism in Cobourg.

The services were held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and the special preacher was Rev. William Barclay, minister of Central Presbyterian Church, Hamilton, and formerly a minister of the Church of Scotland. He was assisted by the present incumbent of St. Andrew's, Rev. J. B. Rhodes. The congregation of Trinity United Church cancelled its own evening service and worshipped at St. Andrew's. The assisting soloist was Frank Oldfield of Toronto.

The first meeting of Presbyterians was held in Cobourg about the year 1823, when the district was served by a "saddle-bag preacher." In 1827 the first elders were chosen — the late Hon. Andrew Jaffray and the late John Lindsay. In 1833 Rev. Matthew Millar came to Canada from Scotland, and was appointed to the Cobourg congregation, and the Old Stone Church was completed in 1834—a century ago.

Rev. Mr. Millar, less than a year after his induction, lost his life while returning from a trip to Perth where he had assisted in a Communion service. His horse and cutter broke through the ice of the Bay of Quinte, and the minister's body was identified later by the presence in the cutter of his Communion vessels.

The new church was dedicated by Rev. James Ketchum of Belleville. The church was then known as "The Presbyterian Church of Cobourg, in the Presbytery of Kingston, in the Synod of Canada, in connection with the Church of Scotland."

MARMORA CHURCH HOLD ANNIVERSARY

United Church Celebrates Its Sixtieth Anniversary With Rev. Semple Preaching.

MARMORA, Oct. 15.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—Joyous, well attended services at St. Andrew's United church on Sunday marked the sixtieth anniversary of the church. The sacred edifice was beautifully decorated with gladioli and other blooms, the gift of the Women's Association. At both morning and evening services the choir very creditably rendered two anthems. At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth, preached an excellent sermon, choosing for his text Heb. 11:39-40, particularly touching upon the words, "God having provided some better things for us that they without us should not be made perfect." He especially referred to the debt which the congregation owed to the early members of the church and the challenge that comes to carry on.

In the evening Rev. James Semple, D.Th., of Bridge Street United church, Belleville, occupied the pulpit and discoursed upon Zechariah, 8:4-5'. He referred to the respect and regard which should be showed to the aged in the membership of the church because of the value of their experience. He also touched upon the rights of the young which should be respected by their seniors. Every boy and girl has a right to be well born, to play, to be well educated and to have a good religious training.

The services are being continued next Sunday with Rev. Dr. Kent of Queen's University, being the guest preacher for the day.

Rev. E. N. Grant, rector of Bancroft, was in charge of the services of the Anglican parish of Marmora on Sunday. His subject in the morning at St. Paul's was "Our Citizenship is in Heaven," while at night he delivered a very striking sermon on the text, "A Man Under Authority."

I Can and I Will

A Valuable Health Slogan

Because fear and worry and discouragement
Are usual symptoms of nervous disorders,
It is important that you assert your will power.
Dwelling on the thought that you are a nervous wreck
Tends to hold you down and delay the return of health.
It is necessary to take advantage of restorative treatment.
Rich, nourishing blood is required
To restore nerve force to the depleted nervous system.
But especially in derangements of the nerves
You should reckon with the influence of mind over matter.
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will supply the elements of nerve force.
You can greatly hasten the return of health
By adopting this motto "I can and I will."
Refuse to be worried and blue and discouraged.
Assert your control over habits which are holding you down.
Be master of your health.

THIRD MAN HELD IN SLAYING OF KING ALEXANDER

Whereabouts of Leader of Gang is Known, Early Arrest is Expected.

TRACING WOMAN.

By ROBERT PARKER

MELUN, France, Oct. 16. (AP).—Valuable information concerning the international ring of plotters which delivered death to King Alexander of Yugoslavia was drawn to-day from the third man to be held for the Marseille assassinations.

French and Yugoslav detectives said their belief that the gang engaged in widespread machinations was confirmed by a seven hour grilling of Sylvester Malny

The whereabouts of Dr. Ante Pavelich, described as the director of the plot, are known to Yugoslav authorities, police said, and they are closing in on him. A woman accomplice is being traced from Paris.

"The case is in fine shape," said Chief Simonevitch of the Yugoslav surete.

A five day search for Malny ended yesterday when he was seized after hunger and thirst drove him from Fontainbleau forest.

The detectives said he finally admitted that he was sent to Marseille to take the place of Petrus Kalemen, Alexander's assassin, if Kalemen lost his nerve. But it was indicated that Malny was not in Marseille at the time.

Malny first insisted that he was a chauffeur and had come to France in search of work. Chief Chief Simonevitch, however, took charge of the questioning, stared at Malny and said:

Talks Freely

Malny's insistence that he knew nothing of the plot was soon broken and he talked freely, admitting that he went to Marseille carrying two pistols and two bombs. The officers were unable to draw from him what he did there, or how and when he departed.

A photograph of the assassination was shown to him, but he displayed no emotion.

Chief Simonevitch said Malny was a Yugoslav, named Mjo Kral, who had worked as a chauffeur at Belgrade and obtained useful information about King Alexander and others.

Malny arrived at a Paris hotel September 28, police said, accompanied by a "strikingly beautiful woman. They registered as "M. and Mme. Jean Vandracek of Trieste."

Malny left the hotel Otober 5, and the woman followed him the next day. It is she who is being hunted.

TWO ENUMERATORS COMPLETE LISTS

Voters Tabulated on First Day in No. 35 Division.

Registration of voters for the next Federal elections was well advanced throughout the city to-day, Vincent Eastwood, registrar for the riding, told The Examiner this afternoon.

J. Londerville and C Wright in No 35 polling division had their list complete last night with the exception of a few return calls that had to be made. Mr. Eastwood spent the day checking up on the enumerators to make sure they were filling out the forms properly, thereby avoiding at the outset any possibility of mistakes that would require duplication of calls in any of the sections of the city.

Home and School Association News

ASSOCIATION COUNCIL.

The regular monthly meeting of the Home and School Council was held last evening in the green room at the Y.W.C.A. Mrs. E. Wand, president, presided over an attendance which included most of the school associations. On a roll call, Queen Alexandra had the largest number present.

The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison.

E. Frost presented the secretarial report. Mrs. T. Hendry gave the financial statements.

Mrs. Wand then led a discussion pertaining to the forming of study groups in the various associations, and it was decided to form at the November meeting a committee to arrange these as regards leadership and a common procedure.

Founder's Day will be celebrated suitably in February, in a program of remembrance and consecration.

Those making quilts for the contests are requested to proceed with the work, and the date and place of exhibition will be announced later

A letter was read by Mrs. J. L. Hughes (Council convenor of religious education) with a request from Mrs. J. S. Peters of Toronto (convenor of religious education for the Ontario Confederation) that one of the regular meetings of the associations be set aside for the study of religious education with a view to selecting suitable hymns and prayers.

The same request is also desired from the League of Nations convenor in an effort to spread peace.

Mrs. Wand expressed joy and gratification of the great success of the recent regional conference of the Home and School Associations, and congratulated the committee in charge for their co-operation and ultimate success.

A hearty invitation was extended to those present to attend a tea at 326 Burnham Street on the afternoon of October 25th, from 3 to 6, under the auspices of King George Home and School Club. Admission will be a cup and saucer, or silver collection.

The Council and associations will attend Murray Street Church in a body for their annual service on the evening of Sunday, November 18th, at the invitation of Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe.

YOUTH IS TOLD TO LEAVE TOWN

Police Are Investigating Mystery Shooting by Unknown Gunman.

HAT IS PIERCED.

SPENCERVILLE, Ont., Oct. 16 (C.P.). — Police here to-day were investigating a mysterious shooting by an unknown gunman on Saturday involving Charles Montgomery, 19, of Spencerville, who last week received two threatening letters, demanding he leave town before October 15. The bullet passed through Montgomery's hat without injuring him.

According to the youth's father, Charles received a letter on Friday demanding he leave town immediately. No reason was given why his son should do so, he said. The following afternoon the youth received another letter setting October 15 as the last and threatening that if the youth did not leave town he would "get his."

The youth told police while he was on his way up town to see some friends on Saturday night he heard a shot and felt a tug at his hat. Immediately he thought of the letters and took off his hat. He did not see any gunflash and thought the unseen marksman was hiding in some bushes at the rear of a house across the street.

ASQUITH WISER THOUGHT HE WAS Remarkable Conversation Comes to Light in Publishing of Memoirs.

HOME RULE ISSUE.

By THOMAS CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 16 (C.P. Cable)—A remarkable conversation between the late Lord Asquith and Lord Carson some years after the "Home Rule" crisis in Ireland was revealed to-day with publication of the second volume of Lord Carson's "Life."

During the height of Ulster's resistance to Home Rule under leadership of Carson, there were many demands for Carson's prosecution. When greater events—the war—had reconciled them, Asquith told Carson that he never intended to prosecute him because he feared he could not secure a conviction.

"You need have had no fear," said Carson, "for I should have pleaded guilty."

"Guilty?" asked the astonished Asquith.

"Yes," Carson replied to the then Prime Minister. "I should have said I was born under the British flag and was a loyal subject of His Majesty. So much do I value this birthright that I was prepared to rebel in order to defend it. If to fight so as to remain like yourself a loyal subject of His Majesty be my crime, I should have pleaded guilty."

"And where," Carson added, "would you have been then?"

"That only shows," said Asquith, "that I was even wiser in not prosecuting you than I thought I was."

RANSOM MONEY TO NASHVILLE

$50,000 in Stoll Kidnapping Reported Sent to Intermediary.

POLICE SILENT.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 16 (AP)—Reports from Louisville that the $50,000 ransom money for the release of Mrs. Alice Stoll had been sent to Nashville followed developments in the kidnap case here in which it became known that a Nashville man had been named intermediary.

The Nashvillian, it was learned from authoritative police sources, was named in the ransom note left by the abductor of the Louisville society matron before he carried her away from her fashionable home October 10.

Whether the ransom money might have been sent here, whether it had been collected or whether, as possible, it had been sent to another city were questions officers would neither discuss nor answer.

Social Evening Held In Community Hall

CAVAN, Oct. 16 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Friday evening, Group III of the Cavan Women's Institute, with Mrs. Edgar Fallis as convenor, sponsored a social evening in Cavan Community Hall.

The "Serenaders," a five-piece orchestra, supplied the music for dancing.

The door prize, a box of Laura Secord's chocolates, was won by Clarence Endicott of Raeboro.

Tickets for lunch were sold at the very low fee of 15 cents. There was a fairly good crowd and a pleasant time. The evening added a nice sum to the W.I. treasury.

Apsley

The annual conference of the district Red Cross Outposts was held this year in Apsley, meeting on Thursday afternoon. About thirty delegates were present from Bancroft, Wilberforce, Whitney and Coe Hill. Dr. Caldwell and Miss McEwan, of the divisional office in Toronto, were also present. The afternoon was spent in helpful discussions on the various problems affecting the several local branches of the Red Cross Society, and many interesting experiences of the work done were recited. Before departing for their homes the visitors were entertained to a supper served in the Windsor Hall, at which Colonel Lowe, from camp No. 6, on the Apsley-Bancroft highway, gave an address on his experiences of work done by the Red Cross while serving overseas in the Great War, which was much appreciated.

His Honor Judge Smoke presided at a sitting of the Division Court in the Town Hall, Apsley on Friday afternoon. Only two cases were down for hearing. Longbottom vs. Chandos Township, a claim for damages by cutting timber, was adjourned sine die. W. S. Catlin, against whom judgment had been secured by Anstruther Township for taxes, was ordered to pay $3 a month for the amount claimed, $7 and some cents.

Windsor Girl Napper Used California Car

WINDSOR. — Investigation proceeded to-day into the alleged abduction of Shirley Newman, 11, who claims she was dragged into a green motorcar by a man while enroute to school Monday afternoon and was not released until she had been carried 10 miles out of Windsor in a southerly direction. The girl's description of the car's markers have led police to believe them to be of California origin and a list of plate numbers checked through various ports of entry. The girl says one of the numbers was a "9".

Boy's Fear of Curse Ends in Arrest; Stabbed His Stepmother With a Knife

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Seven years, now, Sidney Romain's pretty young stepmother had taken the place of the mother who died. Sidney was 14, rather old to believe in superstition. His first-year classmates at Sullivan High School would have smiled.

But Sidney Romain told the police yesterday that she had placed a curse upon him, that he was afraid bad luck would befall him.

Then too, the slight, studious boy said, she had spoken unkindly of his own mother. He brooded over that. Perhaps it was resentment over everything. Anyway, Sidney came back yesterday, after he had started for school.

The stepmother, Mrs. Arthur Romain, said it wasn't true. She had been especially careful that Sidney never suspect her of ill-will toward the woman whose motherless boy she was caring for in the home at 6750 Greenview avenue. And the curse she had placed upon him, that was boyish nonsense.

Like Sidney, she told her story to the police. But she told it in the Rogers Park Hospital, and he at the police station, where he is being held.

When he came back instead of going to school, he stabbed her five times with a breadknife and the doctors are not at all sure she will recover.

Boys and girls found "out late," are required to appear at Castor Oil court in town hall next Wednesday. One ounce for the first violation, two for the second, and three for the third.

RICE HARVEST IS COMPLETED

Two Men in Canoe Paddle Rice Beds Beating Down Rice.

PLENTY FOR EVERYONE.

Indians at both the Hiawatha and Alderville Reserves have completed their annual harvest of the black rice crop.

Hanlan Howard of Hiawatha told The Examiner yesterday that the yield of wild rice had been up to the average, and most of the homes on the Otonabee shore of the lake had laid in a sufficient stock for the coming year.

"I got fifty or sixty pounds myself, and that will be enough to do me," Mr. Howard said, as he finished an afternoon's job of digging potatoes from his garden.

Old-Fashioned Way.

The Hiawatha men go about the harvesting of rice in the simple manner of their ancestors before the white people came to this part of Ontario. Two men to a canoe, they slowly paddle through the rice beds, one slowly moving the boat, and the other beating the rice into it. Afterwards it is dried and parched ashore, and finally the husks are winnowed from it. After a final cleaning it is ready for the domestic bin or for commercial sale, some of the crop going to the larger cities and across the border, the price depending upon the season's supply.

No Community Harvest.

Mr. Howard said there was no community harvest, although this had been sometimes practised.

"We're just like everybody else. We want to get there as soon as the other fellow, and probably a little bit ahead of him, so we can get our share. This year I think there was enough for everybody."

Montreal Man Killed In Highway Crash

OSHAWA, Ont., Oct. 17 (CP) — James J. Fogerty, of Montreal, died in hospital early to-day of injuries received when struck by a truck before dawn near Dunbarton.

The truck driver, Frank Woodward, of Toronto, told police the weather was misty and he did not see Fogerty until too late.

Dr. A. J. Pierson of Pickering, said internal injuries may have caused death as the only external injury was a deep scalp wound in the head.

Fogerty was well dressed.

POLICE SEARCH FOR KIDNAPPER OF MRS. STOLL

FEARED KILL WOMAN.

Former Inmate of Insane Asylum at Nashville, Officers Claim.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 17 (A.P.).—While Alice Speed Stoll, "so exhausted she was barely able to stagger into her husband's arms," regained strength in her home today, Harold F. Nathan, assistant director of the United States Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, said the Government was turning on "all the steam." In an exclusive interview, he told of her experiences while she was in the hands of kidnappers.

"Mrs. Stoll," he said, "was hurried away from her home and taken north to Indianapolis by the kidnapper. She was lying in the bottom of the kidnap car. She had been slightly ill and her head was aching from the blow she received before the start."

"In fact, she didn't know she was in Indianapolis until some time later when she found herself in an apartment there, guarded by the Robinson woman

Woman Well Treated.

"She has spoken highly of the way she was treated by this woman. She says that although acting as a guard, Mrs. Robinson showed her every consideration and did what she could to make her imprisonment bearable.

"As kidnappers go, Mrs. Stoll was treated pretty decently. She was brutally handled a couple of times. But the man always treated her like —well, he treated her like a gentleman. You see what I mean. We understand that they arrived there some time Wednesday night, possibly couple of hours or so after the kidnapping.

"The kidnapper, and we accuse this Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., set about collecting his ransom in Nashville.

"He already arranged for its receipt there by Thomas H. Robinson, Sr. We have Robinson in custody in Nashville.

Girl Not Kidnapped Away With Chums

CHESHIRE, Conn., Oct. 17 (AP) —Gloria Gennaro, aged eight, missing from home overnight, was not kidnapped as her family feared but stayed with two school mates whom she had accompanied to their home after school closed yesterday.

She rode back to school this morning in the town bus, unaware of the excitement in town occasioned by an all-night search of state officers and constables for her.

School Officer John Nelson greeted her. She had stayed overnight with two girls her own age and had not thought of sending word to her mother. Officer Nelson went to the Gennaro home and told the parents that Gloria was at school again.

DEMAND IS MADE ON JOHN J. DALY TEA MERCHANT

Twenty Year Old Music Student Taken to Her Home.

STUDYING IN TORONTO.

Father Received Extortion Letters Threatening to Kidnap Girl.

TORONTO, October 17 (C.P.). — Celestine Daly, 20-year-old music student, was rushed home to Napanee to-day by members of her family following receipt by her father of extortion letters threatening she would be kidnapped.

Studying Music.

Officials of the Toronto Conservatory of Music where the young woman was a student said the girl had been taken home by members of her family, including her father, John G. Daly, 71-year-old millionaire Napanee tea merchant.

Previous reports that Miss Daly had been under police guard here were denied, although officers said a man had been detailed to investigate a rumor she had been menaced.

Miss F. Stewart, Dean of Women at the Conservatory, said Miss Daly had been confined to her residence for several days for fear she might be kidnapped if she ventured outside.

Other persons said Daly had taken all possible precautions against being waylaid on the way back to Napanee.

Teck Hughes Probe Is Watched Closely

Peterborough investors will follow with close attention the probe of alleged "market rigging" in connection with Teck-Hughes stock, a local broker said this morning. Many thousand shares of the company are held by residents of this city.

The stock has for some time been a favorite among both traders and investors here, the broker commented. He said many suffered heavy actual losses and others are showing heavy paper losses as a result of the disastrous break in the price of the stock from around $6.50 a share to its current levele of $4.

Choose Candidates In British Election

SWINDON, England, Oct. 17. —(C. P. Cable.)—Conservative and Labor candidates were nominated to-day to contest the Swindon by-election Oct. 25, necessitated by appointment of Sir Reginald Mitchell Banks, former Conservative member, as a county court judge.

W. W. Wakefield, former England Rugby captain, was chosen to defend the seat for the Conservatives, and Dr. Charles Addison, former Labor Minister of Agriculture, is the Labor candidate.

Swindon was represented by the Conservative from 1922 to 1929, when Addison captured the seat for Labor. In the last general elections Sir Reginald won the seat from Dr. Addison with a majority of 4,794 in a straight fight.

"Mystic Pendulums" Find Nun's Bones

NANCY, France, Oct. 17. — Madeleine Munier, a school teacher, equipped with a divining apparatus composed of two "mystic pendulums," ted municipal and church officials to the burial place of Mother Aliv Leclerc, who died in 1622 and is now a candidate for sainthood. Buried in a corner of an old schoolyard, Mother Leclerc's bones were identified by peculiar pins used by nuns in ancient days to fasten their robes.

GUILTY VERDICT IN QUEEN'S TRIAL TO WRECK TEAM

Group of Medical Students Are Convicted of Fraternity Membership.

SUFFER PENALTIES.

University Principal States Action Strengthens College's Self-government.

KINGSTON, Oct. 17. — (CP) — twenty-four medical students of Queen's University were found guilty of membership in an international fraternity last night by the Supreme Court of the Alma Mater Society and were sentenced to a denial of all student social, political and athletic rights for not less than one academic year. Chief Justice Morris Leishman consulted with his junior justice less than ten minutes before arriving at the verdict.

"We find these men guilty and they must suffer all the penalties," said Leishman. "It is my painful duty to announce that the students charged shall lose the right to participate in student political, social and athletic life for not less than one academic year."

The decision was greeted with mixed feelings by the 700 or 800 students who had gathered in the gymnasium, scene of the trial. Seats, in the form of bleachers, occupied about half the floor space and were filled.

Five members of the Queen's senior football team cannot take part in future intercollegiate games as a result of the ruling. The players are How Hamlin, Frank Earle, Billy Glass, Colin Dafoe and Red McNichol. Hamlin, Earle and Glass are regulars.

Principal Concurs

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 17.—(CP) —Dr. William H. Fyfe, principal of Queen's University, interviewed today expressed the opinion that the Alma Mater Society court had taken the only action possible, in finding the accused students guilty and barring them from athletic, social and political privileges.

Dr. Fyfe, further asserted that the strong action taken by the Alma Mater society had considerably strengthened self-government at Queen's University. The attitude of the students is more or less divided, not on the question of fraternity, but on the question of whether the accused students were given a fair trial.

LOCK IS BROKEN.

On Two Different Occasions Mysterious Tracks Found Around Clifford Barn.

WARSAW, October 17 (Examiner Correspondence).—Provincial Constable David Silvester is investigating the origin of the fire which destroyed the large frame barn of John Clifford, one and one-half miles south-east of Warsaw, late Saturday evening, in the belief that a thief was responsible.

On two occasions before the night of the fire, mysterious tracks of automobile wheels in the vicinity of the barn were noticed, Mr. Clifford reports. Once the prowler succeeded in smashing the lock and gaining entrance through one of the building's doors. It is thought possible that the thief made a return visit Saturday evening in search of grain and set the barn afire either accidentally or intentionally when departing.

The inflammable structure was a mass of flames when Mr. Clifford discovered the fire shortly after 11 o'clock in the evening. With difficulty, nearby shelters which housed livestock and farm machinery were saved, but the barn itself was a total loss. More than 600 bushels of grain and the recent harvest of winter feed were destroyed. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Two other barns in the vicinity have been burned by fires of mysterious origins during the past few weeks.

DUCK HUNTING GOOD, RICE LAKE

Local Hunters Getting Some Fine Bags in Rice Lake District.

SCARCE ELSEWHERE.

Fine bags of ducks are being brought back from Rice Lake but local hunters report that the birds are somewhat scarce in other sections of the district. The shooting at Rice Lake is said to be the best in years.

Bill Muskrat, a Hiawatha guide, piloted a Pennsyylvania tourist on a three day hunt in Rice Lake last week and the limit, 15 ducks, was bagged on each of the three days. Bill Anderson, also of Hiawatha, guiding a huntsman from Ohio, reports similar good luck. Thousands of big "blue bills" are to be seen "rafting" during the middle part of the day out in the centre of the lake. The birds come in as dusk approaches to feed in the rice beds.

Plenty of Rice.

Low water, which has given the rice a better chance to grow, is thought to be the reason for the better shooting at Rice Lake this season. The Indians who have been making thier annual rice harvest during the past couple of weeks, say that it is the best crop in in some time.

Huntsmen who have journeyed to Stoney, Gull, Pigeon and Catchacoma lakes in search of ducks, have been returning with discouraging reports. Few have succeeded in reaching their daily limits.

Plans are already being laid by the Peterborough Hunt Club, possibly the longest established club of its kind in the city, for the annual trip on the opening of the deer hunting season. The twelve members of the private club will repair to their lodge in the Packesley district, near Sudbury, as in other years, it was decided at a meeting last night.

STATES FAVOR REDUCTION IN MAJOR NAVIES

Prepared to Suggest Mutual Sacrifice on Part of Three Powers.

RENEW AGREEMENTS.

Willing to Eliminate Ratio From Future Treaties if Urged.

LONDON, Oct. 17. — (A.P.)—A substantial reduction in general naval armaments and the renewal of the Washington and London treaties will be suggested by the United States' delegation in the forthcoming naval conversations, it was stated authoritatively to-day.

This authority said the Americans would be willing to eliminate the word "ratio" from any figure agreement if Japan so desired, replacing the words with the term "relative security."

The United States' delegation, it was said, is prepared to make a suggestion of mutual sacrifice on the part of each of the three Powers in order to bring about an agreement and prevent any new armaments' race.

Aged Man Arrested On Assault Charge

Joseph Hubbell, 79-year-old resident of Old Havelock, was brought in to the city lock-up by Provincial Constable David Silvester this afternoon, and according to police information is to be charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

It is alleged by police that following an altercation between the prisoner and his neighbor, Roy Longmuir, this morning, the latter received a gash in his head that required stitches to close, when he was struck with the shin bone of a dead animal wielded by the aged man.

The row is stated to have arisen over a cow which had wandered on to the property of the accused.

$5,000 ASKED FROM SON OF MOTOR MAGNATE

Department of Justice Officials Claim Man Arrested Has Confessed.

EXTORTION PLOT.

Man Arrested Evaded Trap By Not Picking Up Dummy Package.

DETROIT, Oct. 17—(AP) —A federal indictment charging extortion, under the "Lindbergh Law" was returned this afternoon against Edward Lickwala, 20, who has confessed, federal agents said to threatening the life of Edsel B. Ford unless he paid $5000.

DETROIT, Oct. 17—(AP) — United States Department of Justice agents revealed today that they had frustrated an extortion plot against Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., with the arrest of a 20-year-old youth who, they said, had confessed writing a letter demanding $5,000 under penalty of death.

Evaded Trap

The youth held is Edward Lickwala, who evaded a rap five days ago by failing to pick up a dummy package placed by federal agents at the place designated in the letter, only to be arrested last night.

The note, mailed to Ford, Oct. 8, said "You are on the spot, and if you want to live it will cost you $5,000."

It gave detailed instructions for placing a candy box, containing the money in $5 and $10 bills, on a porch of house in Detroits northeast section.

William Larsen, head of the Department of Justice Bureau here, said a dummy package was placed on the designated porch at the time stated in the letter, 11 p.m. Oct. 12 but that it was picked up by Mrs. Claude Landerville, occupant of the lower flat in the building. She was detained, but quickly established her innocence and was released.

Larsen said the agents then questioned Joe Barnhart, occupant of the second storey flat, and found he was a brother-in-law of Lickwala, who had a police record and who, police said, attempted to jump from the Belle Isle bridge into the Detroit River last July.

Federal agents kept the house under surveillance, until Licawala finally appeared last night.

MAYORS PONDER RELIEF SCHEME

Windsor Commissioner Says Partial Relief is Labor Subsidy.

MANY TOO PROUD.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17 (C.P.). — Mayors of Ontario municipalities gathered in Hamilton to-day for a two-day convention, during which problems affecting their various cities will be discussed. The chief of these will be the relief question. Mayor Wilton welcomed the delegates.

Sharp comment upon the present welfare situation in Ontario was made by Frank E. Dayus, commissioner, of Windsor.

"There are families in my home city where every member looks upon relief as their legal and heaven granted right," Mr. Dayus said.

"Many self-respecting citizens walk our street to-day urgently needing eyeglasses, dental attention, surgical treatment or medicine and not getting it because they are too proud to ask. Not so the person receiving 100 per cent. relief who gets everything he requires and many times he does not require."

Turning to the subject of partial relief, he declared some persons securing such aid were subsidized by relief departments.

"Whatever his business, he is subsidized by the public welfare department if that department grants him a allowance, pays for his lighting or fuel, or supplies him with a grocery order, thereby enabling him to enter the competitive labor market and out into the trade or busi-

Hydro Sues Meighen And Maguire, Former Members

Detectives Hired to Check Liberals In Recent Fight

Hydro Chairman T. S. Lyon Announces Action Is To Be Taken Against Senator Meighen And Alfred Maguire.

SEEK TO RECOVER MONEY PAID DETECTIVES PREVIOUS TO GENERAL ELECTION IN ONTARIO

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—(CP)—Recovery of funds allegedly spent to hire detectives to "get something on the Liberal party of Ontario" prior to the general election last June will be sought in a court action to be entered immediately against Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, and C. Alfred Maguire, former Ontario Hydro-Electric Power commissioners, and two former Hydro officials.

T. Stewart Lyon, present commissioner, announced last night the commission had adopted a resolution to take immediate action to recover $4,300 which he said was "illegally diverted from the funds of the commission." Other members of the new commission are Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck and H. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways.

$4,300 Paid Detectives

Documents found in the commission's fyles, Mr. Lyon charged, disclosed that the former commissioners paid $4,300 to detectives in expenses and fees "which were on a very lavish scale." He said there was evidence of a conspiracy "to manufacture evidence" along desired lines.

Mr. Meighen, former prime minister of Canada, is enroute to Australia aboard the R.M.S. Niagara.

Entirely Absurd

He sailed from Vancouver on Oct. 10. Mr. Maguire declared last night: "The whole thing is entirely absurb."

Others who will be defendants in the proposed action are former Chief Engineer Fred A. Gaby and Hydro Solicitor Isaac B. Lucas. "The suggestion of actual court action is a joke,' said Mr. Maguire. "We have our own ideas about why this is being brought up at the present time.

"Mr. Lyons knows that anything that the Hydro commission did during our tenure of office was perfectly legal and in order. Any action that we took was perfectly justified. The commission was constituted to protect Hydro."

Mr. Lyon described reports from detective operatives found in the commission's fyles as "despicable" and "something entirely new in Ontario public life." He said they detailed quests of the detectives on

APPEAL PLANNED BY HAUPTMANN

Unsmiling Carpenter Appears Step Closer to Murder Trial.

IDENTIFIED BY FARMER.

(By Tom Hagenbuch)

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP) — Bruno Richard Hauptmann is a step closer to-day to trial for the murder of the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

His plea against extradition rejected, Hauptmann's only hope of preventing his removal to New Jersey now lies in an appeal to the Appellate Division the Supreme Court. His counsel, James M. Fawcett, plans to file an appeal immediately.

Action Dismissed

The unsmiling carpenter's fight against extradition was dealt a crushing blow when Supreme Court Justice Ernest E. L. Hammer dismissed the writ of habeas corpus sought by Fawcett in an attempt to prevent Hauptmann's removal to New Jersey.

Announcing his decision last night, Justice Hammer said: "My conclusion is that the relator (Hauptmann) has failed to make out a case, and that he has not established beyond reasonable doubt that he was not in the State of New Jersey the night the crime alleged was committed."

After the decision was announced, Fawcett obtained a stay of execution until 4 p.m. Friday in order to bring his appeal before the Appellate division. It is considered likely that action on the appeal will be taken by that time.

Millard Whited, a Jersey farmer and lumberman, tapped Bruno Hauptmann on the shoulder, and identified him as the "stranger" he saw on two occasions near the Hopewell home of Charles A. Lindbergh in the two weeks before the flier's first-born son was abducted and slain.

With this identification, Attorney-General David T. Wilents of New Jersey rested his State's demand for the extradition of Hauptmann to stand trial for the baby's murder.

Defense Counsel James M. Fawcett countered the Whited identification with the testimony of three neighbors, one of them a cousin of the farmer, who avowed the latter's reputation for veracity is bad.

The ransom notes—which the State of New Jersey contends prove Hauptmann was the abductor-murderer of Baby Lindbergh—were offered in evidence after Albert D. Osborn, handwriting expert, declared his belief they were written by Hauptmann.

SNATCH RACKET CLAIMS YOUTH WANT $20,000

Wealthy Junk Dealer's Son is Being Held for Ransom in New York.

TWO 'PHONE CALLS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17—(AP)—The snatch racket has struck in the Bronx again.

Louis Esposito, 23-year-old son of a wealthy junk dealer, is being held by kidnappers for $20,000 ransom.

Federal agents and police — just concluding their case against Bruno Hauptmann in the Lindbergh abduction and murder—have little to work on. They say the youth's family is too fearful of kidnappers' vengeance to cooperate. Esposito vanished Monday evening.

Auto Abandoned

His automobile was found abandoned last night in the Bronx, seven miles north of his home and about a mile south of Hauptmann's residence. Its proximity to the Hauptmann home, however, was not considered significant.

The youth is the son of Anthony Esposito, wealthy junk dealer. Louis, who was engaged to be married shortly, left his house Monday evening to drive his grandfather home. The 63-year-old man, also named Louis Esposito, was the last of his kin to see him.

Two hours later Louis' sister answered a telephone call, screamed and fainted. The voice on the phone had told her:

"We have Louis and you won't see him again unless you pay us $20,000."

Not to Notify Police

The speaker also said to await further instructions and not to notify police. Officers were called, however, and sent out a confidential alarm for Louis' car.

A second telephone call to the home, this one from a woman, came an hour after the first. The speaker ordered the brother who answered to meet her in front of a restaurant, saying she could be recognised by a small patch of adhesive tape on her face. Louis' two brothers hastened there, but could not find the woman.

Police Inspector Henry Bruckman said the department was giving the family a free hand despite its refusal to co-operate. No guard was stationed at the home.

A friend told newspaper men late last night that the Esposito family's wealth was tied up in real estate and that $5,000 was the most cash they could raise. They were ready to compromise with the kidnappers at this figure, the informant said.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Under the leadership of corn, prices of the major grains scored material gains in a late market rally yesterday, an advance of 2c in corn stimulating sympathetic buying, especially in wheat and oats.

Independent strength in the corn pit, a feature throughout the session, became the dominating bullish factor in the general market upturn during the last hour of trading.

At the close, corn was 1⅛ to 2c higher than Monday's finish, May selling at 80⅜c to 80½c. Gains in wheat ranged from 1¼c to 1⅜c, May closing at $1.01⅜ to $1.01½. Oats were ⅝c to ⅞c higher, rye was unchanged to ⅝c up and barley was ¾c off to ½c higher.

Wheat traders took notice of a Government report pointing to two possibilities for a marked advance in world wheat prices, namely, the critical growing period in Argentina and an indication that heavy feeding of wheat in the United States and Europe might occur.

WINNIPEG WHEAT.

WINNIPEG, October 17. — Weakness at Liverpool, chief factor in price trends here in recent days, was disregarded on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday. Wheat futures took their cue from Chicago to score net advances of ⅝c to ¾c, October at 79¼c, December 80¼c, and May 84⅝c.

The upturn, a spirited rally in the late trading, was scored after values had fluctuated wildly for almost the entire session. Reflecting Washington reports of probable heavy feeding of wheat to live stock, Chicago prices mounted 1¼c to 1⅜c.

Continued lack of export demand for Canada's wheat, and reports of heavy liquidation at Liverpool where prices ended ⅝d to 1d, failed to halt the closing rush. In addition to the bullishness of Chicago, confirmation of low-grade wheat being harvested in northern areas also had its effect.

Lightness of offerings restricted business in cash grains. Good demand was again shown for higher grades of wheat, but spreads at the close were generally unchanged. The action of wheat was mirrored by coarse grain futures.

DREW IS FACING LIBEL ACTION FOR $50,000

Walkinshaw Takes Action on Charges of Former Commissioner.

RADIO TALK DEFERRED.

TORONTO, Oct. 17. (CP).—Salter Hayden, barrister, announced last night that Donald Walkinshaw, secretary to Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck, issued a writ at Osgoode Hall to-day claiming $50,000 from Col. A. Drew for alleged libel. Col. Drew is the former Ontario Securities Commissioner.

The action follows published charges made by Col. Drew against Walkinshaw.

This action by Mr. Walkinshaw was in prompt answer to charges by Colonel Drew. The charges were climaxed with a challenge to take the matter to the courts.

Foster's Statement

Another development in the controversy occurred late yesterday, when R. Leighton Foster, Superintendent of Insurance, issued a statement alleging that Colonel Drew had been "seriously misinformed" in the matter of his charges against Mr. Wilkinshaw's fitness for the position of chairman of the Advisory Board under the Insurance Act.

Colonel Drew, informed of the legal action taken against him, declared himself "delighted" and saw an opportunity to present material that he otherwise would have been unable to bring before the public. He suggested that Mr. Roebuck "has not the courage to face an Examination for Discovery himself, but prefers to see is brother-in-law carry on the battle."

The Attorney-General refused comment on all matters touching the controversy, while Premier Hepburn observed briefly: "I didn't read Drew's charges. I gathered from the headlines that whatever was said is libelous, if untrue; so it will go to the courts."

A "statement regarding the attorney-general was to have been delivered by Col. Drew over C.F.R.B. at one p.m. yesterday, but the broadcast was withheld because the radio station's solicitor was given unsufficient time in which to examine the speech beforehand. There was apparently some misunderstanding, Col. Drew claiming that he only learned at a late hour that he would have to submit his address for review, in view of the "controversial nature of is broadcast."

EAST WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 17 (C.P.).—Steps to enforce the nine o'clock curfew law were taken by police to-day as a result of a series of complaints against juveniles. One burglary at the home of Allen Baltzer was attributed to a minor because small footprints were left on freshly painted floors.

Chief of Police Maisonville said that as soon as repairs to the police signal system were completed, bells would ring at night and youngsters found wandering the streets after the zero hour, would be locked up.

SOCIETY MATRON IS RELEASED BY KIDNAPPERS

Kidnapper is Identified as Former Inmate of Insane Asylum.

TWO NEW CASES.

Wife of Man is Said to Have Acted as Guard for Mrs. Stoll.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (CP).—As one United States kidnapping case was solved, two new ones were dropped in the lap of the law to-day.

Mrs. Alice Stoll, abducted a week ago for $50,000 ransom and held prisoner in an Indianapolis apartment, was released last night. Ordered to bed for a week, she was pronounced "in fairly good condition" to-day.

The man named as her kidnapper, T. H. Robinson, Jr., is being hunted. His wife, who is said to have acted as a guard for Mrs. Stoll, is being held.

Two New Cases

In the Bronx, Louis Esposito, 23-year-old son of a prosperous junk dealer, has been missing since Monday. Telephoned demands of his abductors call for $20,000 ransom.

In Chesire, an eight year old girl, Gloria Gennaro, is missing. There has been no ransom demand, and police are not yet certain that it is an abduction, though they are proceeding on that theory.

(Associated Press Despatch)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 17.— Mrs. Alice Speer Stoll, kidnapped by a former insane asylum inmate was returned safe and well to her family last night.

Department of Justice agents found the young wife of Berry V. Stoll, wealthy oil man, at Scottsburg, Ind., and hurried her back to Louisville.

Thomas A. Robinson Jr., aged 32, of Nashville, Tenn., was named by justice agents as the kidnapper. He had been sought for questioning in the sensational case since Stoll found his wife gone and a $50,000 ransom note in an upstairs room on Oct. 10.

Robinson's wife was taken in custody, and with her and Mrs. Stoll on the hurried return to Louisville were the Rev. E. Arnold Clegg, pastor of Capital Methodist Episcopal Church, Indianapolis, and his wife. The Department of Justice in Washington announced that Mr. and Mrs. Clegg were not involved in the case.

Smuggling Of Wheat Across The Border Bring Back Memories Of Liquor Running

WINNIPEG, Oct. 17. (CP). — Smuggling of wheat across the International boundary into the United States from Canadian farms to-day brought prospects of greater police activity in bordering states and provinces.

Bringing back memories of liquor running days when fast travelling cars sped cargoes to thirsty consumers, word came last night from Cargo, N.D., that 14 Towner county farmers had pleaded guilty to wheat smuggling. Other cases are under investigation.

And the guilty pleas revived recent rumors from Regina and Moose Jaw that hogs were being smuggled from the United States into Canada—just the opposite procedure from the route followed by the wheat smugglers. Higher Canadian prices for hogs and the premium on Canadian money in the United States were believed the reasons for the hog smuggling. No arrests in these cases have been reported.

The premium being paid on No. 1 amber Durum wheat and the extra revenue derived through processing taxes were believed the reasons for the smuggling of Canadian wheat into the United States. United States authorities estimated 160,000 bushels had been imported illicitly, chiefly from Manitoba points near the border.

Shortage of soft wheats for macaroni manufacturing in the United States has led to a large increase in legal importations of Manitoba's Durum wheats via ports on the Great Lakes, and this was seen here as the incentive to smuggling.

BEDAUX PARTY IS RETURNING HOME

Expedition Failed to Navigate Wilds of Northern British Columbia.

TROPICAL VALLEYS.

EDMONTON, Oct. 17 (CP) — Mountain peaks, rocky ledges and accidents to-day were believed to have defeated the Charles E. Bedaux expedition into the wilds of Northern Columbia, where scattered tropical valleys are reported to exist.

Headed by Bedaux himself, the main group of the exploration party was reported to be due at Hudson Hope, B.C., to-day on the return journey after failing by about 200 miles to travel 1,100 miles from Fort St. John to Telegraph Creek.

First intimation the party had been rebuffed by mountains and misfortune came last night in a message relayed to The Edmonton Journal by telephone and telegraph. John G. Bocock, a member of the expedition, was reported to have arrived at Hudson Hope. Bocock, an engineer living at St. Albert, Alta., was quoted as saying the rest of the party was returning.

Hudson Hope, 50 miles west of Fort St. John, and 350 miles northwest of here, awaited the arrival of the explorers. Until they reach here, full details of the trip and the distance which they covered will not be known.

ITALY SUPPORTS CAUSE OF PEACE

Mussolini More Than Ever Pushing Ahead Policy of Conciliation.

STATESMEN MEET.

BY STUART MORONEY

PARIS, Oct. 17.—(AP)— French diplomats have the full support of Benito Mussolini in their efforts to keep the Marseille assassinations from disrupting the peace of Europe.

Diplomatic circles said today they were informed Il Duce is more than ever bent on pushing a policy of conciliation, despite the years of ill feeling between Italy and Yugoslavia.

As the threads of the assassination plot are gradually being unraveled, the French foreign office is just as busy as the nation's police have been.

Statesmen Meet

Plans to scatter the clouds which gathered eight days ago when the assassin's pistol was fired were laid in a long talk between Dr. Edouerd Benes, Czechoslovakian foreign minister and leader of the Little Entente and League of Nations with Pierre Laval, France's new foreign minister.

Laval plans to pursue the vigorous policies of his predecessor, Louis Barthou, a victim of Marseille with King Alexander. He will soon visit Rome.

A judicial investigation of the Marseille tragedy is being developed there. Ivan Rajtich and Zvonemer Pospechil, confessed members of the assassination band, are being taken to Marseille. Micakraj, third suspect to be jailed, probably will join them. Police said Kraj admitted he was sent to Marseille to kill Alexander.

With these arrests, police said all of the "assassination squad" now are definitely identified or accounted for except a mysterious beauty, "delegate" Kvaternik, alleged to be a member of the band. Swiss police are following clues which may lead to her arrest.

The hiding place of Dr. Ante Pavelich, supposed "brain" back of the conspiracy, police claim is known and they say they are ready to seize him.

Kraj, who described himself as a "Croat patriot,' told authorities he fled from the assassination scene because he feared he would kill some of the crowd if he shot at Alexander.

SOCIETY MATRON IS RELEASED

Agents to rescue the daughter of one of Kentucky's wealthiest families, came when Mrs. Robinson called for the $50,000 ransom package in Nashville. It had been shipped there last Friday by railway express, according to directions in the original ransom note.

Mrs. Robinson was trailed to Terre Haute, Ind., where the agents tried a ruse to get the woman into a taxicab driven by a disguised Federal Agent. The trick failed and she took another cab.

The agents followed the car to Indianapolis, and to the homeof the Cleggs. Late yesterday afternoon a large machine containing Mrs. Stoll drove away from the Clegg home.

At Scottsburg, Ind., the agents overtook it and rescued the woman Robinson himself, who had been the object of an intensive search by Justice Agents, was not present when Mrs. Stoll was found.

Telephoned to Father

The former asylum inmate was reported to have telephoned his father in Nashville from Indianapolis and to have declared he was going to kill Mrs. Stoll. Reports received here were that the father who has been trying to communicate with his son, begged him not to do that, but a wild laugh ended the conversation.

Information gathered in Louisville tonight was that Mrs. Stoll had been allowed to telephone her husband here and that this call was traced to the Clegg home in Indianapolis.

Mrs. Stoll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Shallcross Speed, was slugged on the head, her maid, Ann Wollett reported, by a sallow-faced man, who entered the home last Wednesday night, saying he had come to repair the telephone.

Others who contributed to the evening's entertainment with solos were: Mrs. Frank De Carrol, Mrs. Carmen Windrim, Mrs. Ernest Bedford, Mrs. Rabethge, and the Hutchinson Brothers. Rev. J. C. Robinson acted as chairman. Among those present and who briefly addressed the gathering were the Rev. Harold B. Neal, of St. John's United Church, Rev. F. G. MacTavish of Seymour United Church, Rev. Mr. Smith of the Baptist Church, and the Rev. Gordon Duncan of Warkworth, after which a delightful evening was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

DETECTIVES HIRED

the former commission's "case," noted an assignment to investigate whether "any political contributions came from Quebec or the United States in return for attacking Ontario Hydro by any politicians or political party."

"The principal subject of these inquiries," said Mr. Lyon, "was to determine whether or not monies were being contributed to the Liberal Party in connection with the election campaign then or shortly thereafter in progress, by private electrical interests in the United States or in Canada, with the purpose of carrying on a campaign against the Conservative Party and the Hydro-Electric Commission.

Manufactured Evidence.

"The documents indicate that the secret service agents did not confine themselves to detective work but in the fashion of agents provocateurs, tried to manufacture evidence along the lines of the quest set by the Hydro Commission and its officials.

"In view of the astonishing incidents recorded in the reports of these agents, the Hydro Commission has adopted a resolution that action be entered against Messrs. Meighen and Maguire, members of the Commission, Mr. Gaby and Mr. Lucas, officials of the Commission, for the return of the money expended upon the preparation of the reports, as money illegally diverted from the funds of the Commission without warrant in the Power Commission Act."

Mr. Lyon was appointed Hydro Commissioner shortly after the Liberal Party secured power in Ontario at the June elections. The fomer Commission included Mr. Meighen and Mr. Maguire and the late J. R. Cooke, who was chairman. Mr. Cooke was fatally injured in an automobile accident last August.

Upon their arrival, the Campbellford contingent divided—some going to the College Street School and some to Dufferin; a few taking complete charge of classes, while others just watched proceedings.

Promptly at 9 a.m. all were in their respective place, ready to take a mental note of any improvements which might be made in their old home town. Selling the Retailer IGNORING THE PUBLIC

—it can't be done!

Not all the humour is to be found "in the Comics".

There's humour to be seen in many firms' Sales Policies to-day—

A loud laugh—but a tragic situation nevertheless.

Here is what we mean:—

The Sales Departments of Manufacturers are to-day striving, straining, writhing, frothing, to sell the RETAILER. Hundreds of Salesmen are being lashed, punched, and pepped, to "sell the Retailer".

Saturday afternoon the poor Salesman goes home with his heart in his boots, and his ears deafened with poundings — "Get the orders!"—"Beat your quota!"

Monday morning, refreshed by being his own boss for a day and a half, he enters the Retailer's Store.

"Nothing doing," says the Retailer—"look at that bunch of stuff still on the shelves there!"

The Salesman tries to recall Saturday's Pep Talk—but can't remember what the Sales Manager said to do now—so he droops—and talks Golf—Fishing—or tells the latest story.

So the laugh is—that along with some intelligent thinking now being done in the world about Mass Buying, Employment Insurance—shorter working hours—reciprocal tariffs—Sales Managers are now, in October, 1934, realizing that the Retailer prospers in business only because—as—if—and when— he sells Merchandise to the public!

The Retailer doesn't live by buying from Manufacturers — he lives by selling to the public. Neither does he put up a flare light before his store—stand on the sidewalk—hire a pushcart—and holler through a megaphone. He "stands by" for people to come into his Store (or draws them by his own Advertising!) But he doesn't push and PUSH and P-U-S-H the goods of certain Manufacturers only.

The Retailer hands out Merchandise to the public as WANTED, contributing, of course, a certain effort of his own to increase the amount of the Sales check. But that comes from his own urge—his own self-interest—and his own initiative—not because he loves any particular Manufacturer.

Yes, the laugh is—no, the tragedy is—that in the last few years it has seemed so much easier to lash the slaves with the whip of pep talks on Saturday mornings than to put wheels under the load ... it has been so much more comfortable to figure out Quotas than to figure out Advertising.

But now the light is dawning that:—
... the Retailer is not the Consumer
... the Retailer is the Medium
... the PUBLIC is the Consumer ... and ... ADVERTISING ALONE WILL MOVE THE CONSUMER TO MOVE THE GOODS!

Summing up—
The Retailer is in business only because, and as, he SELLS Merchandise—
... therefore "SELLING THE RETAILER"
—IGNORING THE PUBLIC — it can't be done!

The Manufacturer MUST ADVERTISE.

—AND—The Retailer himself must realize that the "public" constitutes his customers—he cannot carry his store to them—he must send a message regarding his store—his services—his facilities—his desire to serve the public. THE RETAILER MUST ADVERTISE.

In both cases—of Manufacturer and Retailer—the (Daily) Newspaper is the most convenient—timely—effective—acceptable Advertising Medium.

SOME HIGHWAY FIGURES.

Figures from all over the Dominion show that there was a substantial curtailing of highway construction last year in spite of the fact that a considerable amount of this work was undertaken for the purpose of relieving unemployment.

Nova Scotia, as a matter of fact, was the only province in Canada to show an increase in highway construction during 1932. British Columbia reduced her expenditures on highway construction by 88 per cent., Alberta by 81 per cent., Prince Edward Island 76 per cent., New Brunswick 72 per cent., Ontario 55 per cent., Quebec 41 per cent., Saskatchewan 39 per cent. and Manitoba 8 per cent.

Altogether the total capital expenditure, including federal subsidies, dropped from $50,000,000 in 1932 to a little less than $24,000,000 last year.

4,110 miles of surfaced road, the bulk of it gravelled surface, was completed in 1933, and the surfaced highway mileage in Canada at the beginning of this year was 94,721 miles, as against 314,403 miles of unsurfaced roads.

In addition to the capital expenditure there was $16,500,000 paid last year for maintenance, a decrease in this item of some five million dollars.

It is perhaps not necessary to say that the provincial highway debt has reached a very substantial figure. It amounted to $438,000,000 at the end of 1933 and the annual charges totalled $23,750,000.

Ontario was the hardest hit with a highway debt of $185,000,000 and carrying charges of $9,250,000, Quebec second with a debt of $57,877,000 at $3,628,000 interest, and British Columbia third with $40,441,000 and interest charges of close to two million dollars.

THROUGH OUTSIDE EYES.

According to special correspondence from Ottawa to Business Week, well-known United States weekly, Canada's economic recovery is viewed by Americans as more pronounced and substantial, although achieved by less spectacular and expensive methods than that of the Republic.

Most branches of industry and business, the article in Business Week points out, have been regaining their health at a good rate this year.

Government bonds and commercial activities have been attaining new post-war price heights.

Fruitful prospecting and development in the mining fields are more extensive than ever before; the production of gold is expected to reach a new mark this year of one hundred million dollars; the production and marketing of other minerals surpass all previous records.

A price index of 23 mining stocks was up 23 per cent. in the first nine months, while other stocks advanced 5 per cent.

The wheat situation is improving, moderate crop, quality good, prices holding, and the market outlook brighter.

It is well to look at ourselves sometimes through other people's eyes, and this cheerful summing up of conditions in Canada by an outside authority accustomed to study intelligently the trend of business should bring encouragement to Canadians.

Evidently we are doing a lot better than a good many of us realize, and Business Week's summary should act as a tonic upon the pessimistic.

A NECESSARY WARNING.

The grand jury at the Toronto Fall Assizes is to be congratulated upon its presentment in regard to automobile fatalities and to the necessity of sterner measures to deal with reckless driving.

Public opinion will support the grand jurors in their recommendation that those who are convicted of operating a motor car while intoxicated should not only serve a jail term but that they should have their driving license cancelled for a year.

That plan of dealing with the drunken driver problem has long been advocated by The Examiner; we would go further, in fact, and suggest that any driver who may be found guilty of this offense more than once should be permanently deprived of the right to operate an automobile.

We agree, too, with the Toronto grand jury in its warning to motorists generally that children cannot be kept off the street all the time, and that they have "after all some rights"; there has been a tendency recently to condone all traffic accidents in which children on the roads were hit, and to "pass the buck" to the parents, and in this connection The Examiner feels that while heads of families should most certainly endeavor to keep youngsters out of danger, the responsibility of the motorist to drive carefully under all circumstances cannot be discarded.

The Toronto grand jury would protect children by cutting down the speed limit in residential sections; whether this suggestion would help or not is a matter for the authorities to consider, but at all events the killing of children by motor cars is a problem that must be dealt with more effectively than we have up to the present been able to do.

TORONTO LINES UP WITH THE REST.

By a 2 to 1 vote Toronto's City Council has passed a resolution calling upon the Ontario Government to reduce the number of beverage rooms and to shorten the hours of sale.

Thus the municipal government of Ontario's largest city lines up with the heads of smaller centres in the province to demand that the present conditions should be corrected.

When urban and rural sentiment alike favors a tightening up of the administration of Ontario's new beer law, the course of the Government should be clearly indicated.

New authorities are to be issued at the end of this month.

In the interim the Government inspectors have been checking up on premises all over the province, and should be in a position to inform the Government accurately as to the nature of the places for which licenses are being sought, the accommodation they offer, their location, the character of their proprietors and other important facts.

With this information at its disposal and with public opinion clearly shown by resolutions of municipal councils, protests from church societies, articles in Ontario newspapers and representations from proprietors of genuine hotels, The Examiner feels that the Government in issuing licenses for the next fiscal year should see that the privilege of sale is given only to legitimate standard hotels, and that the present hours of sale, particularly on Saturday nights, should be curtailed.

Up in Windsor where authorities have been granted with what seems to have been almost reckless abandon, there is a current joke to the effect that beverage rooms are called standard hotels because there is one behind every electric light standard.

That sort of thing may do for Windsor whose wetness amounts to flood-tide proportions, but the sentiment of the rest of the province, including Ontario's capital, favors fewer beverage rooms and shorter hours of sale.

ATTACKING OUR VILLAGES.

There was a time when the armed man with a gun and a car operated in the larger cities across the line. We may have thought we would be immune from such methods, but we are not. We have plenty of bank robberies from coast to coast carried out in this way.

Worse still, the plan spreads to the smaller centres. At Hampton, a little place near Bowmanville, W. W. Horn operates a store, and we dare say Mr. Horn knows all the people who come to trade at his store. It might well be one of those stores where folk like to gather now and then for a little discussion. Such places do exist in the smaller settlements.

A man came in the other evening and made a small purchase and then produced a gun. At the end of his visit Mr. Horn was lying down on the floor as he had been ordered to do, the till had been robbed of $80, and the bandit had driven away.

So it is that the village store in Ontario is not immune from the bandit curse which first attacked the larger United States cities. The dirty thing has sprawled its way through cities and across borders until it has reared its ugly head even in our quiet villages. And the uncomfortable thing about it is that the custom is hard to combat. Cars pass up and down the roads, and the occupants are unknown in the community. They come quickly, the attack is made hurriedly and the departure is completed in haste. The person under attack has only a fair chance to identify the intruders even if an arrest is made. Unfortunately the advantage is all with the thug who plans and makes the attack. — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

A GOOD CREED.

"A Garden Creed," the author of which is Romaine B. Ware, is one which a good many people might well take to heart:

1. To make a plan for my garden and follow it.
2. To add annually some new variety, either shrub, bulb or perennial.
3. To obtain and use a garden note book.
4. To take my note book and several pencils to garden lectures and when visiting nurseries and other gardens.
5. To order bulbs, seeds and plant material in plenty of time.
6. To learn the proper time for dividing and transplanting perennials and do the work at the proper time.
7. To attempt a garden no larger than can well be cared for.
8. To preserve agarden catalogues and study them.
9. To subscribe to one or more garden magazines and read them.
10. To keep my garden tools sharp, free from rust and put them away when not in use.
11. To exhibit my flowers at the shows and do my share of the work connected with them.
12. To share garden bloom with the afflicted and my knowledge and experience with other gardeners.

There is a potency in every paragraph in the above which perhaps only the real dyed in wool gardeners can appreciate.

This writer heard a rank heresy the other day in gardening, something which does not fit in with the above rules at all. A certain secret was proffered in regard to the preparation of the soil for dahlia culture. The warning was given: "Don't tell everybody about it." That warning or advice was so unlike the spirit of the true amateur gardener that it deserves comment. As a matter of fact, it was not given by an amateur, but by a rank professional. Probably there is good and sufficient reason for professional gardeners to maintain a close corporation and keep the tricks of the trade among themselves.—St. Catharines Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

P. D. Ross, of Ottawa, will now have the story of his dismissal by the Hepburn Government to add to his reminiscences.

There is only one provincial policeman to preserve order in the Algoma strike area where 700 bush workers are out. If there are no riots it will be a tribute to the common sense of the strike leaders.

From Okanagon Lake comes a story that the famous ogopogo has again made its appearance. The announcement is a little late for the tourist season, but may have some effect nevertheless.

When more letters to the press are written doubtless Col. George A. Drew will write them.

A lottery on the size of the provincial deficit would be one effective way of getting Ontario out of the red. However, although we accept our share of the receipts from race-track gambling, we will probably continue to refuse to legalize sweepstakes.

It is a matter for gratification that all the civil servants discharged by the Hepburn Government have not the same inclination or the same faculty of using the pen as has Col. George A. Drew, K.C.

Arkansas growers are jubilant over a million-dollar peach crop. They had better crow pretty quietly or somebody from Washington will discover that part of it is surplus.—New York Sun.

The shortest possible unit of time is that which elapses between the staking of the first claim in a new mining area and the offering of the first issue of stock on a prospect in the area.—Financial Post.

MORE FANCY TALK

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—If there was ever a case of giving people a stove instead of bread it is in this new movement for the cultivation of more jobs in connection with education. You will understand that I am not referring to that eminent literateur Mr. Adrian McDonald when I assert that teaching "Behaviorism" under the umbrella of psychology is the greatest bunk of the lot. In the first place the principle cause and effect is not standing the test of advanced mathematical physics. In the second place the manifestations of the subconscious or natural and instinctive mind are beyond the control or even the ken of man. To foreshadow what will happen in behaviour by what has happened in the past is worse than futile. For Heaven's sake give us a rest and let people catch up with our needs before going on with more fancy talk. And further even "Behaviorism" is no longer discussed. It has had its day and ceased to be.

A Thought

TO SLEEP

A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by,
One after one; the sound of rain and bees
Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
Smooth fields, white sheets of water and pure sky.
I've thought of all by turns; and yet do lie
Sleepless; and soon the small bird's melodies
Must hear first uttered from my orchard trees,
And the first cuckoo's melancholy cry.
Even the first cuckoo's melancholy cry.
Even thus last night, and two nights more, I lay
And could not win thee, sleep, by any stealth,
So do not let me wear tonight away;
Without thee what is all the morning's wealth?
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

—William Woodsworth.

What's in The NAME

of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

SIMCOE, ONTARIO

Simcoe might easily have been named Wellington, for there were two factions in the town in those days of 105 years ago. One wanted the place named for the famous British soldier, while the other fought for the name of Sir John Simcoe, first governor of Upper Canada. The protagonists of Simcoe won out after a spirited debate.

The place first was known as Birdtown, in honor of a man named William Bird, who conducted a general store for some years and then mysteriously disappeared. Citizens felt that some name other than that of the missing man should be attached to the town and made the change.

A local legend has it that Simcoe rested on the site of what is now Simcoe, in 1794, and that he ate a watermelon grown on a spot where a beautiful park now is situated. This fact probably influenced the choice of Simcoe's name, since Wellington never was within several thousands of miles of the place.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

I . . . I . . . I

I know a little girl who doesn't like anything "new." I know another little girl who is always ready for anything "new." . . . And they have the same parents.

I don't believe people who say they "never read the newspapers." . . . I have heard people criticise the newspapers for inaccuracy and then, immediately, tell me some fanciful, wholly improbable story which they have received on the vague authority of a man who "heard it somewhere."

The best fun in this world is making something.

I'm not afraid of dying, but I have a deep fear of shriveling.

Napoleon and Alexander Hamilton used to be my heroes, but I never think of them any more.

Sweet music is negroes laughing among themselves.

A man alone in his house, cooking, with the family away, is a sight for pity and tears.

I know three men who are "crazy about fishing," but wouldn't think of eating a fish.

I heard a young fellow saying that the old people are conservative, reluctant to pick up new ideas, slow to change. . . . But the older people I know are freer in their thoughts than that in their twenties and of my own age.

Theoretically I speak correctly, but when I hear myself saying "gonna" instead of "going to," I have grave doubts about my educability.

I think sun bathing is overrated; I'd rather sit in the shade, or just a fairly warm sun.

I am rather hard to shock but I come close to it when I heard "educated," fairly secure individuals talking of other human beings as if we did not all belong to the same human race.

I've lost my keys again.

I don't think I'll ever grow a mustache.

PIONEER GOLD PROSPECTORS ONLY SCRAPED AREA SURFACE

Expected $100,000,000 Worth of Metal Will be Taken From Canadian Soil This Year.

DAZZLING GOLD SHOW

GOLD—AN OUTSTANDING RECOVERY FACTOR

Babson Park, Massachusetts, October 17, 1934.—We are accustomed to think of the "gold rush" days as long since over—romantic and glamorous periods of a new distant past. Consequently, when we learn that $100,000,000 worth of gold will be dug out of Canadian soil this year, it makes us realize that the gold prospectors of by-gone days literally only scraped the surface of Canada's gold resources. Furthermore, the possibilities ahead are breath-catching.

Important Role

The history of Canada has been closely allied with the development of her natural resources, with which she is richly endowed. French came for furs—British for fish. Later her vast lumbering and agricultural sections became an incentive to pioneer in opening up new territory for these economic pursuits. The name of Canada was synonymous with lumber before it became associated with another great natural resource, wheat. Mining was the latest of the major resources to be developed, and is continuously becoming more wide spread and valuable. In fact, it was as a by-product of the agricultural and lumber eras that mining came into being.

The story of the construction of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, undertaken primarily to develop the great "clay belt" for agricultural purposes, is typical of the discovery of Canada's buried treasure. In the course of the Temiskaming's building, the famous Cobalt silver deposits were discovered in 1903, the great gold mine at Porcupine in 1909, and the vast mineral wealth in Kirkland Lake in 1912. In like manner the Canadian Pacific Railway's builders disclosed the world's greatest body of nickel at Sudbury.

In the past twenty-five years, mining has grown from an infant in swaddling clothes to the second largest Canadian industry, in point of value of production. Mining operations are carried on in all provinces, leading among which is Ontario. The economic effect of this industry extends directly or indirectly to every corner of the Dominion. Increased carloadings, more valuable exports, demand for innumerable kinds of machines, a wider market for agricultural products, expanding employment — all these and more can be laid to the credit of mining.

THIS IS MINING'S AGE

All branches of mining are on the increase—metals, fuels, and non-metallics. Output for the first six months of this year showed substantial gains over the same period of last year. Total value of mineral production in this period amounted to $131,942,000—an increase of 45 per cent over 1933. Outstanding showing was made in nickel, gold, copper, zinc and silver. In fact several metals have reached volumes of production never before surpassed in valuation. And now radium—that most mysterious of all metals—is reaching a substantial volume of production.

This may well be called the "Mining Age" in Canada as she takes a leading place among the world mineral producers. In nickel and asbestos production she ranks first; in gold, platinum, cobalt, radium, and zinc—second; in copper—third; and in lead and silver—fourth. To-day Canadians produce more metal per capita than any other nationals. The value of mineral production in 1933 was $23.33 for every man, woman and child. In addition to her wonderful natural resources, there have been other forces to which Canada owes her present position. Among the most important have been the work of the Geological Survey, the research of the Department of Mines, and scientific development of new uses and products for minerals.

THE DAZZLING GOLD SHOW

Gold production is, of course, holding the spotlight in the mining drama at present, and in this field science has played a most important role during the past two decades. A quarter of a century ago the tools of gold mining were promitive affairs—to-day complex and expensive machinery has taken the place of the prospector's pick and cradle which he toted on his back. In short, adventure has been replaced by industry in so far as the actual removal of gold from the soil is concerned. The rough bearded man of whom Robert Service has sung so effectively has been replaced by keen-eyed, technically trained mining experts, who plumb for gold with the cold accuracy of the multiplication table.

With the world in confusion over the gold standard, Canada's opportunity was never so good in this field as it is to-day. The greatly increased value of the yellow metal is the motivating force behind the dazzling show that is centering in Northern Ontario. At present price levels the low grade ore can be profitably extracted from old mines and many new ones are being promoted. Where there were 40 gold mills in operation two years ago there are 80 to-day. Most of the $100,000,000 realized this year from the production of gold will go into circulation within the Dominion.

Remember that an inevitable consequence of any expansion is a new industry is the era of speculation which it invites. Nothing is more fascinating to the average person that a hole in the ground from which wealth may be brought forth. Hence there is no more fertile field for wild-cat securities than is offered by the gold mining industry. There are, of course, good gold mines—real producers—which are legitimate investments. For every one of these, however, there are a thousand ill-fated ventures. So let me warn my readers against obvious dangers of speculation in mining stocks, where no specific first-hand information is secured by the investor before he exchanges his good Canadian currency for bits of paper.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Red Williams

SIMCOE'S ENGLISH NAMES.

On this date, in 1792, Simcoe issued a proclamation changing the German names which had been bestowed by Dorchester upon the four districts of Upper Canada. Hesse district was changed to Western, Nassau to Home, Mecklenburg to Midland and Lunenburg to Western. The transfer to English names was sensible, which was more than could be said of Simcoe's free use of English names. That he had a deliberate policy of imposing English names upon Canada from the first is proven by the fact that in his second proclamation, dated Kingston, July 16, 1792, just a week after his assumption of office, he promulgated these names for the counties: Glengarry (with one 'r'), Stormont, Dundas, Lenox (not Lennox), Prince Edward, Hastings, Northumberland, Grenvil (not Grenville as we spell it), Leeds, Frontenac, Ontario Addington, Durham York, Lincoln, Norfolk, Suffolk Essex and Kent.

Reads like a partial geography of England, does it not? And when one adds to this the English names given to the rivers one can only conclude that Simcoe was pretty much of an Anglimaniac. In one case he may have had some justification for change, that was where he altered Mount Dorchester in the Niagara peninsula to Stamford, since he wanted no "Dorchesters around him" but the alteration of Niagara to Newark, of Toronto to York and of London for the camp on the Tranche seem all part of a settled policy to make Upper Canada another England. The fact also that the country was named York in July 1792, sort of pricks the bubble that Toronto harbor was changed to York in honor of the Duke of York's victory in Holland. It is significant that just as soon as Simcoe left Newark again became Niagara and other places rejected the English names. Luckily all philologists were not like Simcoe. They saved native Indian names for us with their beauty and their significance.

3,000 Tram Workers Plan To Go On Strike

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 17 (CP Cable via Reuters).—Melbourne tramway workers, numbering 3,000 to-day decided definitely to go on strike immediately until their demand for an increase of about 50 cents a day and for improved working conditions is met.

Meanwhile the system of emergency motor transport is being put into effect and so far is working satisfactorily, the authorities claim. Special efforts were made to organize a satisfactory substitute service in view of the fact Melbourn is entering on its gigantic celebrations of the Victorian Centenary.

TECK HUGHES PRESIDENT IS MAIN WITNESS

Admits Information Given Northern Miner Conveyed Different Impression.

QUIET RUMORS.

Unfavorable Rumors as to Condition of Mine Being Circulated.

TORONTO, Oct. 17 (C.P.).—Admission that an interview given the Northern Miner Sept. 11 and an advertisement for Teck Hughes Mines August 2 conveyed different information was made here to-day by Dr. D. L. H. Forbes, president of the mine, before Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey's inquiry into recent sales of the mine's stock.

On the witness stand the greater part of the morning, Dr. Forbes outlined his connection with the mining company since 1918 and told the Commissioner details of an interview he granted the Northern Miner in an effort to give facts concerning the mine and quiet unfavorable rumors regarding the condition.

Nevertheless he admitted the advertisement appearing in the paper earlier gave a different view from that subsequently expressed in his interview.

Support for Dr. Forbes' action in granting the interview came from John F. Lash of Toronto, a director of the mine, who said he thought it was "a darn lucky thing" Dr. Forbes was able to have the interview printed at that time.

Dr. Forbes' explained purpose of the interview was "to quiet rumors about the whole works being in a state of collapse." He said he took full responsibility for the interview and insisted an executive could not be hampered by having to call a directors' meeting before giving an interview.

Lash testified he and two other directors had seen the interview in proof.

President Called

Dr. Forbes was the first witness. After extensive mining experience in the United States, he returned to Canada, he said.

His first introduction to Teck Hughes came in May, 1918, when the mine was "a struggling prospect," which had been losing money. Until 1926 he was general superintendent. He became president in July, 1932. He is also general manager and carries "full responsibility," he testified.

J. M. Stirrett, counsel for the Commission, asked if he heard adverse rumors regarding the company.

Witness said he was on vacation from August 26 to September 2, and learned of these rumors "with consternation" on his return. On Aug. 20, 21 and 22 he had visited the mine and inspected records.

Decision as to operating policy was reached while he was there. They were to the effect that work on one of the shifts was to cease on Sept. 1 and on Sept. 5 work on re-treating the "old tailings" was to start.

There was no discussion regarding dividends with the mine staff.

"Greatest Good" Policy.

"Had you previously been of set opinion regarding the policy of the mine?" J. R. Stirrett, Commission counsel, asked.

Dr. Forbes said he made no declaration of dividends at the annual meeting, but told the directors he "hoped" the 60-cent-per-year-per-share dividend could be continued.

Fundamental policy of the company was "the greatest good for the shareholders, not necessarily the immediate good," he declared.

Counsel asked if he changed his opinion of policy between the annual meeting in November, 1933, and August, 1934.

Dr. Forbes said it was "discussed as a probability," with some of the board for six months before August 31, end of the fiscal year. He recalled an informal discussion of this at a meeting May 9.

Dr. Forbes said the matter of reduced dividend and tonnage was "something we have faced," for the past two years or more, adding such a "generous dividend constituted a very heavy load for the character of the mine we are operating."

Dividend payments were not reached in 1928 and 1929, he said in answer to Mr. Godfrey.

"I have not reduced my holdings in any way since I became a director," witness declared.

Asked by Mr. Godfrey if there was any selling in his behalf, Dr. Forbes said "none whatever; I have no brokerage account."

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, October 17 (C.P.)—Rallying tendencies appeared in the early stock trading to-day, but gains were largely erased in the late trading. Profit-taking in metals, which were firm yesterday, appeared to check the advance. U.S. Smelting lost 2 points. HUGHES DROPS BELOW $4 MARK Selling Develops From Disclosures at Investigation Now Proceeding.

GENERAL TONE STEADY.

TORONTO, Oct. 17. (CP).—Several issues, including Nipissing, Howey, Coniarum and Teck Hughes, stepped out of line to-day and recorded price swings of considerable importance while the general tone remained fairly steady. Selling of Teck on a price decline to a point below the $4 mark, appeared to have developed from disclosures at the investigation now proceeding Nipissing moved up to 2.88 on heavy volume while the other silver stocks were moderately reactionary.

Voting of a 4-cent dividend for Howey brought in a flow of buying that carried the stock up about 10 cents. Coniarum advanced on a report of good progress at the mine but only part of the gain was held. Sylvanite, San Antonio, Siscoe and Beattie were firm to strong.

BENEDICTINE MONK NAMED TO RECTORY

Appointment is First to be Made by Anglican Church Since Reformation.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (CP Cable).—For the first time since the Reformation, a Benedictine monk was to-day appointed to an Anglican rectory. The Bishop of London appointed Rev. Bernard Clements rector of All Saints' Church, Margaret street, in succession to W. F. Mackay, rector for the past 26 years and now becoming Canon of Gloucester Cathedral.

Although this is the first appointment of a monk to a rectory the present Bishop of Truro (England), Rt. Rev. Walter Frere, belongs to a monastic order. Rev. Clements has been a licensed preacher of the Diocese of Oxford for the past two years. He was born 54 years ago, and after education at Magdelen, Oxford, and Pembroke, Cambridge, was ordained Deacon in 1908. He became a member of the Anglican Benedictine Community in 1921 and subsequently served in West Africa.

HEAVY TURNOVER CANADIAN STEEL

Interlisted Shares Hold Margin of Gains in To-day's Session at Toronto.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—(C.P.)—Industrial share prices churned about within a narow range to-day and closed with gains and losses about balancing. Interlisted shares had a margin of weight on the up side with turnover heavy in the oils, Ford A, Nickel and Steel of Canada. Brewing Corporation stocks were in soft and off ⅝ to a point.

Steel of Canada was bid up more than 2 points to 1¾ and other gainers in the group were Canadian Car, General Steel Wares and Page Hersey. Other construction shares, including Canada Cement and Building Products closed on the up side.

Among the interlisted leaders, Nickel, Brazilian, Ford "A," and C. P.R. registered narrow gains while the Distillery issues were a bit soft, recessions of ⅛ to ¼ going to Walkers Common and Industrial Alcohol A.

SMUTS DECLARES WORLD IS NOT VERGE OF WAR

Noted Soldier and Scientist Thinks Great Battles Be For Freedom.

NO TIME FOR PESSIMISM.

DUNDEE, Scotland, Oct. 17 (CP).—"I do not agree with those who think the world is on the verge of another great war," declared General Jan C. Smuts, Empire statesman who played a leading part in the last conflict, as he delivered his rectorial address to-day to the University of St. Andrews.

General Smuts, noted soldier and scientist, former Prime Minister of South Africa, has been rector for the past three years of the 500-year-old university, but this is the first occasion on which he has been able to be present for induction. His term expires in a few months.

Freedom Is Issue.

"The issue around which the greatest battles in this and the coming generation will be fought, if the cause of our civilization is to be saved, is the issue of freedom," he continued. In the events of the times he saw much ground for anxiety, but none for real pessimism.

Scaremongers were doing their best to create an atmosphere of war, but despite them, and the present lamentable failure of disarmament efforts, and despite the vogue of "silly drilling and strutting about in uniform," he said, "I do not find real war temper anywhere.

"The issue of freedom is once more squarely raised and cannot be evaded. A new tyranny disguised in attractive patriotic colors in enticing youth everywhere into its service" In this obvious reference to Fascism and Hitlerism, the General added that he feared it more than he feared the danger of another great war.

"I have no doubt," he concluded however, "that the present disquieting phase will pass, and a new renascence of European spirit will follow."

Nursing Sister Dies After Long Illness

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 17 (CP)—Nursing Sister Ann Coulter, 55, one of the first nurses to see service in the Great War, died shortly after midnight, after many years of illness.

Her illness was attributed largely to her long months of service in advanced dressing stations, and her terrifying experience in a German air raid at Etaples, where she worked hard to bring to safety the wounded soldiers in her care, while the hospital walls crashed around her.

She was born in Korah Township, just outside the Sault; trained in the Winnipeg Hospital, and was for two years supervisor of a hospital at Glendale, Calif.

POLICE SEARCH FOR KIDNAPPER

"Mrs. Robinson got this money from her father-in-law. Then she went to Indianapolis and took up the job of guarding Mrs. Stoll.

"Robinson left his wife in the apartment with his prisoner yesterday morning. Where he went then I couldn't say. But th... afternoon Mrs. Robinson went out of the apartment with Mrs. Stoll. They drove around Indianapolis awhile.

"After driving around they came up to where they were to pick up the contacts. This went through all right.

"They got along without interference until they reached Scottsburg. There were six Deparment of Justice men waiting there. Of course, these men of ours couldn't make any move in this case until we knew the victim was safe. That is always our policy. But after we were assured of that we were able to turn on all the steam.

"The Robinson woman behaves pretty well. Just a little hysterical. No, she didn't give us any trouble. We never have any trouble with the women. They always behave pretty well when they are caught. She had $500 of the $50,000 in small bills ransom money when she was caught.

"Mrs. Robinson naturally is held while she is being courteously interrogated by our agents."

Nathan termed the Stoll family "heroic."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (AP)—The story of a 6-day quest to free Mrs. Alice S. Stoll from the hands of an insane and brutal kidnapper was told to-day by United States Department of Justice men.

The ace detectives, who have struck blow after blow at the kidnap racket, were confident that they would soon seize Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., 27-year-old former attorney's clerk, who is named as the kidnapper.

"Additional arrests are expected in the near future," the department also announced, but it declined to name the other suspects.

Had Eye on Robinson.

Agents made clear that almost from the very first day of the case they felt certain that Robinson was the kidnapper. They had no doubt they would catch him—but they were driven to a terrific pace by the fear that Mrs. Stoll would be killed before they could reach their goal.

They said Robinson had been accused of robbery and of attempted assaults on young girls in or near Nashville, Tenn.

It was after one of the robbery charges were brought against him that he spent a period in the State Insane Asyium at Nashville.

As signs of Robinson's feeble intellect, officials pointed to fingerprints left on the ransom letters and the fact that the note named "T. H. Robinson" as intermediary. This is the name of the youth's father. The elder Robinson's address in Nashville was given in the letter, making it doubly easy for the agents to begin their work of tracing.

"The ransom letter," said a statement released by William Stanley, assistant to the Attorney General, "was obtained by special agents and immediately forwarded to the technical laboratory of the Department of Justice in Washington.

"Latent fingerprints, developed on the letter, were pronounced by fingerprint experts to be identical with the fingerprints of T. H. Robinson, Jr.

"Known specimens of the handwriting and handwriting of T. H. Robinson, Jr., were also obtained by special agents and, upon comparisons by the handwriting experts of the technical laboratory, were concluded to be positively identical with the fragmentary hand printing contained in the ransom letter."

Admits Striking Woman.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—(A.P.)—Police Lieut. William Raed said to-day that Albert Annan, held in the mysterious death of Mrs. Ottila Griffin, 45, in which a possible connection with the Stoll kidnapping case was seen, had admitted that he struck the woman yesterday afternoon during a drunken argument.

Annan said he struck her about three p.m., Lieut. Raed asserted, but did not telephone physicians until about three hours later, because of fright. Mrs. Griffin, also known as Mrs. Roper, was found dead on a couch in a southside flat, blood flowing from her mouth and nose.

The Stoll angle was injected into the case by a mysterious telephone call while police were in the flat last night conducting their investigation. An officer answered the 'phone and a woman's voice said:

"Whatever you do, get word to Al that Mrs. Stoll is back." The caller warned "Al" to "beat it" and hung up.

Fear United States Be On Silver Basis

Rest of World Be on Gold Basis is of Opinion of George E. Roberts.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(A.P.)— If the United States continues to carry out the provisions of the Silver Purchase Act, it may, in the opinion of George E. Roberts, eventually find itself on a silver basis, with the rest of the world on the gold basis.

Roberts, who is economic adviser to the National City Bank, and a former director of the United States mint, pointed out that the Silver Act required the purchase of an estimated 1,300,000,000 ounces in the fact of raising prices of silver, which might involve the loss from the country of increased amounts of gold.

"So long as its gold resources last," he said in an interview, "the United States can raise the price of silver to any price desired up to the $1.29 an ounce limit, imposed by the law."

In addition, the Journal said, Browning decreed a trust of $100,000 be established for the treatment of crippled children.

Criminals Insane, Can't Be Cured, Says Doctor

PITTSBURG. — Most criminals can't come back. That was the answer of Dr. William J. Hickson, psychiatrist, to the question: "Can criminals be rehabilitated?" To explain his point Doctor Hickson said almost all lawbreakers are insane, but this insanity is at the opposite end of the scale from the over-emotionalized type identified as crazy in the public mind. "Criminals are under-emotionalized," the doctor asserted. The doctor urged laws by which the incorrigible criminal could be sent to institutions for life. He pointed out: "This would prevent repeated crimes by the same man and perpetuation of an inherently criminal family."

WELL PLANNED CHOIR CONCERT ABLY PRESENTED

Choir of St. John's Church Presents Concert in Parish Hall.

BOY CHORISTERS.

Instrumental Number by Fred and Jack Hooper Big Hit of Evening.

(By Jeanette)

A diversified and well-planned program that was not too lengthy claimed the attention of several hundreds of people last night in the parish hall of St. John's Church, at the concert presented by the church choir.

It was an appreciative audience, and a punctual one. In a city where scheduled events start, as a general rule, anywhere from fifteen to forty-five minutes late, it seemed odd to find the people seated and the entertainment about to start, at the appointed time.

Archdeacon Blagrave, speaking during an intermission, commented on the large number of people in attendance as an encouraging sign for future events of a musical type. He also congratulated the choir and the director, F. G. Mann, L.Mus., and referred o the beautiful stage setting for the event.

The stage was indeed extremely artistic. An effect of sunlight was achieved by the coloring of the walls, the overhead lighting, and the softly-shaded floor lamps placed at angles that cast a tinted glow through festoons of Autumn foliages that curtained the proscenium arch and the sides.

Boy choristers provided the main items on the program. These erect, pleasant-faced lads sing their tuneful chorses as if they loved the work, and are a credit alike to themselves, their parents, and especially to their director, the fine quality of whose work stand out when his youthful charges perform in one of these public concerts.

The choruses were particularly pleasing. The boys excel in their smooth attack and release, in the careful enunciation of their words, and in the silvery tone which colors their ensemble singing.

Solo and trio efforts were received with great applause also, in every instance, with especial salvos of apreciation, long and renewed, for a semi-chorus, "Sunshine and Butterflies," sung by a quartette that included Leslie Sage, Wallace Crouter, Bobby Kay and Douglas Moore.

The same four boys, with Fred Hooper, Lyle Glover and Allan Marshall, had a quintette number later, when they sang with expressive feeling and reverent appreciation of the composition, Mendelssohn's "I Waited for the Lord."

Instrumental Hit

One of the hits of the evening was an item that was not choral or vocal. It was the superbly-played piano duet entitled "Silver Chimes," in which Fred and Jack Hooper distinguished themselves by their splendid rendition of clear-toned, bell-like music, smooth and sweet, with a firm, pure touch.

The choruses included the opening, rollicking bit, "Beyond the Spanish Main"; the jocund "Mouse in the Moon"; the rhythmic sweetness and soft pianissimo sections of "Where the Bee Sucks," and the closing duo, "Harebells" and "Keep on Hopin'".

Vocal solos by the boy choristers were all in sweet-clear voice, and included "I Heard You Go By," by Douglas Moore; the fantastic and cheerful "Big Brown Bear," by the fair-headed lad of the group, Leslie Sage; the much-applauded effort of the youthful Wallace Crouter, singing very sweetly "Who is Sylvia?", and "The Birds go North Again," by Bobbie Kay.

A duet, "Many Roads," was sung by Leslie Sage and Fred Hooper, and another, "I Know a Bank," was given by Bobbie Kay and Fred Hooper, while a very fine trio, with treble and alto tones blending evenly and carefully, was "The Belfry Tower," sung by Wallace Crouter and Fred and Jack Hooper. This piece was distinguished by its soft, sweet pianissimo sections, beautifully handled by the youthful voices.

Enacted Skit

An interlude in the musical program that was splendidly enacted and afforded much amusement for the audience, was a brief dialogue entitled "Choosing a Schoolmaster," with members of the men's choir taking part.

The action hinged on the "national loyalties," as Archdeacon Blagrave phrased it, of a group of men gathered to choose a schoolmaster and forced to listen to the squabblings of the candidates, who forgot their original intention of applying for the position, when they found that each one of the four belonged to a different branch of the peoples of the British Isles. Mr. Oakwood, a committee member, added to the joy of life for his listeners by thoroughly mixing his quotations and allusions, "a la Mrs. Malaprop."

The varying dialects were taken off in outstanding fashion, the broad skirl of the Scotch on Bill Coleman's tongue providing extra entertainment.

Directed by A. J. Hayter, who also took the part of Mr. Wormwood, parish clerk of Poppythorpe, the cast included the following: I. J. Luther, as Mr. Oakwood, joiner and builder; H. Wilson, as Mr. Sloeleaf, grocer and provision dealer; L. F. Dyer, as Mr. Berry, fruiterer; F. Pammett, as Mr. Finn Scaley, fishmonger; J. Branson, as Solon Puzzleton, the English candidate; A. Stephan, as Thady O'Rafferty, the Irish candidate; W. Coleman, as Sandy McSinglewit, the Scotch candidate, and E. MacDonald, as Owen ap Shenkin, the Welsh candidate.

Men of the choir who assisted in various ways and took part in the dialogue, are: A. J. Hayter, J. S. Roberts, L. F. Dyer, H. Ridgeley, H. Chate, D. G. Melton, W. Coleman, J. Branson, I. J. Luther, A. Stephan, M. Turbill, E. MacDonald, G. Young, F. Pammett, A. Bacon, H. Wilson.

Lady members who were responsible for the effective decorations: Miss Ruby Quartermaine, Miss Lily Bacon, Mrs. D. G. Eldred, Mrs. A. Bacon, and Mrs. H. Burrows.

DEATH CLAIMS FINE CATHOLIC

James J. Phelan, Who Received Many Decorations for His Services, Dies Suddenly.

BORN IN TORONTO.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Oct. 17. —(A.P.).—James J. Phelan, 63, a native Torontonian, and one of the most prominent Catholics in the United States, died suddenly at his home here.

His death yesterday followed an illness of several weeks, and came after he had visited his office in the brokerage firm of Hornblower and Weeks, of which he was a senior partner.

Mr. Phelan was the first American to be made a Knight Commander of the Order of Pius IX. in recognition of his work in behalf of orphans and destitute Catholic children. He was decorated a Knight of St. Gregory by Pope Pius IX. in 1931, received the sovereign grand cross of the military order of Malta, and the Laetare medal of the University of Notre Dame.

He began his career as a page boy on the floor of the Boston Stock Exchange, then became an office boy for Hornblower and Weeks, and in 1900 became a member of the firm.

During the Great War he was assistant food administrator, and later emergency fuel administrator for Massachusetts. His work in aid of sufferers in the San Francisco earthquake in 1906 won national admiration. He gave equal assistance after the Salem fire of 1914 and the Halifax disaster in 1918.

He was equally prominent for his interest in charitable works and paid particular attention to the working boys' home in Newton.

He was born in Toronto, Ont., Oct. 14, 1871, but was brought to Boston six years later. In 1899 he married Mary Meade, of Boston, who died in 1908, leaving three children. He married Miss Mabel J. McGafee, of Jamaica Plains, in 1913, by whom he had three children. He leaves his widow and six children.

The funeral will be Friday, although definite plans await the arrival of his son, James, from Detroit to-day.

Profits of this year's tour of England netted the Australian cricket team $130,000.

MINERS RECEIVE MANY MESSAGES

110 Men Were Taken From the Mine Pit to the Hospital.

PECS, Hungary, Oct. 17.—(A.P.)—From many parts of the world came messages of sympathy and encouragement to-day for the 1,200 miners who remained on a five-day underground hunger strike in a dramatic fight for better wages.

A number of miners expressed dissatisfaction with the compromise that brought them above ground yesterday. A winter bonus of $3, another at Christmas and longer working time was promised the men, who demanded a weekly wage of $3.50 as against their previous one of $2.00.

One hundred and ten of them were in such a condition they were taken to a hospital after they were brought out.

SUICIDE PLAN DID NOT WORK

Young Toronto Man Attempted to End Life in Fashionable Cocoanut Grove.

IN LOS ANGELES.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17 (AP)—Thomas P. Phelan, 27, identified by police as the son of H. W. Phelan, said to be a wealthy Toronto, Ont., rail magnate, attempted to end his life early to-day by shooting himself, police reported.

The young man was removed to the Georgia Street Police Emergency Hospital suffering from a bullet wound near his heart. Surgeons said he probably would recover.

The reported suicide attempt took place at fashionable Cocoanut Grove, rendezvous of film celebrities.

A note, addressed to W. H. Phelan, 44 Castle Frank Road, Toronto, was found in Phelan's possessions. It read:

"Dad.—This is going to solve a lot of difficulties. Give my love to mother, yourself and the gang. So long."

Police reported the young man said he recently "had gone through" a $25,000 legacy.

Had No Money

The officers reported young Phelan had drunk two quarts of champagne at the Grove. When given a bill he said he had no money. Taken to an office adjoining the dancing pavilion, officers reported, Phelan suddenly whipped out a revolver and shouted:

"You'll never take me out of here alive."

He then shot himself.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—(CP)—Relatives of Thomas P. Phelan, 27, reported to have attempted suicide in Los Angeles today had not been informed of the occurrence early today.

His father, H. Ward Phelan, said he believed his son was in Los Angeles but had had no information from authorities there of the reported attempted suicide.

Thomas Phelan is managing director of the Consumers Coffee Company of Toronto. He left about a month ago for a business trip to the coast, it was learned at his home. He is married, but has no children.

Phelan's father is a director of the Canada Railway News Company.

THANKSGIVING NOTE FEATURES MEETING

Large Attendance at October Gathering of St. James' W. M. S.

Thanksgiving was the key note of the W.M.S. October meeting held yesterday afternoon in Wesley Hall, St. Jame's United Church.

With an unusually large attendance the meeting was both educative and inspiring and was presided over by Mrs. A. E. Moorehouse, the president during the opening and business sessions. For the very interesting program which followed, Mrs. H. J. Davidson took the chair in the absence of the convenor of the group in charge, Mrs. L. V. Wood. "O Worship the King" was the introductory hymn and was followed by an impressive responsive thanksgiving service in which all took part, with Mrs. A. Wilson offering the prayer. In keeping with the theme of the day, the story of the "Master of the Harvest" was read by Mrs. Frank Stevens, and the beautiful sacred solo "The Stranger of Galilee, was sung by Mrs. P. S. Dallin.

The generous response made when the annual thankoffering was taken showed that W.M.S. members are in a truly thanksgiving spirit. The Auxiliary is nearing the end of the Study Book "Living Issues in China' and yesterdays chapter "To believe or not to believe was particularly interesting as presented by Mrs. Alvin Davis as she brought these Eastern women and girls and their needs very close to her hearers. We are united with China in science, art, music and literature. We work together on invention and discovery. We are trying to work out our political life on common lines. Is religion to be the one place where division remains? The most hopeful thing in China is the fellowship that has been formed between them and the men and women from the west. Our hope for the answer to China's religious problem is quickened when we see among her people those who have discovered themselves through discovering Jesus. China's religion problem is not hers alone. It is ours too, and we need all that the human race has learned in its great quest for God if we would help solve the problem.

A feature of the program, was the presentation of a handsome purse and an accompanying farewell address to Mrs. F. D. Armstrong, who is severing her connection with St. James W.M.S. On behalf of the Auxiliary the address of appreciation was read by Mrs. R. B. English and the gift was presented by Mrs. E. L. Woodley. In a few words Mrs. Armstrong expressed her gratitude for the kindly gesture and assured the ladies that she would never forget her happy associations with them.

"Blest be the Tie that Binds" was sung softly and all united in silent prayer for our missionaries after which prayer was offered by Mrs. Moorhouse and the gathering dismissed with the benediction.

BE BEAUTIFUL

Helen Mack

The famous Lucrezia Borgia, historians tell us, had a most romantic way of disposing of the people she didn't like. Lucrezia, it seems, would invite her enemies to be her guests at a banquet. And with true hospitality, she would gracefully dump a generous amount of deadly poison in their wine. As you can well imagine, Lucrezia's banquets really weren't very popular.

Today, of course, folks don't go around poisoning people wholesale. But a famous scientist claims that many people die of poisons long before their time. Not of poisons administered by others, but poisons that they create in their own systems. Slow poisons that may take years to actually kill them, but that make them seem ugly and old, instead of keeping them young and beautiful.

The way to keep the body free of such poisons is surprisingly simple. It lies principally in keeping the excretory system functioning freely and efficiently. For it is when the excretory system does not function properly, and wastes are permitted to accumulate in the body, that poisons generally are created.

Evacuation, however, is a normal function of the body, and no normally healthy woman should find it difficult to keep her excretory system functioning efficiently. It's really mostly a matter of maintaining a proper food diet, a diet that will keep the intestines free from wastes. But one of the simplest and most efficient ways of promoting intestinal hygiene is through the use of the saline solution.

The saline solution is merely a solution of ordinary, common table salt. This solution, when properly taken, constitutes a sort of internal bath, as it runs through the stomach and intestines, and washes them out. To follow the routine properly, the solution should be prepared by dissolving two teaspoons of common salt in a quart of tepid water. Then three or four glasses of the solution should always be taken before—not after—breakfast. For at this time everything of value has already been secured from the foods eaten on the previous day.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Reducing Lotion

Ellen: The reducing lotion made by dissolving two squares of gummed camphor in eight ounces of rubbing alcohol should be patted on the thigh several times a day and allowed to dry.[5] A bit of cold cream should be applied afterward, to keep the skin soft.

Buttermilk

Marie: Buttermilk really isn't fattening, and you may consume as many as two quarts of it a day, if you so desire.

Thousands Are Pouring Into Belgrade for Royal Funeral.

NO SHELTER AVAILABLE.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Oct. 17. —(A.P.)—Nights without shelter or sleep in bitter cold weather faced hundreds of thousands pouring into Belgrade to-day to attend funeral ceremonies for King Alexander.

Snow Two Feet Deep.

Heavy snow storms, accompanied by high winds, are sweeping toward the capital from Slovenia, where the snow in some places is two feet deep.

If the blizzards descend upon Belgrade they will add immeasurably to the discomforts already suffered by the legion of mourners here. They are now sleeping in railroad stations, carts, streets and hallways.

Hospitable Yugoslav families offered the visitors all available private rooms, but there were not nearly enough accommodations for the 250,000 persons already here

Fifty special trains have arrived daily for the past several day and people of all classes continue to pour in by foot, horseback and in oxcarts. Some 150,000 additional visitors were expected to-day.

President LeBrun Arrives.

Among the arrivals was President Albert LeBrun of France, who was greeted by Prince Paul and members of the Cabinet. To the surprise and disappointment of the Bulgarian Legation, King Boris of Bulgaria, did not come, sending his brother, Prince Cyril, instead.

In death Alexander had succeeded in giving a culturally varied people a feeling of unity through a common grief such as they never had while he lived.

The belief grew among the people that the Regency would take advantage of this opportunity to call a free and secret election, abandoning dictatorial methods.

WORST DANGER OF OPERATING IS PREVENTED

American College of Surgeons Announce Preventive Vaccine for Peritonitis.

SEVERAL YEARS' STUDY.

First Came to Attention of Surgeons in Connection With Caesarean Operations.

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, A.P. Science Editor.)

BOSTON, October 17 (A.P.). — A nearly 100 per cent. preventive for surgery's worst death risk, peritonitis, was announced to the American College of Surgeons here today.

The preventive is a vaccine, called amniotic fluid, and its discovery came from the study of babies during Caesarean operations. In these operations, Herbert L. Johnson, M. D., of Boston, noticed that the mothers suffered fewer abdominal adhesions than usual.

Several years of study led to the virtual certainty that the protection was due to the amniotic fluid which surrounds a child before birth. The same, or a similar fluid, is present in the higher animals.

Thus the animals would furnish a source for this fluid if it could be used in other than Caesarean surgery. Animal experiments were carried on for years. In the animal work, Dr. Johnson was assisted by Dr. Shields Warren and J. Stewat Rooney of Boston

A concentrated fraction of amniotic fluid was developed, its source being cows. Clinical work, the tests on human beings, went on under supervision of Dr. Edward L. Young, Jr., and others.

About two years ago, Dr. Young who is surgeon-in-chief of Faulkner Hospital here, conceived the idea of using the fluid as a vaccine in the abdominal cavity before operations. About 100 cubic centimeters is injected into the cavity four to six hours before the operation.

Dr. Young demonstrated in clinics to-day and said that this new surgical measure has reduced the death-rate from peritonitis after bowel resection from 30 per cent to 2 per cent. A 30 per cent. death-rate from this cause of peritonitis has heretofore been lower than the average.

This promises the end of high peritonitis risk in some of the most dangerous abdominal operations.

S. R. PEARSON FINDS PIGEON IN HIS YARD

Bird Bears Band on One Leg —But There Are No Markings.

S. R. Pearson, 315 Maitland Avenue, is wondering if a pigeon which settled down in his backyard yesterday afternoon is one of the carrier variety strayed from someone's pigeon roost. The bird bears a band on one leg, but the band has no markings of any kind to reveal the bird's origin.

Apparently tired and quite tame, the bird strutted about the yard until Mr. Pearson picked it up and put it in a cage. He has fed it milk and will try it on some bread crumbs or grain. If it shows no inclination to fly away to its home, he will keep it a couple of days in the hope that an owner will claim it.

The pigeon is entirely white.

Valuable Service Rendered By Local Red Cross Society

MRS. HARSTONE IS RE-ELECTED RED CROSS HEAD

Annual Meeting of Local Society is Held in Board Room of Library.

RED CROSS HOSTEL.

3,204 Transients Were Given Free Meal Tickets, 1,196 Lodgings.

Mrs. Robert Harstone, who has held the office for many years, was re-elected as president of the Peterborough branch of the Red Cross Society, at the annual meeting of the organization, held yesterday afternoon in the Board Room of the Public Library.

Other officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Mrs. G. B. Boucher and Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, vice presidents; Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, secretary; Miss Emma Morrow, treasurer.

Members of the executive committee: Mrs. Fred Collins, Mrs. C. G. Graham, Mrs. Fred Hooper, Mrs. Bruce Law, Mrs. F. Millard, Mrs. John Mills, Mrs. H. A. Morrow, Mrs. C. E. Newman, Mrs. Charles Ray, Mrs. W. Perks, Mrs. R. H. Turner, Miss Margaret Hamilton, Miss Effie Munro, Miss Helen Munro, Miss Maude Rush.

Men's Advisory Board: W. C. Ackerman, W. R. Breyfogle, R. S. Cotton, Mayor Roland Denne, R. M. Glover, Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., James Hamilton, W. F. Huycke, F. D. Kerr, K.C., A. L. Killaly, T. A. Mackay, V. J. McElderry, K.C., W. G. Morrow, A. Mowat, Judge Sheldon Smoke, G. H. Thompson and R. H. Turner.

The report of the Nominating committee was accepted as read by the convenor, Miss Maude Rush.

Mrs. Harstone was in the chair for the meeting, during which many matters of interest to the society were discussed, and reports were presented of the year's work.

Mrs. Harstone read several brief extracts from reports presented at the annual meeting this spring of the National executive of the Red Cross. She quoted Earl Bessborough, who, in referring to the seventy years of service since the inauguration of the society, called it "an organized body of kindliness and helpfulness extending to every corner of the globe."

National Efforts

Speaking of the National Commissioner's report and his reference to the annual depletion of the reserve account through demands owing to relief wants, Mrs. Harstone said this cannot go on much longer. Each branch must try to carry its own disbursements.

During the past year, in Canada, over 100,000 visits were made to families of ex-soldiers, in the peace-time endeavors to carry on with the work for which the society was first organized. And some 26,000 ex-service men presented themselves and their wants at the various branches.

There is increasing interest manifested in the Junior Red Cross and its work. There are 8,000 Junior branches with 268,000 members. A total of 10,474 handicapped children have been assisted, and last year, the Junior members sent in to headquarters the sum of $15,380. The Juniors do much toward the promotion of international friendliness and a solidarity of youth which, it is hoped, will make for a new generation of peace.

There are at present 40 Outpost Hospitals in the Dominion, with some 24 in the province of Ontario.

Although the National headquarters hoped for a decrease in the sum, after paying out in 1932 a total of over half a million dollars in connection with relief work, 1933 saw an increase of 50 per cent in the demands in this department of the work, a part of which is the sending of Christmas boxes to needy settlers in northern districts.

The annual report of various efforts in connection with the Peterborough branch was submitted by the secretary, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner.

"Unemployment, distress and measures of relief seem still to be occupying the minds of organizations and individuals almost to the exclusion of everything else, so consequently the account of the work undertaken by this branch in the past year is really but a record of the effort put forth by the Peterborough Red Cross Society to help relieve distress and suffering in this community and to send aid to ex-soldiers' families, living in outlying districts."

Food, Lodging and Jobs

At the Red Cross Hostel on Hunter street, between the opening date of December 6th and the closing, on April 9th, 3,204 transients were given meal tickets, while 1196 men received lodging. Not only were clean, comfortable beds provided, but facilities were afforded each man to have a shower, a hair-cut, clean clothing, and, if necessary, to get new, warm socks.

For 30 of the transients positions were found.

During the past year, $50 was expended in repairing boots of ex-service and other deserving men; valuable assistance in the way of food, fuel and groceries, costing $150 in all, was given to seven families who for various reasons were not included under organized city charities, and at Christmas time, clothing, boots, toys and fruit were sent to needy families of ex-soldiers living in remote districts of the county. The sum of $80 was spent in this work.

Miscellaneous efforts of the organization included the provision of a second-hand sewing-machine for a woman of Apsley, so that she might teach sewing to young girls of the community; the purchase of cooking utensil's and dishes for a Peterborough family settling in Northern Ontario; feeding and providing shelter for a destitute family passing through the city enroute to friends in Eastern Canada; giving boots and underwear to needy individuals and providing meals and lodging to twelve others, after the Hostel was closed.

In co-operation with the Thursday Club, ten layettes were provided, the branch purchasing flannelette at a cost of ten dollars, and the club making the garments.

Nutrition or economical cookery classes were organized, with 20 members, with Miss Dorothy Moir giving valuable instruction, and home nursing classes, organized and supervised by Mrs. Walter Perks, had an enrolment of 53. Thanks was expressed here for the time given to the classes by two nurses, Miss Florence Vickers and Miss Helen Lauder, also to lecturers on specific subjects: Drs. MacPherson, Murray Fraser, Sutton, J. J. Craig, as well as Miss Mary Comstock, who spoke on Invalid Cookery.

New Departure

The scope of the organization was enlarged this year and a new community service undertaken when a branch of the Visiting Housekeeper service was organized in the city and a visiting housekeeper engaged from February 26th last.

"Mrs. Charles Ray, convenor of the committee in charge of this work, has given unstintingly of her time and energy and has done invaluable service in visiting the families where the housekeeper was to be placed, in supervising the work and in keeping in touch with the Relief Board, in co-operation with which this work has been carried on. During the seven months that the Visiting Housekeeper has been employed here, 27 homes have been served in times of sickness and distress, and of these 16 or almost 60 per cent were homes of ex-service men."

Reference was made to the flourishing condition of the 14 groups of Junior Red Cross branches in the city, and to the Outpost Hospital work, to which the sum of $500 was contributed to headquarters by the local branch.

The satisfactory campaign for funds conducted in December of last year netted a total of $2,024.24.

Mrs. Kenner referred to the loss by death to the society of two valued members: Judge Huycke and J. A. Aylmer, and also referred to the departure from the city of G. A. Macdonald, an enthusiastic worker and generous supporter.

The report concluded: "To all those organizations and individuals, who in any way, by financial support, sympathetic interest or service, contributed to the success of Red Cross work in Peterborough during the year that is past, the sincere thanks of this branch is accorded."

Financial Items

The treasurer, Miss Emma Morrow, presented the financial statement for the year ending September 29th.

Balance from previous year: $440.78; total of canvass for funds (including donations of $56 from the Major Bennet Chapter I.O.D.E., $25 from the 57th Regiment Chapter, and $30 from the Peter Robinson Chaper), $2,034.24; from City Treasurer (proportion cost of relief under two for one scheme) $668.32; donation from Peterborough Relief Association on account of expenses re Visiting Housekeeper, $35; membership fees, $17; sundries, $20.76; Total: $3,206.10.

Expenditures included a donation of $500 to the Canadian Red Cross Society; rent of Hostel, $137.50; cost of meals for transients (3504 at 25 cents apiece), $876; salary attendants at Hostel, $226.50; sundry accounts in connection with Hostel, $216.77; current accounts, $290.77; sundries, $571.75. Total: $2,821.29. Balance on hand: $384.81.

The report of the Supply committee was presented by Mrs. R. H. Turner, showing various expenditures in this department, including $69.82 for Christmas parcels to Northern Ontario, and a total of $269.82 for various supplies during the year.

Miss Maude Rush gave the report for the Hostel, itemizing various things purchased, such as bolsters and palliases for the cots, and an emergency drug kit, totalling in all expenses of $111.94.

Thanks were expressed to all who had helped with the Hostel, especially to Mrs. J. Fanning, who laundered all blankets, palliase covers and bolsters free of charge, and to Mrs. Kenner.

Mrs. Chas. Ray reported for the Nutrition classes and Mrs. W. Perks for the Home Nursing classes. Mrs. Ray also reviewed the work done by the Visiting Housekeeper, Mrs. Poole, who was engaged for a few months at first, re-engaged later, and has now had her term extended for another two months.

Visiting Housekeeper

Commencing on February 26th, Mrs. Poole worked in twenty-seven homes since then, for periods ranging from one half a day to two weeks. Her chief service during those visits was the care of the family during the absence of the mother. Of the 27 cases, 21 were of sickness. Seven were maternity cases, while other causes accounted for the balance of the 21, including 3 nervous breakdowns. Sixteen were ex-servicemen's families.

Where the family was able, a part of the expenses was asked for. Up to date, one dollar has been received, "from a woman who could not afford it." Practically all the families were on relief.

A difficulty encountered was the opinion maintained by the people served that Mrs. Poole was meant to be a nurse, whereas her activities are meant to be a substitute for the mother for the children in the home, while the latter is absent. A resentment at what they termed intrusions on their personal liberty was another difficulty among those who did not understand the efforts made to assist them.

Mrs. Ray commended Mrs. Poole as being a splendid worker, and "discreet, tactful and popular with the people."

At the conclusion of reports, sundry business was discussed.

It was decided to continue the work of repairing shoes and $50 was again voted for this purpose, with $150 voted for miscellaneous relief appeals.

No decision was arrived at with regard to the Hostel, as Mrs. Harstone said they did not yet know whether it would be maintained again this year, although indications point to its continuance.

A committee to help in compilation of a master list in connection with the appeal for funds, was appointed, including Mrs. W. Perks, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mrs. Chas. Ray, Mrs. John Mills, Mrs. R. H. Turner and Miss Margaret Hamilton.

Each member of the executive committee was requested to procure names of three or four people who would assist as canvassers for the campaign for funds, the names to be handed to Mrs. Harstone or Mrs. Kenner.

New members of the executive were welcomed by the president, who spoke of a small attendance at meetings as a discouragement to the cause, and said that a true understanding of the spirit of the Red Cross should encourage the members to further and greater effort.

Exclusive Photos Of Two Daring Missionaries Lost In North

Two Roman Catholic missionaries are reported lost in the Arctic wastes north of Churchill in the North West Territories. Hope has been abandoned that Rev. Father Honore Pigeon (LEFT) will be found alive. He was lost in a storm near Chesterfield Inlet on Sept. 28 and his body has not yet been located. To the most northerly mission in the world, on Igloolik Island, Father Stephen Brazin (RIGHT) went nearly four years ago. He has not been heard from for more than a year. Father Emmanuel Duplain (INSET), who headed a search party for Father Bazin this fall in the Roman Catholic supply ship Pius XI. was forced to return by adverse weather. He aided in the search for Father Pigeon, but is of the opinion that the courageous missionary fell into a hole in the ice. The bleak town that is Chesterfield Inlet is shown in lower picture while map shows region where Father Pigeon was lost.

ARCTIC BLIZZARD CLAIMS LIFE OF COURAGEOUS MISSIONARY

Rev. Father Pigeon Took Gospel to Eskimos in Northernmost Wastes.

LOST IN STORM

By Central Press Canadian

THE PAS, Manitoba, Oct. 17.—The relentless Arctic has claimed yet another victim—another legionnaire of the church.

Rev. Fr. Honore Pigeon, missionary of the Roman Catholic church, was lost in a storm near Chesterfield Inlet, 400 miles north of Churhill on Hudson Bay on Sept. 28th.

The missionary had been working up the coast of Hudson Bay in a small skiff, accompanied by an Eskimo guide. He reached a point only six miles from Chesterfield, where he was to visit the mission. Rather than sail around the point into the little bay, Father Pigeon decided to walk the six miles. He left the Eskimo in the boat and set out.

A sudden and terrific Arctic storm arose, the missionary's trail was obliterated, and he disappeared as though the earth had swallowed him up. Search parties have given up hope.

Another courageous missionary, Rev. Fr. Stephen Bazin, has not been heard from for more than a year. He has been out of touch with civilization for the past four years on the lonely island of Igloolik, in Hecla and Fury Straits, northwest territories — the most northerly mission in the world.

The Pius XI made an attempt to find Dr. Bazin this fall, but the adverse weather foiled the expedition.

All hopes of finding Father Pigeon alive, have been abandoned. The Rt. Rev. Martin Lajeunesse, bishop of Keewatin, stated to-day: "We have received no news. We are only hoping that the body will be recovered by the searchers.

Was Delicate Man

"Father Pigeon was delicate," said the prelate, "he would soon become exhausted. There is a possibility he lay down in a rock crevice for rest and shelter. He could not survive for any length of time. But we may find the remains. The fact that the snow has drifted among the rocks will make the search more difficult."

Eskimos were able to follow his trail in the snow for a short distance. The tracks were soon obliterated by the storm. "We fear that Father Pigeon must have gone through the thin ice of a pot-hole (a little muskeg lake) and drowned," said Fr. Duplain, pilot of the Roman Catholic supply ship, Pius XI. Father Duplain has left for Vercheres, Quebec, to personally break the news to the lost clergyman's aged father. He will not return to Churchill until Christmas.

The Rev. Honore Pigeon, O.M.I., missionary of the Roman Catholic church, who has been given up for lost in the Northwest Territories, might be termed as a clergyman who was literally born in the church. He is related to a Quebec family, who have been distinguished for their gifts to various branches of the faith throughout Canada, but chiefly in the realms, where self-denial was the vow; that is, in missionary endeavours far from the beaten track.

Honore Pigeon was born in Vercheres, Que., in 1897, where he received his early education. He then enrolled in L'Assumption College, near Montreal, an academy affiliated with Montreal University. Later he went to a seminary in Ottawa to study theology that he might become an oblate missionary.

He was ordained to the priesthood in 1923. The following year the Rev. Fr. Pigeon went into northern Manitoba. He went on to Chesterfield Inlet, in the Northwest Territories, 400 miles north of Churchill. Later he was appointed to the mission at Cape Eskimo, 150 miles north of Churchill.

A brother of the priest resides in Ottawa. He is the Rev. Fr. Irenee Pigeon, bursar in Ottawa University. The missionary also has relatives among Sisters of Charity serving in religious institutions across Canada. Among these are: Three cousins, Sister Stovide, Duck Lake, Sask.; Sister St. Martin, of Rome, at St. Adele, Que.; Sister Lajeunesse, St. Denis, Que.; an aunt, is Sister Odilon, Mother Superior of the Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary Outremont, Que.; a cousin is the Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Charlebois, assistant principal of Jean Cartier Normal School, Montreal.

Where Did We Get the Dollar Sign

WHY don't we use a big D for "dollar" and draw two lines through that? Who started the idea of using an S instead?

Well, one explanation links us with old Spanish trading days. Prices were based on pesos, which was abbreviated to read Ps. Gradually, they say, we came to write the P right on top of the S. But that sign was too hard to read, so we rolled the loop off the P, which left $. And finally, we picked up another stroke and put it through the S, resulting in our present $.

Now reading the dollar-sign is natural to every one. But much more important, we believe, is learning to read dollar-values.

When you hold a newspaper in your hand, the dollar-values are right before your eyes. You find them in nearly every good advertisement. They tell you where to get the most quality at the lowest cost.

It's a good practice to study the dollar-values in your newspaper before you set out to buy. Then the price-tags mean more to you than a group of figures.

INITIAL MEETING LIFFORD A.Y.P.A.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hannah Hosts to Anglican Church Young People.

LIFFORD LINE, Oct. 17 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mr. and Mrs. William Hannah and family, Eighth Line, entertained the Lifford A.Y.P.A. for their initial meeting of the season on Thursday evening when about twenty members were present. After devotional exercises and preliminary discussion, dates for meetings during the season were drawn by the members in order that there would be no confusion regarding places of meetings. Each member will entertain the society for the date drawn.

The past president, Lawrence Staples, was presented with a past president's pin in appreciation of his faithful service to the A.Y.P.A. for the past two years.

The 1934-1935 executive is as follows: President, Robert Sisson; 1st Vice, Vera Strachan; Secretary, Muriel Hannah; Treasurer, Harold Page.

While the scrutineers were counting votes, recitations by Muriel Hannah and Marjorie Page were much enjoyed.

A very interesting contest was prepared by Muriel Hannah. The questions were answered by surnames of A.Y.P.A. members. Another very humorous contest was then enjoyed by the members. Rev. Mr. Holden closed the meeting with prayer.

Luncheon was then served by Mrs. Hannah and Muriel and a social reunion of the young people enjoyed.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Ben Page on Wednesday evening, October 24th.

Lakefield

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, October 17. — Rev. Dr. Rochester, editor of the Presbyterian Record, was the guest speaker at the anniversary services of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Sunday. Dr. Rochester is an outstanding figure in the Presbyterian church, and is a speaker of remarkable ability and his sermons were high lights in the annals of anniversary sermons.

Dr. Rochester took his text from the 1st Epistle of St. Paul to Timothy, 3rd chapter and 14th and 15th verses.

Worship is not outward but inward; we must not forget that God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth. The object of worship is praise to God. The apostle exhorts the people to good behaviour, not only in church, but everywhere, so as to honor the name of God, and be worthy of being a member of Christ.

The record of British empire is one which stands high among the nations in its application of the laws of Christ to its national and international relations. While there are a few blots on the nation's escutcheon, there are very few. The business integrity of Britain is known and respected everywhere, and even the United States paid a tribute to the honorable dealings of the Empire in regard to the payment of the war debts, showing a sublime courage, an invincible spirit and a knightly example of self-sacrifice.

The church universal consists of all who are and shall be gathered into the body of Jesus Christ—an honorable body, all saints, no one who believes in the Lord Jesus is left out, and that is what we mean by the Catholic Church, it means everybody. We have our differences for our minds are given us for use, but we must not break asunder the bonds of love.

The church was decorated with flowers, the rich tinted blooms of the late summer, and potted plants, and presented a most attractive appearance.

The choir under the direction of Mrs. T. W. Chaplin, had prepared special music for both morning and evening. Mrs. W. Grotifend was at the organ. Mr. Max Warne, a violist of a very high order, was present, and played at both services, which afforded the congregations a real musical treat. Miss Jean Parsons of Omemee, sang a solo at the morning service, and the choir rendered an anthem at each service. "He will Hide Me," was the title of the one sung in the evening. Mrs. T. W. Chaplin sang beautifully, "I shall not pass Again this way," in the evening.

The evening congregation was attended by a large number of the other denominations, the services in both Baptist and United churches, being waived, and Rev. W. R. Archer and Rev. W. B. Walker, assisted by Rev. R. J. Burton.

WIDOWER WAIVES RIGHTS AS HEIR

New York Man Agrees to His Wife's Wealth Going to Former Husband.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (C.P.). — Mrs. Juanita Austin Shewan, of Fifth Avenue, eight days before her marriage to Edwin A. Shewan, drew a will leaving her estate of $36,531 to her former husband, Eugene A. Drey.

Mr. Shewan was entitled by law to elect to take one-half of the net estate, but fyled a waiver of this right and consented to the provisions of the will by which Mr. Drey was the sole beneficiary. He requested that his wife's estate be administered and distributed in the same manner as if such statutory rights under Section 18 of the Decedent State Law, had not been created. According to the affidavit the action was taken up pursuant to a written agreement between himself and Mr. Drey.

JUSTICE MAKINS MAKES APOLOGY

Honor is Satisfied Between Judge and French-Canadians.

PROTESTS MADE.

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 17.—(CP)—Honor is satisfied as between Mr. Justice Makins of the Supreme Court of Ontario and the French-Canadian population of this community. Some days ago his Lordship, irked at the spectacle of a French-Canadian who was unable to give his evidence in English, unloosed comments which were regarded as highly offensive by the French-Canadian community.

Resolutions by the St. Jean Baptiste Society and the French-Canadian women followed, these being despatched to the Prime Minister and to Minister of Justice Hugh Guthrie. The matter, it was threatened, would be taken up on the floor of parliament.

This however, was obviated by a letter received today by the secretary of the St. Jean Baptiste Society in which his Lordship clarified the situation to the satisfaction of all concerned.

SASKATCHEWAN HARDEST HIT

Hockey Transfer Books From Great Lakes to Coast Closed To-day.

REGINA STRENGTHENED.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 17 (CP)—Red lights flashed as the transfer barrier and registration books of amateur hockey clubs in Western Canada from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast were closed to-day. Apart from a mild upheaval in Saskatchewan where the ebb and flow of hockey talent took on its greatest revival, the annual roster-shuffle produced no last-minute stampede. No transfers were reported from the Pacific province.

Wholesale Transfers

Wrinkles were most pronounced on the brows of Saskatchewan officials where applications reached wholesale proportions. The first-string line of one southern club was wrecked and others weakened with the admission of North Battleford to membership in the Northern League.

Moose Jaw contributed Davey Duchak, Ken Davis, goalie; Vic Myles and Cally McCalmon, members of last year's Crescents, and Cam Burke, a former Falcon. Bill Gilhooley, Regina Aces; Elmer Piper, Saskatoon Elites, and three Kerrobert Intermediates, Clarence Shillington, Joe Schwab and Eddie O'Keefe completed the roster of the reorganized Beavers.

Started Last Spring

The exodus from Saskatoon started last Spring with departure of Jim Dewey and Art Silver, shifty Quakers' forwards, and Ron Silver, of Varsity, for Sudbury. Cliff Lake, another Quakers' luminary, followed later. The Quakers, now operating as the Standards, imported Murray Armstrong from Regina and "Red" Roden from Humboldt.

Prince Albert Mintos, Northern League winners last season, will be given new-blood injection by the addition of Bert "Mutt" Gardiner, Saskatoon Elites and Andy Young, Regina Pats. Both are goalies. All of last season's star forward line reported with the exception of Phil Besler and Alex Motter who are seeking a tryout with Boston Bruins.

Regina Juniors Strengthened

Regina mourned the loss of six Seniors, but the Junior stock was strengthened as the result of transfers. Vern Johnston, late of Brandon Native Sons, moved into the forward line of Regina Vics. Regina Pats called in Sid Coaddock, Assiniboia; Lyle Cowan, Chaplin; Don Metz and Dick Adophe, of Wilcox; Mel Hill, Desmarais and Vickers, from Saskatoon Junior ranks.

He was terribly crushed. He was brought to the Kingston General Hospital, where his condition was reported to be critical.

Martin was employed on highway work at Parham, but had finished his job, and intended to ride on the truck to the office to get his pay when the accident occurred. He has a wife and family living at Holleford.

SOUTH HEAT BAD FOR APPENDIXES

But Baltimore Paper Retorts North so Good for Respiratories.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 17.—(CP).—Dr. Clarence Mills, of Cincinnati, Ohio, declares the warm weather of the southland is terrible for appendicitis, owing to heat and dampness, reducing the rate of metabolism and lessening ability to fight infections.

The rate of appendicitis fatality is almost three times as high as in the north. The Baltimore Sun says of this:

"This may, of course, be due to the fact that twice as many people eat beaten biscuit in the South as in the North, but where the North takes it on the chin—or the chest—is in bronchial, sinus and respiratory infections. Also Dr. Mills finds 'mental breakdowns resulting from the excessive storminess in our Northern States.' The old complaint, 'this weather is driving me nuts,' has, therefore, a firm scientific foundation.

"Dr. Mills hopes that hospitals will have air conditioning some time so that appendicitis patients in the South and bronchitis sufferers in the North may be protected from their environment. He looks forward to the time when hospitals will be able to prescribe 'any type of artificial climate a physician might desire for any particular purpose.'

"'Now, why don't you hop on an ambulance and take a month off in the Riviera room of the Sawbones General Hospital?' physicians will ask their opulent patients. And later, when the treatment begins to take, nurse will come in and say, 'Now we're going to roll you right down the corridor to Asheville. Doctor says you need a more 'bracing climate'.'"

FALLS THROUGH TRAP-DOOR.

LINDSAY, October 17.— On Monday when Mrs. Oliver Drew of Cannington was getting the noonday meal ready she unfortunately left the trap-door to the cellar open and in making a quick turn fell down the steps. Being alone in the house at the time, she managed to scramble up to the dining-room floor. When her son arrived with the intention of taking her to the funeral of a friend he found his mother in a critical condition. Dr. Graham was called and had Mrs. Drew removed to the Lindsay Hospital. She is suffering from a fractured bone in the knee and other injuries.

TRENT RIVER.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Redden and son, Rufus, attended anniversary service at Norwood United Church Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd and family, of Preneveau, were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Garratt, of Toronto, arrived Monday to spend a few days at their cottage.

Young Man Is Miraculously Healed Answer To Prayer at Pentecostal Church

Hearing of the Wilson Evangelistic campaign at the Full Gospel Pentecostal Church, a young man by the name of Hambidge came from the country to attend the services and to receive healing.

Last night before a full house

MRS. WILSON

Rev. Chambers the pastor gave testimony to the above healing. Thinking that possibly Hambidge was in the service, the minister asked, "Is young Hambidge in this service?" whereupon a voice from the congregation replied, "No; He went home." Mr. Chambers then asked how he was before leaving and the lady answered O.K.

The lady was Mrs. Wood, the aunt of young Hambidge in whose home he had been staying. Hambidge according to Mr. Chambers testimony had fallen off a horse receiving serious injuries, his ankle had been badly sprained and the ligaments of the foot believed torn.

Hambidge came to the service Sunday morning with his foot all bandaged and on crutches quite unable to put his foot to the floor to put any pressure on it. He was brought back again at night in a car and at the close of the service was assisted to the lower auditorium where he was prayed for. In a few minutes after prayer was made for him he rose and stood on both feet and to his surprise the pain and soreness had disappeared and he exclaimed "Look I am standing on my foot." He left the church without the aid of crutches or anyone assisting him.

Mrs. Wood said that the next morning Hambidge had walked around the block without any pain and left for home feeling fine.

Evangelist Wilson said prayer would be offered again on Thursday night for the sick and afflicted, and the evening subject would be Divine healing, and on Friday night Mrs. Wilson would be preaching on the subject of "The League of Nations in the light of scripture."

These services are mainly given over to prophetic subjects and are attracting great interest.

WOMEN PRAISE STEVENS PROBE

PREFER MEN ON JOBS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17. (CP).—With the statement that "The Stevens investigation is bringing light where it is needed, and the sympathy of the people is aroused and demands knowledge regarding the life of our young wage-earners" Miss Eva T. McKivor, of Winnipeg, convenor of the commimttee on Trades and Professions, reported to the National Council of Women to-day.

A number of local councils had urged the employment of women factory inspectors, she reported.

Also it had been urged by some that men should be given the preference in cases where sometimes married women and girls were also applicants. She said that one of the Western local councils had urged the government to pass an act prohibiting the employment of young girls on a small salary plus commission.

Many reports from local councils were summarized in that presented by Mrs. J. S. Signam, of Toronto, convener of the Arts and Letters committee. Interest was being maintained in the various organizations in arts, crafts, music, Canadian literature, drama and childrens libraries. Council committees were reported as being more active in copoerating with co-ordinating local efforts.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17 (CP)—Criticism of motion picture films made in the United States was contained in the report of Cinema and Printed matter made to the National Council Women to-day by Mrs. J. S. Menzie, convenor of the commttee on this subject. Films made in the United States "not only display both good and bad elements in a marked degree," but also continued to dominate overwhelmingly the Canadian market, Mrs. Menzies reported.

"British films were more numerous and the quality better in 1933 than ever before," the report stated. "Eight British features of five reels or more were received and, in nearly every instance were popular when exhibited.

"In spite of increased interest and importations the British and Continental pictures do not amount to more than six per cent of the entire product received in Canada. In the addition to the comparatively small number of these films available there is the handicap of a long-established and keenly competitive organization for the advertisement and exhibition of American films.

"It would appear more useful and practical if women's organizations would refuse to accept the responsibility for the producer's conception of public entertainment and devote their energies to some definite effort to control its exhibition."

Third Offence Drunk In Charge Of Auto

Last night Elmer Liddell, of 603 Armour road, drove his automobile over the sidewalk and on to the lawn of a residence at London and Stewart streets. This morning he pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., to a charge of driving a car while in an intoxicated condition, and was remanded until to-morrow morning pending proof of two previous convictions of a similar nature being filed.

It is alleged that Liddell was sentenced to 10 days' imprisonment in December 1927 and to 30 days' imprisonment in August 1928, on convictions of driving an automobile while intoxicated. The accused admitted the two previous convictions, but the magistrate insisted on documentary proof before sentencing the accused on the present conviction.

Women Always Played Big Part In Development Of Mining Industry

VICTORIA, Oct. 17.— (C.P.) — Women have always played an important part in British Columbia mining, and are continuing to do so, not only as prospectors, but as financial backers of many properties.

In the famous old Caribou district, scene of the world stampede of the early sixties, Mrs. Janet Murphy has for a number of years operated extensive placer workings, and is regarded by mining men generally, as a most capable miner and efficient manager. It was in Carboo, also, that Miss Helen Olsen, matron of the Quesnel Hospital, made history when she flew supplies into the Cariboo when the thermometer was 64 below zero, to maintain men staking claims for her.

Away up in the Squaw Creek district, most remote corner of British Columbia, where the Yukon and Alaskan bondaries end at the panhandle of B.C., Mrs. J. Muncaster is deputy recorder, and is making good.

So it is in practically every mining section of the province, women are making good. In the rich Bridge River district a number of the most desirable locations are held by women, while scores of prospectors are being grub-staked by far-seeing and mine-minded feminine backers.

Hay, Mrs. A. Stevenson, Mrs. Claire Stuart, Mrs. C. E. Newman, and Miss Ida Wesley. Twenty-one tables of bridge were played and the prizes, which were drawn for during the tea hour by Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, went to Mrs. T. Pitchford and Mrs. H. Lucas. At the conclusion of the card games, tea was served at the home of Miss Ida Wesley, George street, where the guests were received by Miss Wesley and the regent of the Chapter, Mrs. T. W. H. Young. The ladies were ushered by Mrs. J. Fanning to the tea-room, where the convenors of the affair, Mrs. G. Melton and Mrs. W. H. Peryer, were in charge. Tea was poured during the first hour by Mrs. J. H. Touchburn. Miss M. Rogers was treasurer. The arrangements of the tea table and rooms was particularly effective and aroused much admiring comment. A yellow damask cloth draped the table, which was centered by a blue and gold floating bowl filled with yellow baby chrysanthemums, flanked by blue and gold candlesticks holding yellow tapers. Hanging suspended from the archway was a large bunch of red barberry and white waxed focust berries, and the same unusual Autumn berries decorated the rooms. The handsome Hudson Bay blanket for which tickets are being sold by the Chapter is to be on display in the C.D.S. Store next week and the draw will take place in December. BAD OFFENSIVE DEFEATS CONTRACT

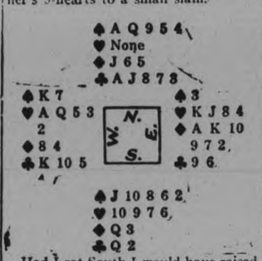
Judging from the description of the following hand and its play, North and South considered that their strategy defeated West's overambitious contract, but it seems to me that the declarer defeated himself. Here are the facts: Both sides are vulnerable, East and West attempt to fulfill a 5-heart contract after North has bid only 3-spades. Fortunately for the declaring side, East declined to raise his partner's 5-hearts to a small slam.



Had I sat South I would have raised my partner's bid to 4-spades, forcing opponents either to bid 5 or let us play the hand. As it turned out, West needed no such pushing to bid 5-odd, but that could not have been anticipated.

Being hard put for an opening lead, North led off his ace of clubs. When his partner had to play the 2, North shifted to his ace of spades. South signalled to "come-on," and another spade was led. Dummy's last club was discarded, and West was in with his K of spades. His first act was to allow dummy to ruff a low club. The report of the hand states that this ruff, with the 4 adverse trumps in one hand, ruined the declarer's chances to fulfill his contract, ending by finally having to give opponents a third trick.

The whole method of playing the hand was incorrect. Few players appear to consider the idea of making a long suit in dummy the centre of their strategy. Instead of trying to ruff clubs, the declarer should have devoted his energies to establishing the long diamond suit in dummy, upon which to discard all his own losers.

When West wins the third trick, have him take two rounds of diamonds. Both opponents must follow suit. The chances for adverse diamonds to be divided 3-2 are 68 in 100. Lead and ruff the third round of diamonds. If South ruffs, West will overruff. Whether or not South ruffs, the declarer must win his 5-odd. Take out all opposing trumps, of course winning the last round of hearts in dummy. On the 3 established diamonds, the declarer will discard his club losers, having more good diamonds than he has losing clubs.

Were I playing West's hand, the first thing I would do, when I had won my spade trick, would be to lay down my ace of hearts, to obtain knowledge of how adversely held trumps were divided, before touching diamonds.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Five hundred children die a year in the United States from accidental poisoning. This is a minimum statement, because many die without poisoning being suspected or reported when it has actually occurred.

And this figure does not include the many cases—accurately diagnosed or not—in which the outcome was not fatal.

All of these deaths were due to the same thing—allowing household preparations containing poisonous ingredients to be left where the child could put some into its mouth. These preparations range from cathartic pills to fireworks.

The commonest accidental poisoning in children is still caused by strychnine, found in cathartic pills with bright sugar-coated coverings. For some reason, obscure to any thoughtful physician today, someone long ago conceived the idea that strychnine and belladonna, put into a pill with a vegetable cathartic such as aloin, would strengthen, or enforce, its action (the belladonna was put in to ease cramps, which it does not do). These pills are generally called, A., B. & S. (aloin, belladonna and strychnine) pills, and are official in the National Formulary, the standard work on pharmaceutical formulæ. They contain 1-125 grains of strychnine, but if a child swallows a hundred of them, which often happens, because they are small and the taste sweet, there will be nearly a grain of strychnine in its body.

Some pills of this sort contain much more. I have already related that I was present in a household this summer when the two little pet dogs went into convulsions caused by the administration of two cahtartic pills with 1-60 grain of strychnine in each. The dose of 1-30 grain is the ordinary dose for an adult human, but in these little bodies it caused convulsions which lasted four or five hours. Both of the pets recovered.

To be actually on the ground at the working out of one of these accidents was an illuminating experience for me, and I thought of the horrors which must attend a similar occurrence when a little child was the victim.

The antidote to strychnine is sodium amytol, and if one insists on having strychnine pills around, it is well to have some of the antidote also.

Other poisons that children get hold of are arsenic and thallium in insect and roach powders; pyrethrum naphthalene and phenol in bed bug powders; cyanide, arsenic, phosphorus and thallium in rat poison; and phosphorus, mercury and arsenic in fireworks.

A strange form of poisoning in children results from swallowing gasoline or kerosene.

It happens when the gasoline is left in a glass within reach. The children evidently think it is water. In swallowing it they usually aspirate some into the lungs, causing pneumonia.

The answer is: Don't. Don't leave poisonous products around where children can get at them.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox.

The lure of the needle for artistic work is found today in stitchery which is simple, effective, and quickly accomplished. The choice but tedious work of bygone days has little appeal since this is an era of speed in all avenues. So quick stitchery is in tune with the times. Among the stitches which bring the best results, are those named today. These take little time to do because they are worked in a broad way, or in separated rows so spaced that the background is not entirely covered.

• • • • • • •

SATIN STITCH

A good example of this uncovered background is found in satin stitch so meticulously close when used for filling in. Now it is the fashion to leave spaces between rows, thus eliminating half the work at least and sometimes reducing it to one quarter. Fine effects are realized by this type of stitchery. Satin stitch is of two kinds plain and raised. The latter is a straight or slanting stitch taken over lines of padding. When the padding is omitted it is plain satin stitch, which is similar in effect to stem stitch (also called crewed stitch) which can be gain reduced to another name outline stitch. Satin stitches taken close together give a smooth satiny quality responsible for the name. Rows of these stitches, under any of the various names, are very speedily worked. When for filling in loosely, as described, it is wise to have the rows follow the contour of the motif being so worked.

• • • • • • •

NEW USES FOR BLANKET STITCH

Blanket stitch is nothing more or less than buttonhole stitch. On edges of blankets these stitches are deep and not close together. They can be used to outline broad motifs in embroidery, and for many other purposes never considered until recently. For example blanket stitch can be used to outline trunks of trees and fill in the surface of the trunk also. The rows can be horizontal or vertical.

• • • • • • •

DARNING WITH OUTLINES

Darning stitch is popular for filling in rapidly. Leaves on sprays of flowers can be so run, and when outline around edges and when veins are done in stem or outline stitches the work is little, and the result artistic. It should be borne in mind that darning requires outlined edges to be most effective.

• • • • • • •

FEATHERSTITCH FOLIAGE

Feather stitch can be used to simulate foliage of trees when details are not essential. There is a feathery appearance to such stitchery, as the name states, which is not unlike the appearance of certain foliage at a distance as on locust trees, cedars, etc.

Such attractive Christmas gifts can be made at such a little cost. Cushion covers, table scarfs and all sorts of articles can be quickly worked up and it isn't a bit too early to start making these gifts if you would have them ready for Santa Claus.

Weddings

PRETTY-BOYER.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—(C.P.)—The marriage was solemnized here today of Jeanne, daughter of Mr. Justice Boyer and Mrs. Boyer, to Dr. Gurth Pretty, Montreal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pretty, Peterborough, Ont., at the Archbishop's Palace, with Canon A. Harbour officiating.

The bride chose a wedding gown of white crepe, fashioned on medieval lines, with a train. A sheaf of white roses was selected for the bouquet.

The only attendant was Miss Therese, the bride's God-child, gowned in a frock of pale blue satin with a soft French blue velvet toque and jacket, and carrying a sheaf of Ophelia roses. Edward Hamilton was best man for the groom.

Mrs. Boyer, the bride's mother, wore a gown of black satin, having revers of blue crepe shot with silver, large black velour hat and a corsage bouquet of orchids.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's parents, where ferns and bronze autumn flowers were selected as decorations, the couple left for a honeymoon in Bermuda.

The bride's travelling costume was a navy blue tailored suit with a small felt hat of the same color, with Kolinsky furs.

GOOD PROGRAM BY X.L. CIRCLE

Thank Offering Meeting Held at Home of Mrs. Cecil Searles.

WILL PRESENT PAGEANT.

The Autumn Thankoffering meeting of the X.L. Mission Circle was held last night at the home of Mrs. Cecil Searles, Morrow street.

Miss Jean Hammond, the president, presided and carried out the business and opening service of worship along Thanksgiving lines. A little prayer of Thanksgiving "We Thank Thee" in the form of a poem, was read by Miss Nina Andrus, and was followed by a responsive service in song, reading and a story told by Muriel Moorhouse.

An interesting item of business was the invitation to the X.L. Circle to give their pageant, "The Gift Everlasting" at a Sunday night service in Springville United Church in November.

The reading contest is being emphasized in the Circle and several Missionary books were reported as being read. The books are in charge of Mrs. S. Turner and are kept in circulation monthly. Another appropriate poem entitled "Autumn" was read by Vera Davis.

Delightful music was furnished during the evening when Mrs. Percy Dallin rendered a piano solo and Miss Marion Ralston sang "We Thank Thee, Dear Lord."

In a comprehensive resume of the first chapter of this year's study "Eastern Women, To-day and To-morrow" Mrs. A. E. Moorhouse aroused the interest and enthusiasm of the girls. The book promises pleasant evenings of study during the coming winter if this first chapter is typical of the book. "The romance of social change in India" was made vivid by word pictures of yesterday and to-day in the Orient.

Mrs. E. Kitney and Miss Jennie Smart formed a very capable refreshment committee and were assisted by Misses Ralston, Margaret Smart and Mrs. Searles in this service. A jolly candy contest arranged by Mrs. Searles, was enjoyed, Misses Gladys Langton and Jean Hammond carrying away the prizes.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Searles for her kindly hospitality and to the social committee was tendered on behalf of the Circle, by Mrs. A. Rosborough, seconded by Connie Wagar and endorsed by all present.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Rose, Morrow street.

Mission Societies Hold Joint Meeting

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's United Church were joined in their autumn thankoffering meeting by the various missionary societies of the church which included the Elizabeth Bell Auxiliary, the Alpha Mission Circle, the C.G.I.T., and the Mission Band. The meeting, which was held on Tuesday evening in the Sunday School hall, was presided over by Mrs. B. L. Barns, the president of the W.M.S.

Miss Eleanor Stacey read the Scripture lesson, which was followed by prayers by Mrs. Porteous, Mrs. B. McClennan and Miss Margaret Cameron, while the dedicatory prayer for the offering was made by Miss F. Dixon. Miss B. King, who has charge of the Mission Band, led the class in the singing of the chorus, "Sowing."

The special speaker for the evening was Dr. C. V. McLean, M.A., Ph.D., who took for his subject, "The Progress of Missionary Work Around the World." Dr. McLean touched briefly upon the work of the missionaries in Trinidad Island, Japan, Koreo, China, India and West Africa. He pointed out the fact that during the past eight years there had been a considerable reduction in the number of missionaries causing extra work for those who remain in the mission fields. However, he hoped that in the near future it would be possible to add to these numbers and that they would be increased to a good extent.

The meeting was closed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction.

INSIDE THE PADDOCK

BY ART MURRAY

JACK DEMPSEY, the former heavyweight champion has re-entered the racing game having gone into partnership with Willard Mack and purchased a stable and their silks will be prominent this winter at California tracks. Socialite the bad actor who cut up so badly at Dufferin on opening day, has been ordered placed on the schooling list and will not be allowed to start again until he shows better manners at the post.

Yellow Metal is not far from a winning effort and before they hang up the curtains at the present Dufferin meeting, we look for him to be returned a winner. He will be sent back to his owners farm and given a complete rest. Did you notice where our old friend Butter Beans done the trick the other day at Narragansett and paid $23.40 for a deuce. Fred Almy is down at Laurel and is ready for the question. This one can sprint with the best company. Rego is another at the same place that will win at a huge price one of these fine days.

AQUA CALIENTE is not going to operate this fall but is keeping the plant in condition with a view to holding a meeting next summer. There will be three tracks operating in California this winter and the Mexican course think this would be too much opposition to cope with.

Dufferin is sure crashing the headlines these days with nice juicy prices. On Monday the daily double amounted to over seven hundred smackers for a two dollar ticket. Six lucky individuals cashed these precious pasteboards and their winter fuel problems are already solved. Wedding Ring has now won two straight races, his last win being on Monday when he went to the front at the rise of the barrier and was never headed winning easily by a length and a half. As we told you some time ago this one is about as consistent a plater as we have in Canada at the present time. Jockey Jelley who received the broken ribs in the big spill on opening day was around the track on Monday in civilian clothes.

THE SMALLMAN Stable have Feudal Lord and Chortle down at Narragansett and as both have had an opener we may see each of them win their next time out. Jim Badame has Lady Marnock as well as Khorasan down there also and this pair will be heard from in a big way one of these days. Early last Saturday morning this track was visited by an immense snowstorm, but by race time it had all melted leaving the place a sea of mud. Snow will not bother the Canadian horses down there as they are more or less used to it.

FRATERNITY MEMBERS BANNED FROM SPORT FOR YEAR PERIOD UNDER RULING OF ALMA MATER

Five Players Affected Will Not Be Able to Play in Coming Intercollegiate Games—Twenty-four Medical Students Found Guilty at Queen's.

KINGSTON, October 17.—Twenty-four medical students at Queen's University were found guilty last night of membership in an international fraternity by the Supreme Court of the Alma Mater Society, and were sentenced to a denial of all student, social, political, and athletic rights for not less than one academic year.

Chief Justice M. Leishman consulted less than ten minutes with his junior Justice before arriving at a verdict.

Five members of the Queen's senior football team cannot take part in the coming games as a result of the ruling. The five are: "How" Hamlin, Fred Earle, Colin Dafoe, "Red" McNichol, and "Tilly" Glass. McNichol is out for the season in any case, as he has been in hospital with scarlet fever for some weeks.

A Painful Duty.

"We find these men guilty and they must suffer all the penalties," said Leishman. "It is my painful duty to announce that the students charged shall lose the right to participate in student political, social and athletic life for not less than one academic year."

The decision was greeted with mixed feelings by the 700 or 800 students who had gathered in the gymnasium, scene of the trial. Seats in the form of bleachers occupied about half the floor space and were filled.

None of the students charged was present when judgment was handed down. They had all left the court when their request for adjournment until Thursday night had been refused. The plea for adjournment was based on the grounds that the students had been summoned only the day before, and had not sufficient time to prepare their defene.

J. C. Finlay, who acted as defence counsel, and who was one of the members summoned, admitted that he had sought legal advice and was told that the alleged offenders were entitled to an adjournment. "We know this was brewing four weeks ago," he admitted, "but we could not prepare an adequate defence until we knew the exact wording of the charge."

Bobby Murray Will Lead McGill Team

Four other colleges have entered the event, which will last three days. Entries have been received from University of Toronto, Queen's University, Kingston, Ont.; Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., and the Universite de Montreal.

PERTH, Australia. — When the Duke of Gloucester son of the King and honor guest at a ball in the Government House, went from the ball room to the supper room, the doorkeeper solemnly handed him a passout check.

The Duke smilingly pocketed it, presumably as a souvenir of his first contact with the great Australian Democratic.

Owen Sound Greys May Quit Hockey

OWEN SOUND, Oct. 17.—(C. P.)—Owen Sound Greys, once rulers of junior hockey in the Dominion, may not appear this season, because of finances. Greys have suffered financial reverses during the last few years, and may not be able to form a squad this year.

Owen Sound looks to Olympics to make a name for themselves in intermediate Ontario Hockey Association company. There is a possibility a junior club may appear.

DEAN FOLLOWS CARL HUBBELL AS MOUND ACE

Baseball Writers Almost Unanimous in Voting Dizzy National League Award.

WANER IS RUNNER-UP.

CHICAGO, October 17 (A.P.). — And still they call him "Dizzy." He's the most valuable player in the National League.

He's the idol of St. Louis, the talk of the baseball world.

He's making thousands of dollars for himself, cashing in on his fame.

He was christened Herome Herman Dean. They called him Jerome when he was picking cotton for less than a dollar a day, but when he began to skyrocket across the baseball horizon they started calling him "Dizzy."

A few million hard-working people wouldn't mind being called "Dizzy" if they could duplicate some of his deeds or pocket half of his cash.

The "most valuable player" award of the National League is the latest honor to fall to the pitching sensation of the championship St. Louis Cardinals. The Dizzy one came within two points of a perfect score in the selection by a committee of eight representing the Baseball Writers' Association of America, which votes the honorary award each year, getting 78 votes out of a possible 80, his margin was 29 points over Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder, who finished second with 50 points. Joe Moore of the Giants was third with 42, and Travis Jackson, New York, next with 39.

Dizzy succeeds Carl Hubbell, ace of the Giants' pitching staff, who obtained only 16 votes. Other leaders were: Melvin Ott, Giants, 37; James Collins, St. Louis, 32; Bill Terry, Giants, 30; Curt Davis, Philadelphia, 16; Paul Dean, St. Louis, 16; and Hal Schumacher, New York, 16. Twenty-five players received votes in the balloting.

CURLERS AGREE ON FURTHER CHANGES IN TANKARD PLAY

Double Rinks to be Used in Preliminaries—Singles in Finals.

ANNUAL MEETING.

TORONTO, October 17. — Ontario Curling Association, in annual session at the Victoria Club here yesterday with thirty-two clubs represented, made another departure in the arrangements for the Ontario Tankard and Governor-General's Cup competitions.

It will be remembered that these events were conducted last year as single-rink affairs after previously being played as double-rink competitions for many, many seasons. This innovation did not meet with the approval of all the curlers, so a compromise was effected yesterday by which two rinks from each club will be used in the preliminary games of the groups and single rinks in the finals. Also, the finals will be played in connection with the Ontario Bonspiel (formerly the Toronto Bonspiel), which will be held here in February. This means that the curlers can kill two birds with one stone, so to speak. As many of the Tankard and District Cup rinks came to Toronto for the bonspiel in any case, the one trip will serve.

Shorter Games in Finals.

Other stipulations decided upon for the finals of these events include the use of neutral stones. In the preliminary games, sixteen ends will be played, but the finals provide for only twelve ends. It will also be permissable, if the club concerned so desires, for the two rinks to take part in the finals, but each will have to play separately.

Owing to the illness of President Harvey J. Sims of Kitchener, Vice-President F. J. Lucas of the Toronto High Park Club occupied the chair. Mr. Lucas was later elected to the presidency by acclamation, as were the other officers for the 1934-35 season.

SMYTHE PLENTY WORRIED OVER SALARY "BEEFS"

Paul Thompson Refuses Figure Offered Him By Chicago Hawks.

STAYS IN CALGARY.

Flat Walsh May Pilot Windsor Entry in International League.

(By The Canadian Press)

Holdout trouble is piling on the shoulders of Clem Loughlin, Chicago Black Hawks' new manager. Following a breach with Lorne Chabot over salary the world champions' pilots finds Paul Thompson is balking at the figure offered him.

Thompson, one of the main reasons Hawks got where they did last season, is still in Calgary and intends staying there until he receives a better offer.

Conny Smythe, too, is having his worries over contracts. He has come to terms with three of last year's regulars, Buzz Boll, Happy Day and Frank Clancy and four youngsters—Red Metz, Reg. Hamilton, Bill Hollett, Pep Kelly and Art Jackson.

The Toronto Maple Leaf manager is reported to have slashed the salaries of several of his big stars and they don't like it. All, however, are expected to start training at Galt, Ont., to-morrow and wrangle with Smythe between setting up exercises and practice skates.

Flat Walsh, who used to tend goal for Montreal Maroons and managed Quebec Beavers last year, may pilot the Windsor entry in the International Hockey League. Bulldogs are reported to be after his contract and it is probable he will coach the complete team Maroons intend farming out to Windsor.

Harold Starr, the Ottawan who played most of last Winter with the border team, will be sent there again with another defenceman and three forwards.

Dave Kerr and Alex Connell, if he is permitted to leave his position in Ottawa, will battle it out for the goalie's job with Maroons and the loser will be sent down the river to Windsor.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

The real meaning of consistency in golf seems to be the subject of much doubt.

Certainly there is little doubt as to the rareness of consistency in performance. Yet any number of golfers believe they are really consistent performers.

They always picture themselves going 'round in figures close to their best scores, and when they shoot many strokes above their expectations they dismiss the upset by calling it an "off day." As a matter of fact, their good scores were "luck" scores.

If they stopped to analyze those good scores they would be amazed at the number of "breaks" that aided them in cutting off strokes. The really consistent players, like Sarazen and other first-flight pros, play golf that is mechanically and basically sound.

There is little chance to error in their swings. And the secret is trained muscles.

Terriers Will Start First Game To-Night

VANCOUVER, Oct. 17 (CP) — Orillia Terries, Canadian box lacrosse champions, step out to-night in the first of a five-game exhibition series with Vancouver St. Helen's, runners up to New Westminster Salmonbellies in the British Columbia championship race.

Billed as a five-game series, the battle between the champions and the Vancouver squad will end as soon as one of the teams have won three games. The second game will be played Saturday night, and the third October 23. The other two games, if necessary, have been set for October 25 and 27.

The games got off to a good start this week, and it is regrettable to note that some other teams desire entry after the games have started and the schedule all drawn up, but here's hoping they will take advantage of their notices next season.

Scores have been steady, but Regent Taxi took it in the neck with a 22-2 beating, whilst the lowly St. Luke's trimmed St. John's by a score of 20 to 1, and Silverwood's bowed to the Orange Hall to the tune of 19 to 1.

PERRY TO RETAIN AMATEUR STATUS

Will Not Turn Professional for Some Time to Come, if Ever.

(By Bob Cavagnaro)

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP)—When John Bull trots out his Davis Cup team for defense of the international tennis trophy next summer, Fred Perry still will be in England's line-up.

You can take that from no less an authority than Leighton Crawford, member of the British Cup selection committee, who returned recently from the Pacific Coast, where he talked with Perry.

Crawford scouted stories and suggestions that Perry plans to turn professional this year.

"I wouldn't say that Fred never will become a professional," Crawford said. "It is my opinion, however, that he won't join Vines and Tilden and the others for some time to come, if at all.

"Perry enjoys his popularity with his countrymen in England, and I dare say he wouldn't be very popular if he turned professional.

"He has England's lofty place in the tennis world in his heart, and you can bet that he'll be playing on the Davis Cup team next summer. It's funny how these rumors pop up from time to time."

Crawford went to the Pacific Coast as manager of a team of three English girls—Betty Nuthall, Katherine Stammers and Freda James.

Aside from being impressed with what he considered the promise of superiority of California net players over the rest of the world, he visualizes in Donald Budge, red-haired youngster, the makings of another Fred Perry.

Still Pedal-Pushing

Torchy Peden

Six-day bike racing season is in full swing again and the Vancouver redhead teamed with his diminutive partner, Audy, consequently hit sport page headlines once more. Favorite Enfield Wins Cesarewitch

NEWMARKET, England, Oct. 17 (C.P. Cable).—The favorite Enfield won the famous long-distance handicap, the Cesarewitch Stakes, from a high-class field this afternoon.

Enfield, backed down to even money just before the start, finished half a length in front of Shining Cloud, which started at 20 to 1. Penny a Liner, at 33 to 1, was the same distance back in third position.

Shining Cloud was second and Penny a Liner third in the field of 27 that raced over the two and a quarter mile route.

KING EDWARD IN TOP PLACE

Perfect Combination Counts as South-enders Take 6-0 Victory.

LEAD FROM START.

King Edward soccer team consolidated their position in the Public School League, yesterday afternoon at the expense of King George boys at King Edward Park, by registering six goals to nothing. Perfect combination beat the individual efforts of the losers.

Good Combination

With smart combination King Edward took an early lead when J. Mackness registered from a flag kick. After five minutes' play, their front rank hovered around the King George goal to make the count two when Murduff picked the far corner of the goal. The East City boys tried individual play that was easily checked by their opponents to permit their forwards to play combination upon the custodian who had to admit defeat by Mackness. Robinson, in goal, repeatedly held his charge in check but again submitted to defeat when Leggitt sent a long shot in below the bar. Half time, King Edward 4, King George 0.

The second period opened up with the South enders confining themselves to defensive tactics to hold the East city boys to mid-field. When an opportunity precented itself, King Edward instroduced the combination play to increase the count when Mackness-Murduff pair split the defense to beat the goalie. Near the finish, an Anderson-Nokes triangle movement accounted for the last counter. King Edward 6, King George 0.

King Edward—W. Ferguson, goal; H. Leggitt and B. Howden, full backs; W. Harvey, M. Grose and N. Tarkington, halves; N. Nokes, J. Mackness, C. Murduff, W. Anderson and R. Post, forwards; subs E. Jobe, S. Henwood and Campbell.

King George—D. Robinson, goal; R. Scriver and D. Eason, full backs; A. Cooper, G. Hawkes and G. Bocock, halves; D. Ralph, R. Ball, E. Partington, A. Northcott and F. Gandy, forwards; subs D. Delong and E. Eason.

Number 433.

Continually seeking phrases that will help to put over an idea, I've come upon one which has proven quite successful.

Simply telling a pupil that he must have as much weight on his heels as he has on his toes doesn't get over the idea of proper heel and toe balance. The pupil invariably leans forward, placing too much weight on his toes.

I tell my pupils to "sit down on their heels." This idea of sitting down on the heels seldom fails to get the weight where it should be.

Most golfers put too much weight on their toes and they don't realize it until they try swinging with a better distribution between heel and toe.

Try sitting down on your heels next time you swing.

Number 434.

Very often experts will pick up the ball before holing out. Sometimes they drive into the rough or a hazard and tell the caddy to pick it up.

The good player may have a reason for this. Certainly he doesn't do it because he can't play a recovery shot. While it isn't good practice, it doesn't do much harm in this case.

However, the less skilful player can hurt his game by dropping into such a habit. By failing to play out of hazards the day will come when he'll be afraid to try these shots. His fear of all obstacles will be multiplied and even his tee shots will suffer.

The best thing to do at all times is to take what comes and don't give up until your ball is in the cup.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball, Lacrosse, Soccer Softball, Bowling, etc.

By E.A.O.

While somewhat remotely situated from the far-flung battle-front of American gridiron wars, still Canadians do take a dispassionate interest in the big games over there and read through the colorful stories of upsets and the crowning of new heroes. One of the never-neglected duties of sport scribes in the States appears to be the making of selections for the mythical All-American football team. Even the editors of weeklies away off in the sticks relieve the tedium of long Autumn evenings by joining in this national pastime of picking their favorites from the crop of football stars. Then why shouldn't a Canadian daily take a hand in this intriguing sport.

• • • • • • •

This column is quite willing to nominate its own all-American team even though the season has still several months to run. It is very improbable that any of the names mentioned here will be dislodged when the final roll is called for the all-American. Pittsburg has two great players for the team in Oeljniczak and Wojcihonvski. Then Carnegie Tech weighs in with Chyczewski and Trbevich. And it is even related in this connection that the retirement of Wally Steffen, coach at Carnegie, was brought about by his necessity of having to call Chyzewski and Trbevich to practice.

• • • • • • •

That Dartmouth lad Geniawicz can not be left of our all-American, although at the present moment he is having a tough fight to displace Yarschinsky, of Muhlenberg, and Prybyla, of Rhode Island. Scouts report that Fieramosca, of Wagner College, has all the qualifications of an all-American, and they also suggest the possibilities of S..vinske and Chevitski, of Dickinson U.

• • • • • • •

Grybowski, of Illinois, looks as though he might be a likely candidate for our all-American squad, and Lafayette University has a sure pair in Bialkowski and Jiadosz. Then at Buffalo College are two players, whom other selectors might overlook but who are sterling material for our all-American, Pelszynsk and Zuk. Then Washington States comes along with a pair, Zeboyovski and Iezzi.

• • • • • • •

Another outstanding thing about this team is that it is practically penalty proof. A judicious official may call one of the boys for an infraction of the rules, but he'll soon tire of calling many of them. But the team will have to work along without substitutes, because it would be asking too much of Alejniczak to go in and report that he, Oeljniczak, was going in for Pelczynski, especially in the official happened to ask, "Who"

• • • • • • •

But all kidding aside, if our Canadian rugby teams such as Ottawa, Montreal, Argos and Hamilton keep on importing American stars to play our Canadian game, the sports scribe may be picking all-American Canadian teams.

• • • • • • •

It will be "Peterborough Day" at Belleville on Saturday when both the local intermediate squad and P.C.I. senior team invade the Quinte City to do battle on the gridiron. And both squads know the necessity of securing victory and will make the trip fully primed to give their best.

• • • • • • •

The intermediates had a full practice last evening and began to learn a series of new plays to spring on the Quinte huskies. Several players are recovering nicely from minor injuries gain in last Saturday's fray. Jack Hope's knee received a bad blow and was badly swollen during the last half of the game, but by the use of heat treatment it is expected that he will have the full use of his leg by Saturday and will be able to continue doing the team's kicking. Jack Kirkwood, who suffered a blackeye in the tussle, is able again to see daylight through the injured optic. The rest of the squad are in fine fettle and are confident that they can cop a win. Last night's drill was one of the most profitable the team has had all season and new precision was injected into the plays. Friday evening the squad will attend the Supper Club luncheon at the "Y" and then receive a chalk talk to prepare them for Saturday's combat.

• • • • • • •

No opportunities have been missed by Coach Bamforth's Garnet and Grey squad to improve their play. In practise special attention is being paid to the forward pass in order to perfect the squad in the use of this spectacular offensive play.

Manager Bill Terry Denies Report That Carl Hubbell is to Be Traded

York Giants, deposed from the seats of the baseball mighty this year, will undergo a shakeup before the 1935 campaign rolls around, but there is no reason to expect the talented southpaw, Carl Hubbell, will be traded in the process of club alterations.

From his home in Memphis yesterday, Manager Bill Terry added his denial to the somewhat indignant reaction at Giants' headquarters here over the circulation of reports that Hubbell would be offered to the world champion Cardinals for one of the Dean brothers.

So far as this particular piece of gossip is concerned, the Cardinals are no more anxious or willing to part with either Dean than the Giants are to let go of Hubbell, hero of the 1933 season and winner of twenty-one games this year, despite a poor finish.

The only foundation for the Hubbell yarn is a story that has been going the rounds since the collapse of the Giants. According to this tale, Terry had harsh words with Hubbell and blamed the southpaw for several critical defeats, to which Carl retorted he had been overworked earlier in the season and unable to perform at his best in the last drive.

The belief is that Dick Bartell, captain and shortstop of the Phillies, will come to the Giants during the winter in exchange for Blondy Ryan, George Watkins and a pitcher. Some baseball writers think this deal is all set but the signing.

BOARD REFUSES TO PAY FOR PLAYERS' INJURIES

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 17 (CP) — A $40 bill for treatment of an injured member of the collegiate football team has been returned to the hospital by the Windsor-Walkerville Vocational School Board which refused to accept responsibility for the players injuries.

Pointing out that as long as the school participates in sport, accidents will result, Trustee Hart suggested the school should insure itself against these mishaps. Trustee Desmarias countered this by stating such a policy was too expensive because it involved taking out policies for each individual player.

WESTEND SQUAD 4 TO 0 WINNERS

Robson is Successful Scorer as Queen Mary Defeats Queen Alex. 4-0.

REGULARS MISSING.

Without the aid of two of their regular players, Staunton and Kingston on the defense, Queen Alex had to admit a four-goal-to-nothing defeat from the ever-improving Queen Mary eleven at Nicholls Oval, yesterday afternoon, in the Public School Soccer League.

Exchanges Even

The spin of the coin fell in favor of the Queen Alex boys who made raids upon Neiman's charge to test out his ability in goal. Thereafter, Queen Mary confined the play to their opponents' goal where the full backs blocked their progress by clever kicking and clearances. Time and again, Queen Mary had a goal at their mercy but over-anxiousness to score spoiled their efforts. In fact, Mortimer travelled inside the defense often to miss the upright by inches, while Robson dribbled his way towards goal to find the full backs nipping the ball away from his foot at the crucial moment. Morrow and Parnell broke through occasionally to test Neiman in goal who cleared easily upfield. Half time—Queen Mary, 0, Queen Alex 0.

Defense Fell Away

On resuming, Queen Mary concentrated in swinging the ball from wing to wing to open up the opposing defense that left an opening for Robson who travelled down the wing, outwitting the halves, until Queen Alex. goalie saved his parting shot but not sufficient to prevent the Queen Mary player touching the ball into goal. A little later, he repeated the same performance by banging a low grounder into the corner of the upright. Encouraged by their success, the Westenders bombarded Brown's charge until Merritt drove a terrific drive against the full-back player to divert the ball past the custodian. In the last minute of the tussle, Robinson carried the ball right through the opposition to give the custodian no chance to save. Queen Mary 4, Queen Alex 0.

Queen Alex.—K. Brown, goal; M. Johnstone and J. Parnell, full backs; R. Pink, M. Pakenham and J. Elliott, halves; H. Morrow, B. Beebee, R. Parnell, J. Parnell and G. Dundas, forwards.

Queen Mary—A Neiman, goal; R. Crary and S. Botnick, full becks; E. Routley, J. Robson and . Keller, halves; B. Hamilton, J. Merritt, D. Mortimer, J. McGregor and C. Nicholls, forwards.

BANDITS RELEASED 3 MISSIONARIES

$140,000 Was Demanded, But Mission Refused to Pay Any Money.

CHANGTEH, Honan Province, China, Oct. 17 (A.P.).—A group of foreign missionaries, including a former Canadian girl, captured by bandits a week ago, arrived here to-day from Eastern and Northern Kweichow Province.

Miss Grace Emblen, a British subject, who once lived in Winnipeg, another Briton and a Swiss missionary had been held for 500,000 Mexican dollars ransom money (around $140,000). It was not immediately apparent how their release had been effected.

The China Inland Mission, to which they belonged, had announced the money would not be paid. Wives of the two men who were taken captive with Miss Emblen had been allowed to return to Kweichow, when all had gone to attend a meeting.

PLANE OFFICIALS REFUSE PASSAGE FOR VERMILYEA

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17 (C.P.).—When an airline refused to transport a handcuffed prisoner, the return of Harold W. Vermilyea to Belleville, Ont., to face charges arising from the axe-murder of his aged mother, was delayed yesterday.

Refusal of the Transcontinental-Western air line to accept a manacled prisoner was based on a company policy designed to avoid creating uneasiness among other passengers, aviation officials explained.

Inspector H. K. Gardiner of the Ontario Provincial police said he would delay Vermilyea's return pending advice from Canada on whether to leave by plane with the Ontario, Calif., fruit packer unmanacled or go by boat, as he originally had planned.

Vermilyea was arrested at his Ontario, Calif., home 36 hours after his mother, Mrs. Nathaniel Vermilyea, was slain near Belleville, Oct. 4.

School rugby, which each year holds up the Church Basketball League, is again holding up that league. At last night's executive meeting at the Y.M.C.A. it was decided to hold the league open until Friday, Oct. 19, when the league executive meets again at the Y.M.C.A.

Three Juvenile games were scheduled for this Saturday to start the league. St. John's Juveniles are drawn to meet Knox at 6 p.m., Trinity and Murray Street clash at 6.35, while last year's Juvenile finalists, St. Andrew's and George Street, renew their argument at 7.20 p.m.

* * *

The Church Basketball League is sure of a banner year, with a possibility of 15 teams, which would be better than any of the three years since organization. In the Junior section six teams have entered: Murray Street (last year's champs), George Street (1933-34 finalists), Trinity, and three new teams: St. Paul's, who look about the best on paper; a smart St. James' team, and St. Andrew's. Park Street and St. John's have asked for a little time to decide on this section. This group will be held back, so as not to interfere in any way with school rugoy.

* * *

The Juvenile section will be much the same as last year, and looks like a toss up to pick a winner. The entrants in are St. Andrew's with all of last year's champion team except Allen, their defence stalwart; George Street, last year's runners up; St. John's, who were slated for the finals last year until accidents riddled their team; Knox; Trinity, who had the best defensive record last year; and Murray Street, a new entry in the Juvenile section. St. James' entry has not yet been positively confirmed, and St. Paul's are thinking it over.

* * *

If seven or less teams enter this section, a single schedule will be played; if eight or more teams are entered the section will be split. Knox, St. John's, Trinity, and Murray Street being in A division with the remaining teams being in B division. Each division will play a double schedule, with the first and second teams of each division being in the playoffs. The same play-off system that has proven so effective in church softball being used.

* * *

All the executive were present last night. J. C. McClenaghan (chairman), Harry Walsh, Nels Stanger, Walt Ward and Don Charlton (secretary - treasurer). This executive meets again Friday, Oct. 19th, at 7 p.m., when the final playing arrangements will be made.

* * *

The executive adopted the rule allowing Juvenile players to play one game in the Junior section without losing their Juvenile status. Another rule, that of allowing a player who had committed four fouls to remain on the floor, with the permission of the fouled team, has been rescinded.

* * *

Teams are reminded that their entries are past due, and these six team—Knox, St. John's, Trinity, Murray Street, George Street, and St. Andrew's—are reminded of their games Saturday night.

Return From Arctic

Cockburn McCallum, 17-year-old King's Scout of the 44th St. Margaret's Troop, Winnipeg, is about the happiest of the Dominion's 65,000 organized Boy Scouts. He has just completed a summer-long cruise awarded him as a "travelling scholarship" into the Eastern Arctic and Hudson Bay aboard the Hudson's Bay Company supply ship Nascopie. The steamer made about 25 calls and distributed supplies for 37 governments and trading posts in the Far North, covering approximately 12,000 thrilling miles during the voyage.

Attendance at greyhound races in England in the last six years totaled more than 90,000,000.

Hawaii will simplify its tax laws on the basis of a wider distribution of the burdens of taxation.

Trade between Hankow, China, and the United States is reviving.

England's Idea Of How Rugby Is Played

England plays rugby, but not the way Canada does. Football in the Old Land means soccer, and rugby is a much different sport from the more Americanized version seen on Canadian gridirons. Here is a struggle for the ball during a London England, Mercantile League match, with all players piled up in a good old-fashioned scrimmage. Note the shorts worn by the players and lack of football harness seen on Canadian players.

CHAPTER 6

When Lee had seen two of his men depart on their errand, he returned to the attic room to find Wilson irritably pacing the floor there and Miss Edwards near by.

"Look here, inspector," he demanded, "you certainly don't think anyone in the department did it, do you?"

Lee hesitated. He knew he was making the professor angry, but he didn't see how he could help it. Professors were a new kind of creature to him, he thought wearily, and he didn't know how to handle them. He prayed silently for Blade. But Blade was off on business of his own.

"Of course, professor," he began calmly, "I don't know much about colleges or teachers. But this is murder and sometimes when people get mad they commit murder. It seems to me," he concluded, pointedly "that college professors are just as apt to get mad as anybody else."

Wilson stopped his angry pacing. His scholarly face turned a pale rose and he looked a little astonished.

Lee went on. "Who do you think did it?"

"A tramp, I suppose, or a robber." Wilson shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know. But granting that we are as prone to murder as anyone else, no one of us had any reason to do it."

"The man himself was reason enough," Miss Edwards put in suddenly and frigidly. Lee looked at her sharply. Since he entered the room, she had not spoken except for her first sentence. If Lee had known it, she had been fighting a silent battle, her dislike for him warring with her hatred of Reeves. Reeves had lost.

Lee suggested they return to the seminar room.

"They say it's not kind to speak ill of the dead, but he'll do less harm dead than he did alive." Having started, Miss Edwards went on like an old-fashioned schooner under full sail. She'd tell this policeman a thing or two.

"The way he talked to that nice, quiet wife of his was criminal, officer, positively criminal. And his attitude toward the young women in his classes was unbelievable. More than once after they had finished a conference with him, they have come to my office and wept. He told them they wrote sentimental tosh. Why, some of those girls were my best students last year." Her voice was sharp and bitter.

"He had no soul, no appreciation of the finer things in life. Why just yesterday he quarreled with Mr. Jamieson here, who's been his best friend, and threatened—and said ——" Her voice faltered in confusion and died away. She looked about her hastily.

Ruth Turner was glaring at her. Jamieson had grown quite pale, but he never moved.

"And threatened ——" repeated the inspector sternly.

"I don't know," stammered Miss Edwards. "My—my door was closed and I didn't hear it all."

"Did you hear Jamieson threaten to kill Reeves?" He purposely twisted the two names. "Come now, Miss Edwards, tell me all you heard."

Her face cleared. "No," she said in relief, "I didn't. And after all, Reeves is the one who's dead, isn't he?" She smiled triumphantly at Ruth Turner.

"Pardon me, inspector," interrupted Wilson, clearing his throat in a worried manner. "Has anyone been sent to break the news to Mrs. Reeves? Poor child! She was very fond of her husband. I'm afraid Miss Edwards exaggerated a little his treatment of her. He was naturally a rather gruff man." He glanced apologetically at the older woman.

Lee caught a curious tingling in the air. Wilson's face was full of honest distress for the widow. But the other three had stiffened slightly at her name. Where did she fit into the story? He decided to find out for himself. The questioning here could wait till the others arrived.

"If you will just give me her address, professor, I'll run up now while we're waiting for Walker and Henderson."

Wilson hesitated a little. "I hope you won't think I'm interfering, but wouldn't someone she knows, some woman perhaps, be a better bearer of the news? It can't be a pleasant errand, but my wife, I feel sure, would be willing to relieve you."

"Don't worry about me. It won't be the first time I've had to do the job." Wilson was shocked, but Lee looked quite cheerful as he picked up the card on which the professor had written the address.

This was a swell murder investigation, he thought disgustedly as he went out. Some talk, some funny things going on and none of them meaning a thing. He stopped to light his pipe in the hall. First, somebody swipes the gun after the murder's discovered. Then the boys find that room on the third floor. (That room opened with one of those office keys and so must be in some way connected with one of the men who carried them. But how?) And finally this quarrel between Reeves and Jamieson with the wrong man making the threats. He shrugged and went on. Maybe when he saw the widow, they'd get moving somewhere.

Sergeant Brown stood on guard at the front door. "Leave the door to that room opened," Lee ordered pointing to the seminar room. "And stand near it where you can see the front door as well. Listen to what that bunch inside say. I don't want them making up any stories to tell me."

Sergeant Brown went inside, as Tim Blade came around from the rear of the building. "Oh, there you are, Tim," called Lee. "I'm going up to the street to see the widow. Want to come along?"

"Not especially," came the indifferent reply. "I just came from there."

SCHAEFER OUTPOINTED

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Oct. 16 (CP Cable)—Chuck Parker of Barnsley easily outpointed Paul Schaefer, welterweight champion of Canada, in a 12-round bout here. Although he was downed to a count of nine in the second round, Parker fought back well, using both hands with effective punishment.

Schaefer's performance was a bit wild. He missed frequently.

BADEN-POWELL OFF TO WORLD RALLIES

Chief Scout in Good Shape for Long Tour to Include Canada.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (C.P.).—Lord Baden-Powell, famous Chief Scout, who has arranged a world tour which will last nearly 10 months, including a visit to Canada next year, has quite recovered from his serious illness of some months ago. He will hold a series of inspections all over the world, and hopes to engender a feeling of comradeship among the boys of all nations.

"The Chief Scout is in very good health and is looking forward to the trip very much," Lady Baden-Powell told a reporter. "We shall sail from London October 27 in the Orama, and hope to be back about the end of July in time for the big Rover meet which will take place in Sweden early in August next year."

Lord and Lady Baden-Powell will be accompanied by their two daughters. Inspections of Boy Scouts and Girl Guides will be held at Gibraltar, Toulon, Port Said and Aden. It is also planned to attend a rally at Colombo, the Australian world jamboree, to which Scouts from nearly 40 nations have been invited, and the Australian Rover Scout meet. There will be rallies in various parts of Canada and Newfoundland.

EARLIEST CHURCH IS 130 YEARS OLD

First Anglican Cathedral Outside of British Isles Built in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Oct. 17 (C.P.)—With its history redolent of the earliest services of the Anglican church in Canada, the congregation of Holy Trinity Cathedral, of which Very Rev. Dean A. H. Crowfoot is now rector, recently celebrated the 130th anniversary of the consecration of the present edifice, Aug. 28, 1804. It was the first Anglican cathedral outside the British Isles.

Flags of the 69th Regiment of Foot, carried at Quatre Bras and in the Indian Mutiny, hang limply in war-worn tatters about the walls of the cathedral. Ragged-edged Bibles and religious books presented by various monarchs and princes of England lie about on shelves in the dust of the ages, mute remembrances of Quebec's colorful past.

Service in 1681.

The first Anglican services at Quebec after conquest by the British were held in the Recollets chapel, built in 1681. This building was destroyed by fire in 1769 after being used by Guy Carleton as his headquarters during the assault by Arnold and Montgomery in the American invasion of 1775. The site of this old chapel was chosen for the erection of the present cathedral in 1793 by Bishop Jacob Mountain with the permission of King George III.

An important item of historical interest within its aged walls is the famous golden cloth on the altar table. It was used at the coronation of George III and was donated by the monarch upon the consecration of the cathedral.

Copy of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields in London, one of the great Wren's finest architectural creations, Holy Trinity is not only a venerable bulwark of the Church of England, it is a storehouse of treasures and memorials. The walls are covered with memorial tablets to bishops, governors, generals, naval and military officers. Here, in the chancel, was buried the Duke of Richmond, 10th Governor-General of Old Canada, a veteran of Waterloo, whose wife gave the ball at Brussels immortalized by Byron.

Foursome Happy, Though Divorced

Chicago, Oct. 17. — Chicago's merriest "social foursome," it is now agreed, are the Strotzes and Butlers. Because they are "happily divorced."

Since their divorce they appear to like each other better than ever.

Maxine and Harold Strotz are half of the foursome: Maxine's sister Marjorie and Paul Butler are the other half.

Romance?

Now that Maxine has decided to to devote her time to fashion designing in New York, society is watching the Strotzes with wonderment as well as envy.

Does a husband in love with the woman who divorced him remain in Chicago when she goes to New York? Does real romance come with divorce?

Society will allow eventually, about the first question. About the second, society must keep on wondering.

Maxine and Harold had a cocktail party fifteen minutes after they were divorced. They are seen together at all the fashionable affairs. The orchids she wears, their friends say, come with his card attached. They seem so frightfully happy.

Small wonder that the smart set is envious, admiring, wondering.

Almost a Year

Then there are Maxine's younger sister, Marjorie, and Paul Butler, society's other happily divorced. They have had their decree almost a year now, months longer than the Strotzes. Polo matches, parties, yachting, you may see them together.

The Butlers and the Stratzes were society's clubbiest foursome before they scampered in and out of the title.

It is reversing the order of things. But society says they all seem so much happier now.

Women Hold Forth When Mayors Meet

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.—(C.P.) — Mayors of Ontario who came to Hamilton to discuss relief matters were subject to an eloquent demonstration of just what a problem relief is when they attempted to begin their sessions in the City Council Chamber.

Thirty women and children ensconsed themselves in the Council Chamber, claiming that some of their number had been evicted from their homes, and refused to move. The Mayors wanted to go ahead with their business, but the women were obdurate. Police were called, but stood looking about rather helpless. Mayor Wilton stormed but to no avail. Fifteen minutes ofter the sessions were supposed to have started, the women still held the fort.

Mayor Wilton gave the women just so long to vacate the Council Chamber, and then police were ordered to remove them. The officers did so, most of the introducers leaving peaceably, although one or two had to be lifted bodily.

'JUST ONE MORE LITTLE DRINK' IS DEATH OF 'CIGARETTE GIRL'

"Dresden Doll" Wife Becomes Angry When Husband Warns Against Drinking.

HER LAST HIGHBALL

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—"She wanted "just one more drink."

And she had it—but she never will have another.

Perhaps you will remember her, if you visited the fair this season. She was the delicately beautiful cigaret girl in the Streets of Paris—"like a Dresden doll," one artist called her. She was Dorothy McCall.

What you probably never knew before is that she was married. Her husband, Garland McCall, came home Monday after a three months absence. "Business."

Midnight Highball.

It was in their apartment that they celebrated the husband's homecoming. Another girl lived there, too, Irene Brantigan.

Midnight had passed when Dorothy came out of the kitchen carrying a highball. Her husband said:

"You've had enough, Dorothy—don't drink that."

She laughed and said:

"Just one more."

But he arose and took it from her. She saw him pour it into the kitchen sink.

2 Powerful Poisons.

Slowly she turned away and went to the bathroom. Her husband and Irene waited. They heard her scream and they ran to her.

Dorothy was writing on the floor. They took her to the Henrotin Hospital, but when they got there she was dead.

She had taken her "one more drink"—a mixture of two powerful poisons.

U. S. CONSUL DIES.

GIBRALTAR. — Richard L. Sprague, United States' consul at Gibraltar, a post which has been in his family for 102 years, died to-day. He was 62 years old.

Sprague suffered a sudden attack of diabetes early this month which necessitated an emergency operation.

Shortage of fodder in Germany is causing farmers to feed reeds growing beside lakes to their animals.

The top of the tunic and the jacket trimming is printed black and white surah.

Weddings

THORNDYKE—GRAY

A quiet wedding was celebrated at the Presbyterian Manse, Janetville, on Saturday, at 4 o'clock, when Miss Viola Agnes Gray, only daughter of Mr. Harvey Gray, Seventh Line, Manvers, became the bride of John Robert Keith Thorndyke, eldest son of Mrs. Alva Thorndyke, and the late Mr. Trondyke, of Bethany.

Rev. Victor Walker, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The young couple were attended by Miss Isobel Sisson, cousin of the bride, and Kenenth Thorndyke, brother of the groom.

The bride wore her travelling dress of New Blue Triple Sheer Crepe, with hat to match, with a brown coat and accompanying accessories. The young couple left immediately after the ceremany for a short wedding trip to the Eastern provinces, and on their return will reside on their farm near St. Mary's Church, Manvers.

Lakefield Couple 23 Years Married

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 17.—(Examiner Correspondence). — On Sunday, October 7, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Kingdon celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of their marriage at their home with their three sons, Melville, Robert and Arthur Kingdon, and two daughters, Mrs. George Graham (nee Leona Kingdon) and Miss Jean Kingdon. Three grandchildren, all less than a year old, made the occasion a very happy one for all, and during the afternoon the three were baptised by Rev. W. R. Archer.

Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon received the heartiest congratulations from a wide circle of friends, and it was hoped that the unbroken circle may gather at the silver wedding in two years time.

The Chautauqua returns again, October 27 to 31, with the following committee sponsoring the enterprise: H. R. Wagar, R. J. Webster, E. H. Northey, A. B. Burrows, Stephen Harrison, Rev. A. W. INSPECT ARENAS.

LINDSAY, Oct. 17. (By Examiner Correspondent). — Thomas Dure, who resides near Cannington, is in the Ross Hospital suffering from serious injuries which took place at that village. He had filled a tank with water in preparation for threshing, when the horses started to move before he had taken his position on the seat. He lost his balance and fell under the wheel of the wagon. His hip was broken, his spine fractured and also sustained other injuries.

Provincial Game Warden Windsor is showing no mercy to those who violate the game laws. Over the week-end he seized the guns of several hunters who were shooting out of season. Another man was arrested and fined $20 and costs for shooting deer out of season near Norland. His gun was also seized. A Toronto man also lost his gun when he was found with partridge in his possession, and two other residents of the Queen City lost their guns for discharging them on Sunday.

A committee of local citizens made inspection of skating arenas in the north country last week-end with view to obtaining information as to cost, accommodation, etc. The committee visited Bracebridge, Gravenhurst, Huntsville and other points. Every effort is being put forth locally in order to raise further funds for the erection of the local arena.

According to an announcement made by Wm. Newman, M.P.P. for Victoria and Haliburton, a program is being outlined by which it is hoped all the unemployed men in the riding would soon be back to work on the highways.

James Upton, a well known resident of Haliburton, was found dead by his wife on Tuesday. He was in his seventieth year.

Ellen Teatro, widow of the late John Teatro, town, dropped dead at her home after returning from services in St. Mary's church. She is survived by one daughter.

Archdeacon Warren Hastings Speaker

HASTINGS, Oct. 16. (By Examiner Correspondent). — St. George's Anglican Church was beautiful on Sunday, tastefully arranged with Autumn leaves, fruit, vegetables, grain and flowers, for the Harvest Home Thanksgiving service. A good congregation was present when the processional hymn "Come Ye Thankful People Come" opened the morning service, followed by the beautiful morning charts. Other hymns, specially chosen for the Thanksgiving service were "We plough the fields and scatter good seed on the ground" and "God, the Father whose Creation gives to flowers and fruits their birth." During the offertory the choir rendered that solemn chant "Te Deum".

Venerable Archdeacon Warren of Toronto was the speaker for the special Harvest Home service The rector, Rev. H. F. Battersby in introducing the speaker extended greetings from the congregation expressing his pleasure at seeing him restored to health.

In his opening remarks Archdeacon Warren recalled many events of former days spent in Hastings when Rev. J. E. Cooper, Rev. W. Burns and Rev. E. R. James were rectors and was also glad to be present on this occasion.

His theme of discussion was taken from the 17th chapter of St. John, verse 14. "I have given them Thy word; and the world hath hated them because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." These services remind us of our positions and responsibilities as members of the Church of God, that we are present to receive the benefit of the ministrations of the Church of God. When we think of the harvest that has been reaped in these times of perplexities and depressions we have a great deal to be thankful for. These should remind us of another harvest, a Spiritual one. By a parable he explained that no harvest can be reaped unless the seed is the right kind, carefully selected and prepared. It is exactly the same with the real harvest of Life which must be sown in good soil or there is no harvest of souls. The word of God in the New Testament is absolutely important. The seed is the word of God. You can't have a blessed life, a true human life, without the word of God.

The able discourse concluded with 'What is the Word of God?" Unless we search the word we don't know the word of God. God reveals Himself in man. We must open our hearts and mind to the influence of God; be recipient to Him; to know the word of God which will contemplate a new life. A true Christian should live a better life than a non-Christian. These wonderful words open out the mind, lead us to see there is a nobler life. Through them we will have an increased harvest with increased joy.

To Have The Best Cough Remedy, Mix It At Home

Quicker Relief. Big Saving! So Easy! No Cooking!

This famous recipe is used by millions of housewives, because there is no other way to obtain such a dependable, effective cough remedy. It's so simple to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a 16 oz. bottle and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of cough remedy, far superior to anything you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving quick, lasting relief. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Miniature Donnybrooks In Galt Strike Battle

GALT—A short-lived donnybrook occurred at Preston when workers of the Lashbrook Shoe Co., and strikers clashed in two separate free-for-alls, as a result of which S. C. Lashbrook, a member of the firm, has been charged by Cyril Leach, whose discharge provoked the strike, with assault. The strike entered its sixth week to-day. It is said S. C. Lashbrook tried to take a banner away from Leach and this was followed by a free-for-all. While police were breaking this up, workers and strikers beating tin pans, came to blows and this was broken up in short order too.

Youths On Same Train With Harold Vermilyea

KITCHENER.—Police here appear to credit the story of Austin Walsh and Vernon Kessig, two Waterloo youths, who believe they travelled from London to Chigago on the same train with Harold Vermilyea on October 5. District Inspector Jordan admitted to-day that he believes "there may be something in it," but from another source, it was learned that police place real credence in the Waterloo boys' report. Meanwhile, Inspector Jordan said that information he has received from Walsh and Kessig is being passed along to the Attorney General's Department.

Smith decided Bartak started the thing, however, when he pulled a chair away as his roommate was about to sit down so he assessed him $10 and costs or 10 days.

Janitor Inherits Nairn Castle And $1,500,000

MONTREAL, Oct. 18 (C.P.).—W. Hastings Davis is giving up his job as janitor of an uptown office building because he claims he has inherited $1,500,000 and Nairn Castle in Scotland.

To-day his wife announced to the world they had received a draft for $1,155,000, "but we think there is some mistake about it, so we sent it back; it should be for $1,500,000.

The Davises are moving to-day from their little home in the back of the office building where Mr. Davis has been a janitor for the past seven years. They are going to live with their daughter and son-in-law, who is a plumber.

Mrs. Davis said the matter had only been settled in the last three weeks.

"Mr. Davis cannot go over to see about it. The doctor told him it would be suicide if he did. He's had 16 operations, and not so long ago the doctor put a lamb's kidney in him. Mr. Davis is 58, and even a motor trip tires him out, so he cannot go over there."

She was not sure about the future of the castle, but she said they might sell it.

Asked what they intended to do with the money, Mrs. Davis replied she did not know. "Perhaps we shall buy a house, and there are a lot of people we've got to help."

The estate was claimed to be that of Davis' mother.

BROKERAGE FIRM ISSUED WARNING ON TECK HUGHES

Only Two Directors Are Thought to Have Sold Any Holdings.

SUSPICIOUS OF STOCK.

Broker's Statistician Issued Warning to Other Sub Offices.

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (CP)—There is no evidence "any director other than the two mentioned," sold any of his holdings in Teck-Hughes Gold Mines during the heavy selling wave about a month ago, J. M. Godfrey, Ontario Securities Commission, said to-day at his inquiry into charges announcement of the reduced dividend was withheld to permit short selling.

The Commissioner made the statement when Glyn Osler, K.C., counsel for the company, objected to the line of questioning of a witness by Commission counsel, J. T. Stirrett. Only Dr. Conrad Wettlaufer and William Worelily, both of Buffalo, who opposed a reduction in the dividend from 15 cents to 10, were shown to have sold any Teck-Hughes stock during the period the matter of dividend payment had been left undecided.

The Commissioner disagreed with Osler on his argument that the main point of the inquiry should be to determine responsibility for rumors regarding Teck-Hughes properties and policies which was believed responsible for the sudden wave of selling. Godfrey said, instead, he thought the important feature was "the kind of information to be given out by the company directors and the manner in which it is to be given out."

Report Sent Out

An "unbiased" report telling of the closing down of a shaft and a mill and predicting a reduction in dividends was sent out by B. W. Brooks, statistician for the brokerage firm of O'Hearn and Company. He said the information was based on reports from the broker's Kirkland Lake office and "rumors." He denied he had obtained information from directors or from company

STATES STUDY ROEBUCK PLAN

Laws to Prevent Ransom Payments Are Under Definite Official Consideration.

VERY NECESSARY.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (C.P.).—Suggestions of A. W. Roebuck, Ontario Attorney-General, that laws should be adopted to prevent ransom payments, are under serious consideration by Homer Cummings, United States Attorney-General.

Roebuck's proposal for such laws came at a time when the hunt was in full cry for trace of John Labatt, wealthy London, Ont., brewer, and his snatchers.

"The pay-no-ransom" idea was brought forward to-day in connection with the Stoll kidnapping case.

Replying to questions, Cummings said his department had considered proposals for laws to prevent ransom payments in kidnapping cases.

"So far in our practical recommendations we have formulated those thought immediately necessary," Cumming said. "That particular remedy is well worth thinking about. It is rather heroic and there is a great difference of opinion. There is also a practical problem that it would need the support of both state and federal law."

Cummings said he considered the Stoll case "solved," with only the problems of catching Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., and cleaning up details remaining.

PLAN TO BEAT BILLY FRASER AT BIG RALLY

Northumberland Conservatives Re-organize With New Slate of Officers.

STINSON SPEAKS.

Plans Made for Organizations of Women and Young Conservatives.

(By A Staff Reporter)

WARKWORTH, Oct. 18.—Oratory was rigorously but undesignedly discounted as the Conservatives of Northumberland at their annual meeting here yesterday afternoon set about repairing their political fences generally in preparation for the next federal elections, and specifically "to trim that man Fraser."

They elected William Goodfellow of Codrington, former reeve of Brighton Township, as president, succeeding R. J. Allan of Campbellford, and drafted plans for separate organizations of the women and the young Conservatives of the riding.

T. H. Stinson, K.C., M.P., came down from Lindsay for the meeting, but the stalwarts were so preoccupied with the broad details of re-organization, that the federal member for Victoria was dropped to the bottom of the program, and speaking late in the afternoon abridged his remarks to a brief ten minute speech in defense of the record of the Bennett administration.

Unanimous for Goodfellow

The election of Mr. Goodfellow for the presidency was unanimous. N. A. MacCol of Campbellford, and A. R. Willmott and O. F. Allison of Cobourg were proposed, but they requested that their names be withdrawn.

At the outset, Charlie Fowlds of Hastings moved that the retiring officers be retained as a body for the coming year, and A. J. Skeans of Cobourg seconded his motion, but an amendment by C. H. Davidson of Campbellford, seconded by Roy Willmott of Cobourg, secretary-treasurer of the riding association, urging that nominations be proceeded with in the ordinary way, was supported by an overwhelming majority. And that in-

POLICE TRACE ROBINSON CAR

Alleged Kidnapper of Mrs. Stoll Flees From Springfield.

AT ROOMING HOUSE.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Chief of Police George Abele said to-day a car bearing the Illinois and Indiana license plates belonging to Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., sought as the kidnapper of Mrs. Alice Stoll of Louisville, was located here to-day.

The automobile was located on a tip given by a woman, the Chief said.

A man who drove the car here and who answered the description of Robinson, Abele said, spent the night at a rooming-house here. The owner of the rooming house called the police, but the man fled before the officers arrived.

A card, bearing the name of Jerry Robson of South Bend, Ind., was found in the car, Chief Abele said.

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (CP)—Thirteen municipalities in Ontario have adopted the policy of giving cash relief in return for work from those on relief, it was announced to-day by Hon. David A. Croll, Minister of Public Welfare, inaugurating the government's policy of cash relief.

The following municipalities have adopted the policy: Galt, Teck Township, Deseronto, Welland, Belleville, Aylmer, Brockville, Nepean Township, North York Township, Hamilton, Sudbury, Woodstock, and Chatham. In addition to the regulations covering cash relief, Mr. Croll announced that municipalities under the cash relief scheme will be permitted to pay those who work under it the full amount they are entitled to earn at casual labor without deduction. Under existing unemployment relief regulations, the head of a family on relief is permitted to earn up to one-third of his family's food allowance in any month without deduction from their relief. MONTREAL MURDER.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18 (C.P.). — Sentence of 20 years in penitentiary was imposed to-day in court of King's bench on Giovanina Theolis, 71, who pleaded guilty to a manslaughter charge in connection with the killing of Nicola Sarao.

Mrs. Theolis was indicted for murder along with her daughter, who is the widow of Sarao, Leoni Gagliardi and Angelo Donofrio. The other three were tried separately and sentenced to be hanged. Mrs. Theolis' plea of guilty to the lesser charge was accepted by the Crown.

Delima Viau, 39, was sentenced to one year in jail and required to make a bond of $500 to keep the peace for two years, after being found guilty by a jury of manslaughter. Mrs. Viau was charged with murder after the death of Yvette Hamel, 15, as the result of an illegal operation. The jury found her guilty on the reduced charge.

On a charge of grievously assaulting his wife, George Schultz was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. He had been charged with attempted murder after his wife was stabbed in the chest with a hunting knife. The jury reduced the charge.

Sentences were meted out to-day as the session of the court came to an end.

Breath-taking Stunts.

Her husband had just finsihed a series of breath-taking stunts with her. Running forward to the footlights, he smiled acknowledgment of the applause that rose from the auditorium.

Mrs. De Phil rode the unicycle to the platform and alighted. Somehow she missed her footing. Even as the applause rolled up from behind the footlights, she fell. The sound of her body striking the stage echoed through the auditorium, which became suddenly hushed as though by a mammoth damper.

Six women fainted. Men gasped and paled. Charles De Phil, horror lighting the eyes that but an instant before had smiled happiness, ran to where his wife had fallen, half hidden by the wings.

Law Rescinded.

Up to 1932 an ordinance required that aerialists work above a life net. Acrobats complained of this law, saying the net took all the elements of danger from their acts, and that the public preferred that there be some risk. The ordinance was rescinded; and there was no net to catch Mary De Phil.

They rang the curtain down. Even as an ambulance was racing the woman, (her skull fractured, to a hospital, the curtain lifted. There were many vacant seats now in the auditorium. Scores of persons, sickened and saddened by what they had seen, had left.

But the curtain went up; and the show, as it must always go, went on

Women Are Not Greater Talkers Than Men National Council Is Most Business-like

OTTAWA, Oct. 18. —(CP)— Are women greater talkers than men? Is the general impression that they argue to the last word true?

This might have been true a few decades ago when it was generally accepted that women's place was solely in the home. But now that they have gone into public life this is no longer the case.

President's Address Short

Take the 41st annual meeting of the National Council of women (the "Women's parliament of Canada") now in session in this city. The presidential address of Miss A. Winifred Kydd, "the speech from the throne," occupied the time of four minutes and it was full of meat too.

Delegates reporting local council activities are allowed two minutes.

Movers of resolutions have five minutes to explain it—a seconder three minutes and those speaking to it two minutes each.

National conveners, warned long ahead, must only present a report 2,000 words long—and it must cover work done by local councils first, and only of there is space left is the convener allowed to record her own pet ideas.

Short Reports

Each federated society has been allotted a 200 word report.

And these rules of order are interpreted to the letter. A time keeper ruthlessly strikes a bell when the allotted time is reached and the speaker does not continue except by unanimous request.

PILOTS FORCED TO CUT GASOLINE FOR LONG FLIGHT

Restrictions on Weight Force Several Pilots Sacrifice Gasoline.

START SATURDAY.

Twenty Planes Will be Ready for England to Australia Flight.

(By Oscar Leiding)

MILDENHAM AIRDROME, England, Oct. 18 (AP)—Restrictions on weight forced some competitors in the England to Australia air race to make wholesale sacrifices to-day of gasoline capacity and other equipment.

Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborne, a favored American team, made drastic reductions, but after them Turner said his machine was ready for the take-off Saturday

His biggest loss was the sealing up of a 90-gallon fuel tank. A number of other changes had to be made.

Turner indicated a part of his overweight was caused by the fact that American gasoline is of a different specific gravity from English petrol, therefore upsetting his calculations somewhat.

Irish Plane Overweight

Other machines overweight included Col. James C. Fitzmaurice's "Irish Swoop." Officials said certificates and drawings supplied in advance by almost all foreign competitors differed widely from results secured in an examination of the machines by inspectors here.

Several pilots met with the inspectors to settle the question of weight, including Miss Jacqueline Cochrane of New York, "Mystery Woman" entrant. Other competitors helped officials in the hangars check up on lifebelts, maps, smoke signals, emergency rations and other devices to be taken on the long flight which starts Saturday.

Twenty Planes to Start

Over the trail which won knighthood for Sir Keith and Sir Ross Smith 15 years ago, 20 aircraft will set out in the world's longest Air Derby.

The Smith brothers took 28 days in 1919 over the 12,000-mile route, and won $50,000 in addition to honors from the King.

Sir Ross was killed in 1922 when his plane fell in a practice flight at Brooklands, England. Sir Keith, who was to have made the flight, arrived late, and was in the crowd which witnessed the tragedy. He is now living in Sydney, Australia.

The present record between England and Australia is six days, 17 hours and 56 minutes, set a year ago by Charles T. P. Ulm and three companions, G. U. Allen, P. G. Taylor and John Edwards.

Air Commodore Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith holds the solo record of seven days, four hours and 47 minutes, set in October last year, just before the Ulm flight.

The woman's solo record of 15 days, 23 hours and 25 minutes was set this year by Miss Jean Batten.

HEPBURN FIRM ON ROSS FIRING

Millionaire Publisher, Tory Partisan, Wants $1,000 Salary, Premier Says.

OTTAWA DEPUTATION.

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (C.P.)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario to-day declared P. D. Ross, proprietor of The Ottawa Journal, "is out" as government representative on the Ottawa Hydro Electric Commission, and "is going to stay out of the Hydro."

The Premier made the statement on learning a deputation was coming here from Ottawa to confer with him regarding the recent action of Chairman T. Stewart Lyon of the Hydro Commission in requesting Mr. Ross' resignation. The deputation is headed by Percy D. Wilson, defeated Liberal candidate in West Ottawa in the last Ontario election

"All the deputations from Ottawa can come down here, but they won't change my mind," the Premier said. "Mr. Ross is the most bitter Tory partisan I know in the Province of Ontario. He is one of the meanest in his editorial columns. Now he has the audacity and the temerity to expect to get money out of this government."

Mr. Ross, the Premier pointed out, was paid $1,000 a year for his services on the Ontario Hydro Commission.

"He is a millionaire and over 80 years of age—and he wants this $1,000 a year."

Egg Thief Is Busy In Windsor Area

WINDSOR, Oct. 18.—(C P)—Once again Windsor's egg thief has struck, the victim this time being D. J. Girard of Harrow who lost a case containing 20 dozen eggs from his truck. During the past month about 250 dozens have been reported stolen and police believe that one man is responsible for all the thefts.

PULP STRIKERS TO DISCIPLINE MEN IF DRUNK

Penalty of Picket Duty to be Imposed by Committee.

TO AVOID TROUBLE.

Camps Closed by Intimidation Merchant at Franz Reports.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 18 (C.P.).—Any man on strike here from the Abitibi Power and Paper Company's camps along the Algoma Central Railway line will be forced to do picket duty if he gets into trouble as a result of drunkenness, the strike committee announced to-day.

This action followed sentencing of two alleged strikers in police court on charges of drunkinness. The strike committee admitted one man possibly was a striker but denied any knowledge of the other.

No discussion has taken place in the committee in regard to applying to the Federal Department of Labor at Ottawa for a board of conciliation, the committee said, but it announced the receipt of a questionnaire from the department inquiring about wages and working hours of the men.

Regard Strike Success.

Complete success of the strike is claimed by the committee which states the only men left in the bush are those living in the camp shacks because they constitute a satisfactory residence.

Charge that "the pulp camps at Franz have been closed absolutely through intimidation," is contained in a letter received here by Dr. A. D. Roberts, M.L.A., from A. V. J. Selkirk, general merchant of Franz. Mr. Selkirk says, "I feel sure that nine out of every 10 men employed would be working to-day if allowed."

Workers Threatened

The letter charges that after being ordered by the strike committee to walk out, the men went back to work again at one camp and were waited on a second time "in force and threatened." Only four men out of the total of 36 in that particular camp were willing to strike, the letter claimed.

The men were badly in need of food, Mr. Selkirk said, and he urged the Government do something to assist them.

Armed Robbery Char Against Windsor Trio

WINDSOR, Oct. 18 (C.P.).—Ray Lauzon, 31, one of three men charged with the armed holdup of a branch plant here of the Silverwood Dairy Company, pleaded guilty in police court to-day.

The other men, Thomas Nichol, 30 and Joseph Donoghue, 28, pleaded not guilty and were remanded for a week. Lauzon, picked out by Gordon Appleby, cashier at the dairy, as the man who wielded the gun, will not be sentenced until the disposition of the cases of the other two. Some $15 in change was taken by the robbers.

Aged Man Sentenced To Reformatory Term

Joseph Doughty, 74-year-old Kinmount widower, was this morning sentenced by Judge Sheldon L. Smoke to one year definite and six months indefinite in Ontario Reformatory following conviction for a serious offence against his stepdaughter..

The accused appeared in County Judge's Criminal Court yesterday afternoon, and entered a plea of "guilty" to the charge. He was represented by E. F. Sheehy.

WARRIOR KING IS CARRIED TO RESTING PLACE

Mighty Massed Assemblage Pays Tribute to King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

PAGEANT OF SORROW.

Distinguished Representatives of All Nations of World Are Present.

BY CHARLES M. MEISTER

Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press

BELGRADE, Oct. 18. — The body of the murdered King Alexander was placed today near those of his ancestors in the royal memorial chapel in his native city of Topolo.

While 50 men bore the sarcophagus up a hill through tree-lined lanes to the chapel all activities throughout Yugoslavia remained at a standstill for two minutes as the common people paid tribute to their fallen king.

Then, as Alexander was laid in the tomb which he had only recently completed, church bells were tolled throughout the country. They mingled strangely with heavy guns on land and sea which roared out a mighty dirge.

Trumpeters sounded a farewell taps for the dead soldier-sovereign. "Mignon", as Alexander called his wife, Queen Marie, took leave of her royal consort and the doors of the tomb were closed.

Thousands Held Back

Thousands of mourners were held back by troops standing shoulder to shoulder as the funeral train passed from Belgrade to Topolo. Only children were allowed on the right side of route, enabling troops to supervised more efficiently the act of adults on the left.

Spectators were not allowed to carry canes or umbrellas, despite a drizzling rain. An atmosphere of terror prevailed, lest anarchists attempt to take the lives of the three kings in the funeral cortege—Little Peter II, son of Alexander, Carol of Rumania, his uncle and Boris of Bulgaria. Secret service agents made many arrests as they mingled among the crowd, seeking firearms and bombs.

A mighty massed assemblage fell on their knees on the cold bare pavement as if by one impulse as the flagdraped sarcophagus of the warrior king whose grandfather, Black George, was slain by Turks, passed through the main streets of the city.

In one voice they murmured a benediction upon their slain ruler.

Hostsof devout peasants who regarded Alexander as one sprung from their own humble blood stood with bowed heads holding crucifixes and lighted candles. Others carried olive branches and corn in the form of crosses, symbolizing resurrection and life.

International Pageant of Sorrow

It was a great national, indeed an international, pageant of sorrow for the king who was assassinated while offering the hand of friendship to France.

There were present not along Yugoslavia's grief-stricken legions but distinguished representatives of all the nations of the world.

As Alexander's body was carried from the National Cathedral to the gun carriage which conveyed it to the train for Topolo, the majestic strains of Chopin's funeral

BIG DEAL MADE TO WORK FIELDS STURGEON RIVER

$30,000 Paid in Cash, 1,000,000 Shares of Stock in New Company.

MACHINERY ON WAY.

At Least $500,000 is to be Spent on Mine-making Work.

Macdiarmid, Ont., Oct. 18 (CP)—Four fishing tugs lie against the jetty of this little Nipigon fishing hamlet to-day. Steam is up, the decks are laden with mining equipment and foodstuffs, and anxious eyes are scanning the horizon, waiting clearing weather.

Miniature blizzard developed last night. Clearing of the weather will be the signal to cast off and steam up the lake and into the mouth of the Sturgeon to unload cargoes at the first rapids above the estuary.

Big Deal Completed

This page from the drama of Canada's newest spectacular rush for goal has resulted from one of the largest development deals completed since the rush began. Last Saturday the group of prospectors who are partners in the Brennan-Kenty Prospecting Syndicate met a group of Toronto financiers by appointment and discussed terms and ways and means far into the night in Mrs. Violet Maxwell's stopping-off place in Macdiarmid.

At five a.m. Sunday the final papers were signed, involving the passing of $30,000 in cash and subsequent delivery of 1,000,000 shares in a company now being formed to develop the property. Further agreements guaranteeing a minimum of $500,000 for mine-making work were passed.

In Big Money Class

The eastbound train whistled as it crept through the tunnel which leads into MacDiarmid's station. The Brennan-Kenty partners ran to catch the cars back to Jellicoe and their work in various sections of the river region. That is the story of how the discovery known as the Kenty-Nipigon Sturgeon find passed into the big money class.

The tugs which lie at MacDiarmid's jetty are the immediate sequel to that midnight conference. As the prospectors returned to the bush others associated with the deal made for Port Arthur post-haste to order supplies and set the work of development in motion.

Two days later the first car-load of freight was shunted into MacDiarmid's fish siding and lorries slid down the narrow gauge to the fish pier all day—lorries laden with food, hand steel, dynamite and lumber for the camps up the Sturgeon estuary.

Mining Crew Assembled

A mining crew has been assembled and men, goods and tugs are now awaiting the lifting of Autumn's first blizzard to make haste across the lake and up the river. Winter is descending and the freeze-up may occur any day. Time is the essence of the contract.

Tugs must hasten into the river and return to MacDiarmid for in another day new carloads of materials destined for the Springer property in the same vicinity are expected on the siding. The Jellicoe section has settled down to the long pull and is ready for Winter because it is the senior section of the camp. But here at MacDiarmid, base headquarters for the western end of the field, everything is haste and bustle as Winter begins to descend and mining materials by the carload wait to be moved into the camps.

CHICAGO WHEAT

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Pronounced weakness developed in wheat values yesterday, with France underselling both Canada and Argentina abroad and with liberal rains reported in domestic wheat territory southwest.

It was reported France was offering wheat to Great Britain at rates lower even than Argentine corn. Trade advices said some of the driest areas of the United States winter wheat belt had been furnished moisture likely to be of benefit to crops.

Wheat closed unsteady at the lowest point reached, ⅞c to 1⅛c under Tuesday's finish, May, $1.00¼ to $1.00½; corn at ½c to ⅝c net decline, May, 79⅞c to 80c; oats, ¼c to ⅜c off, and provisions 2c to 15c up.

WINNIPEG WHEAT.

WINNIPEG, October 18. — Easiness in other grain markets and continued lack of demand for Canadian wheat again affected wheat futures prices on the Grain Exchange here yesterday. Dipping sharply near the finish, values closed ⅝c to 1c lower; October at 78½c, December 79⅝c, and May 83¾c to 83⅞c.

The closing downturn was the only feature in the dull session. Trading was quiet throughout. Weakness at Liverpool, where prices closed ⅝d to ¾d lower, and 1½c setbacks at Chicago were the chief factors in the decline. Export sales of what were negligible.

Higher grades of wheat continue in good demand in the cash grain market, with spreads closing fractionally higher. Coarse grain futures were dull.

MEMOIRS NIGHT HELD BY CHURCH

Delightful Program is Given St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora.

TWO FORMER PASTORS.

MARMORA, Oct. 18.— "Memoirs Night," in connection with the Diamond Jubilee of St. Andrew's United church was observed on Wednesday when a large sized audience occupied the auditorium of the church. The pastor, Rev. C. W. Hollingswodth, presided and following opening exercises, introduced two former pastors, Rev. W. H. Clarke, Shannonville, and Rev. W. P. Woodger, Cobourg, to the audience. Mrs. W. C. Spry then gave a humorous reading. H. W. Sabine followed with a report of the membership of Marmora Methodist church in the year of its erection, 1874, and other interesting matters incidental to the membership in succeeding years. He also briefly sketched local Methodism prior to 1874. Rev. W. H. Clarke spoke of the happy associations as pastor of the church, 1910-1916. Mrs. F. N. Marett gave an extended history of the church, after which E. C. Prenitc tegave a sketch of the business transactions at the time of the erection of the church. Rev. W. P. Woodger reviewed some of the principal events which occurred as he served the pastorate of the church. Mrs. W. C. Spry finished with a clever reading in which she suggested what the walls of the church would have said had they spoken of the line of ministers dating back to 1874. At the conclusion of a memorable evening, Rev. W. H. Clarke pronounced the benediction.

Farmer Finds Coons Had Treed His Dog

COBOURG, Oct. 18.—James Roberts, a Hamilton township farmer, while out on a rabbit hunt Tuesday, relates his experience with a family of racoons. His dog commenced barking very loudly, and, not appearing to be chasing anything, Roberts investigated and found that the dog had chased a family of coons into a hollow log, the entrance to their refuge was blocked up, and to-day five coons were captured, and are caged up in his barn, and later he will try to sell them or realize what he can for their valuable fur.

SECURITY IS WATCHWORD OF ROOSEVELT'S NEW DEAL

DETROIT, October 18 (A.P.).—The Rev. Fr. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower at Royal Oak, Mich., speaking here last night before a gathering of Michigan Democratic leaders, hailed the new deal as the beginning of a new social order which would erase, within a dozen years, partisan politics, and develop security for labor and capital.

"Security is the watchword of the new deal," he said. "We want security for the men who labor, the farmer, the investor, and the manufacturer.

"I thank God that I am on the side of the new deal, and I want to address my remarks to men of vision, not to defeatists."

WOMAN CHANGING MIND MAY SAVE MAN IN JAIL

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—(C.P.)—Once more, a woman has changed her mind—and this time it may get a man out of jail.

Miss Helen Jerke witnessed a hotel holdup and later identified Lloyd Mason as the robber "because his eyes wandered as he was the dead image of the man who came out of the hotel." On her information, Mason was incarcerated Sept. 16.

Tuesday police arrested another man accused of participating in several holdups. Miss Jerke viewed the suspect and decided that he, rather than Mason, was the hotel robber. Authorities said Mason probably would be released.

BUILT HIS WALLS WITHOUT STICKS

This Rockefeller Also Was Wealthy Through His Own Exertions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. —(CP)—Percy Rockefeller, a cousin of 'the' Rockefeller, was wealthy in his own right and owing to his own exertions. His country house in Greenwich was of great interest to architects, builders and real estate men when built in 1907. He died recently.

Overlooking the Sound near the estate of his father, the design for the house called for some 60 rooms and 10 baths, a tremendous number of baths in 1907. There was not a stick of wood in the walls, and between the inner and outer walls was a confined air space, forming a non-conductor of heat, cold and moisture.

Union Government Suggested By Stitt

SELKIRK, Man., Oct. 18.— (C.P.)—J. H. Stitt, fiery Conservative member of Parliament for the wide-flung constituency of Selkirk, today was in support of a Union Government for Canada, and he had suggestions for Cabinet members.

The Union Government should be formed, said Mr. Stitt in an address here last night, and its leaders should include Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader; J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation; Henry Bourasa, colorful Independent from Labelle, and Robert Gardiner, leader of the United Farmer of Alberta group in Parliament.

"I do not mean National Government of capitalists and vested interests," declared Mr. Stitt. "I mean a government of the people, for the people and by the people. If Premier Bennett made such a proposal and Mr. King refused, the Conservative party, with Progressives and Labor, could form a government, which would leave the Liberals on the rocks for reaction."

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises or are growing hard of hearing go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Compulsory Church Attendance Attacked By Undergraduates' Paper At Princeton

PRINCETON, N.J., Oct. 18 (CP)—The "Daily Princetonian," undergraduate newspaper, to-day vigorously attacked compulsory attendance at Sunday religious service at Princeton University, a lively topic at the seat of learning since 1800.

Conditions at the Sunday service are so bad, the paper charged, that a well meaning student feels "about as near the deity as if he were seated in the middle of the Carlsbad caverns."

Tic-tack-toe and other games, the reading newspapers and conversation constitute the more popular pastimes during chapel, it was charged in an editorial.

Chapel as it is now conducted at Princton, the editorial charged, is rapidly undermining what little actual religious faith exists on the campus. The editorial then complains of the "flaunting" by the administration and board of trustees of "the forced, hypocritical and disinterested attendance of approximately half the student body each Sunday as an outward symbol of Princeton's religious life."

INDIANS APPEAL DEATH SENTENCE

Attorney General of British Columbia Conducts Case for the Crown.

APPELLANTS HEARD.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP) — With the appellants' case concluded, the Crown to-day presented arguments before the Appeal Court here to have the death sentence on Richardson, Aeneas, and Alex George for the slaying of Constable F. H. Gisborne sustained.

Appearing at the opening of the Crown's case yesterday, Hon. Gordon Sloan, Attorney-General for British Columbia, maintained the conduct of Constable Gisborne and Constable Percy Carr, slain at the same time, was proper.

Fourth Brother Arrested

The two officers were slain near the Canford Reserve, Merritt, May 23, when they went to arrest Eneas George on a charge of stabbing his wife. Eneas and his brothers, Richardson and Alex, were convicted and sentenced to hang October 26. A fourth brother Joseph, is scheduled to appear later this month to face the same murder charge.

Attorney-General Sloan paid a tribute to Constable Carr, and defended Gisborne's action in drawing a gun when attacked. "Do you think they were playing tag?" he retorted, after Mr. Justice A. E. McPhillips declared the officers should have "met force with force."

"But the law is that you are not justified in using more force than the force against you," replied his Lordship.

"I would be very sorry to hear any court in the Empire say that a policeman under these circumstances would not be justified in shooting," Mr. Sloan said.

TRAGEDY OF A TWISTED BRAIN! BOY'S PLOT; THE 'BLACK CROSS'

Chicago High School Youth Bungles Job in $1,000 Extortion Attempt.

"BARGAINS IN KILLINGS"

CHICAGO, Oct. 18. "Brains—brilliant, but gone wrong, twisted and misapplied to the purposes of crime. A moral tragedy—at seventeen. It is—a pity."

Assistant State's Attorney John S. Boyle thus summed up the amazing case of Nick Kerril, graduate of the Tilden Technical High School, held for attempted extortion. The boy has confessed.

Strange confession! There is childishness in it, and an almost mature cunning.

Sinister

The lad tried to get $1,000 from his former employer, Nathan Stone. He threatened death. And to make it sound sinister, he pretended to be the spokesman for "The International Knights of the Black Cross." When he confessed he said:

"Shucks! I just made up that name—so Stone would think there was a gang."

Nick was arrested when he went to collect the $1,000. The spot was in Gage Park, near Western avenue and Fifty-fourth streeet. He had "instructed" that the money was to be "tossed into a bush."

Midnight

It was just after midnight, Stone had a dummy package. Police were watching. They had little doubt as to who had written the extortion notes. For Stone had told them:

"Look. I know the boy because I know his writing and how he draws. He sends me this map, showing where the money is to be placed. It is a perfect map, drawn to scale, showing every landmark along the way—every light post. I'll show you some more of his work. There couldn't be a doubt."

The boy fled as the police approached the spot. A shot fired over his head persuaded him to stop. He said:

"I bungled it."

The prosecutor asked him why he wanted $1,000 and he replied:

'Oh, just to buy some good clothes—and live in a good boarding house."

Bargains!

Police think it is a good thing for the boy that he did "bungle". It is easier to live down a failure than a success in crime. They hope his character still may be saved.

They found cards "advertising" the "Black Cross Knights." Here are quotations:

'May the devils help us. We offer bargains in killings. We bump off any one. Ten dollars for one. Three for $25."

The boy is to be examined by Dr. Harry R. Hoffman, head of the Behavior clinic.

Cheese Boards

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 18. (By Examiner Correspondent).—Cheese offered for grading at Campbellford last week were as follows: Trent Bridge 34, Burnley 43, Brae 17, I.X.L. 25, Crow Bay 34, Stanwood 26, Brickley 16, Rylstone 50, Prince of Wales 32, New Model 12, Beaver 18, Norham 27, Kimgerly 43, Trent Valley 87, Seymour West 12, Woodlands 15—total 491 boxes.

There was a nice display of cheese at Norwood Fair, and G. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, placed them as follows: In colored cheese first place went to Cuthbertson, of Killarney; second, Turney, of Morganston; third, Brethour, of Warsaw; in white cheese, first, Cuthbertson; second, Turney; third, Roy Colby, of Cook's.

Examining cheese at dairy conventions, cheese makers meetings and conventions appears to be bearing fruit, for it is seldom in recent years that cheese sent to the show table by the makers have any marked defect. Generally the cheese outside the money is close up on those receiving a place, showing that the makers know their cheese very well.

George H. Barr, Director of Dairying, visited Campbellford district yesterday.

S. L. Joss, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Cheese Factory Patrons' Association, returned to Belleville on Saturday last, after an extended visit to the United Kingdom in the interest of that Association, and met the executive yesterday morning in Belleville.

Spring Valley in Haldimand township closed on Sept. 29th, after a very successful season.

Fred Remington, of Hoards Factory, has decided on account of poor health, to retire from the cheese making business at the close of this season. Mr. Remington is one of Ontario's most successful makers, having secured first place in 1932 and second place in 1933 in provincial honors, a feat not yet duplicated by any other maker.

URGING VETERANS TO CEMENT PEACE

Amherst Returned Man Starts Long Motorcycle Trip on Good-will Mission.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Oct. 18 (C. P.)—Anxious to help in establishing international goodwill Jack Blackburn is making a trip around the world on a motorcycle to see what he can do towards this end.

Blackburn is a member of Amherst, N.S., Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League. He is a story writer and adventurer. He intends to visit every branch of the legion throughout the world and urge its members "to revitalize the fires of comradeship which flared through the long years of the World War."

Mr. Blackburn is travelling by motorcycle because he thinks it is less expensive than by automobile and he can reach more places than by railway. Everywhere he goes, he strongly impresses on the people the necessity of peace and the utter futility of war.

Mr. Blackburn started his goodwill tour from Amherst, N.S., and will cross Canada to the Pacific Coast. From Vancouver he and his motorcycle will sail for Australia and New Zealand. From the Antipodes his itinerary includes South Africa and possibly India. Reaching Europe he will visit those countries that were opposed to Great Britain during the war.

The entire journey is under the auspices of the Amherst Post of the Legion, and Mr. Blackburn carries greetings from that post to the British Empire Service League and its allied organizations in all parts of the Empire.

WARRIOR KING IS CARRIED TO RESTING PLACE

march followed the intonation of Yugoslavia's National Anthem. A wave of emotion swept through the kneeling crowds in the streets.

Preceding the royal sarcophagus a distinguished Serbian general carried the murdered sovereign's glittering crown which seemed to typify the tragic splendor of his death. The same crown will be worn by the child King Peter when he reaches the age of 18.

Another officer carried Alexanders sword, which the kind had no chance to use when he was assassinated at Marseille. Another held his sceptre, symbol of power. On a velvet cushion were medals heaped upon the man who tried to make one great brotherhood of Yugoslavias disunited racial groups.

Dressed As Schoolboy

A sight that moved all hearts was the 11-year-old King Peter, dressed with the simplicity of a schoolboy. The earnest youngster seemed to embody all the future hopes of the Yugoslav nation. The crowds wept mingled tears of grief and joy as he passed.

Walking between two queens, his mother, Marie of Yugoslavia, and his grandmother, Marie of Rumania, Peter was flanked on sides by armed officers. There was little chance for a terrorist bomb or gunshot to reach him.

To prevent possible recurrence of the Marseille tragedy double rows of closely-packed troops with rifles and bayonets stood facing all the buildings along the route of the cortege, while another double row faced the spectators.

Special Watch for Kings.

Police kept vigilant eyes not only upon Peter but upon King Boris of Bulgaria and King Carol of Rumania, for the fear of assassination seemed to hang over the sad spectacle.

After the King's body left the cathedral the funeral cortege was led by a Serbian ecclesiastical dignitary bearing glittering bronze cross, while another priest carried a tray of corn emblematic of the reincarnation.

Then followed a band of trumpeters, the commander of the funeral cortege detachment of troops, regimental flags, military delegations, detachments of foreign armies and bearers of the Star of Kara-George, the nation's highest order.

Then came the King's white charger, a magnificent stallion, with stirrups reversed.

After that there were the Boy Scouts, of which the young King is the head; choral societies and clergy of various denominations.

The Heterogeneous masses of peasants at the funeral reminded one of a great ethnographical museum. There were Serbians in their own national costume; there were Montenegrans in baggy breeches and porkpie caps of red and black; Moslems in picturesque flowing robes, turbans and red fezzes, and Albanians in embroidered jackets and tight-fitting braided flannel trousers.

A crepe-covered locomotive with large white crosses painted on its sides waited at the Belgrade station to carry the body of the King to Topolo, Yugoslavia's Piedmont, 50 miles distant. There it was that Alexander' grandfather, Kara-George, won Serbia's partial independence from the Turks.

Promptly at the stroke of midnight the body had been transferred to the National Cathedral, where it rested until the start of the funeral this forning.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1934

IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.

While The Examiner has no information as to the calibre of the man who has been appointed, we must say that the announcement that the deputy-registrar of Essex County has been made registrar and that henceforth the offices of deputy and registrar will be combined appeals to us as a sensible and businesslike arrangement, especially praiseworthy because it recognizes the principle of promotion within the civil service.

Major Clark, the member for the riding, has explained that the appointee, Thomas Green, has received his promotion strictly on merit, and in the face of a great deal of pressure on behalf of other applicants for the position. The new registrar, Major Clark says, was the most efficient person to be found and was well entitled to advancement. Again there will be a saving of $5,000 a year as a result of combining the two offices.

It is certain that while a number of greedy job-hunters will be displeased, the step that has been taken in Essex County will be regarded by most people as economy of the right kind, inasmuch as it cuts down expenditure, while at the same time it recognizes the capabilities of an experienced civil servant and gives him a promotion that apparently has been richly earned.

In this appointment, as in a number of others, the Hepburn Government has done well to ignore the importunities of those who believe that to the victors belong the spoils, and to adhere to the principle that merit rather than political services should be the important factor in appointments of this nature.

THE STATE'S RESPONSIBILITY.

Reports from the Algoma district where bush workers are on strike declare that the strike leaders are disturbed over the announcement made by Attorney-General Roebuck that the companies have been given authority to engage special constables to protect their property.

The strikers argue, and not without reason, that to give the authority of police officers to men who are responsible not to the state but to the companies who employ them is a policy fraught with danger.

The Attorney-General's attitude toward the strike situation has apparently pleased neither side or the general public.

Only one provincial policeman is on duty in the whole strike area—a condition that to the companies, the men who desire to remain on the job and to the public seems to be inviting trouble, and the only alternative is for the companies to carry out Mr. Roebuck's suggestion and engage special constables, a course that will irritate the strikers and undoubtedly precipitate disturbances.

In labor troubles of this magnitude, it seems to The Examiner, that the state has a responsibility that cannot be evaded; where there is danger of damage to property or violence toward men who insist upon their right to work, there must be adequate protection provided, and that cannot be done by a solitary policeman or by delegating to private constables authority that should be held by officers who are responsible to the state.

REMEMBRANCE DAY.

There will be no controversy over the observance of Remembrance Day this year, for the anniversary of the end of the war falls on a Sunday and there will be no necessity therefore to close places of business.

As J. B. Bowler, general secretary of the Canadian Legion, makes clear in a statement issued recently, it was the clear understanding of Legion headquarters at the time the legislation was asked for that it was not fitting that Remembrance Day should be observed on any other day than November 11, the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, irrespective of what particular day November 11 happens to fall upon, and it was largely due to the effective presentation of this point of view that the existing legislation came into being.

This opinion is confirmed by E. H. Coleman, K.C., the Under Secretary of State, who draws attention to the special nature of the language of the Act, which reads in part as follows:

"Throughout Canada in each and every year the eleventh of November, being the day in the year one thousand, nine hundred and eighteen when the Great War was triumphantly concluded by an Armistice, shall be a holiday and shall be kept and observed as such under the name of Remembrance Day."

Mr. Coleman also points out that while in the case of other holidays special provision is made for observing them on Monday when they fall on Sunday, no such arrangement has been made in regard to Remembrance Day, making it clear that this anniversary must be observed on November 11, regardless of what day in the week that date happens to fall upon.

This year then Remembrance Day will be celebrated on Sunday, November 11, and there will be no holiday on the Monday following; for once, therefore, there will be no mercenary objections to participation in the exercises befitting the occasion.

ONTARIO'S AIR SERVICE.

It would be well, The Examiner maintains, for the people of the province not to be misled by changes that have been made in the command of the Ontario Provincial Air Service and by evidence brought out in the recent inquiry, to such an extent that the splendid work carried on by the organization is completely overlooked.

This point is stressed by Canadian Aviation, the official organ of the Aviation League of Canada, who regrets the fact that the affairs of the service had to be aired in such a prominent manner, "as the general public, whose knowledge of air matters is so strictly limited, are apt to jump at conclusions too often wholly erroneous."

Then the Aviation League paper goes on to pay this tribute to the Ontario Air Service:

"The work done by this admirable organization is, and always has been, of very great importance in assisting in the preservation of the timber wealth of the province, and in combatting that most devastating of menaces—the forest fire.

"The maintenance of its equipment speaks well for the high standard of engineers employed. The quality and experience of its flying personnel is amply borne out by the immunity from serious accidents over a very large number of miles flown in widely scattered parts of Ontario, from the Quebec boundary in the East to that of Manitoba in the West. Those accidents that have occurred, like many others elsewhere, never should have happened, and were mainly attributable to the human element. The appointment of Mr. Ponsford will, we trust, restore whatever confidence may have been lost in the service, and result in the smooth running of an organization whose work has become known throughout the Empire and other parts of the world. The selection of a man practically unknown in flying circles in Ontario, and one not previously connected with the service, may also prove a blessing in disguise. At any rate, Mr. Hepburn might have done far worse in his choice. It is said that the new director believes he can cut the administrative costs of his department by some fifty per cent. So long as he can achieve this without impairing the efficiency of its operations, few will have cause for complaint. There is no doubt, as the past ten years have proved, that the Air Service can be of valuable assistance to other branches of the Government, and when such a service is provided, the cost should be borne by the departments concerned."

THOSE TREATY MODIFICATIONS.

From Washington word is received that, notwithstanding the rejection of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty by the United States Senate last session, President Roosevelt is determined again to submit it to that body after what is termed "slight modifications" have been worked out with Canada.

The despatch recording this plan of the President emphasizes the fact that in its main essentials the treaty will remain unchanged, but that "one of the minor revisions to be sought concerns the provision regarding the use of American workmen on the Canadian side of the river."

The treaty, as signed by representatives of Canada and the United States in 1932, provides in respect of the river works lying on the Canadian side of the boundary that Canadian engineers, Canadian workmen and Canadian material shall be employed. This provision was responsible for some of the opposition in the Senate at Washington when it declined to ratify the treaty a year ago and Mr. Roosevelt presumably has it in mind to urge modification with a view to lessening this opposition. He will probably ask Canada to consent to American labor being employed on the works which are to be established on the Canadian side of the river.

When there were hints of requests for modification of the treaty some months ago, this newspaper suggested that possibly they would not reach Canada in a very agreeable state of mind. Subsequent events have not altered this belief. Opinion which was generally favorable to a start being made upon the St. Lawrence development a few years ago is not now by any means so unanimous. Indeed, apart from a few cities and sections which believe they will benefit from the waterway being built, it may be said to be almost non-existent. Moreover, during the interval the Government of Ontario, which must be considered in regard to any alteration in the treaty, has been changed. The Henry administration approved the treaty as it was originally drafted and signed. The Hepburn administration, already possessing a large surplus of electrical power seeking a market, might not be, probably is not, in agreement. Certainly, there would be considerable outcry throughout the country if Canada yielded to the request of the United States that works established on the Canadian side of the river should be built of United States materials by United States engineers and United States workmen. With a Dominion general election approaching, it might be a fatal step for the Ottawa Government to accept this proposed revision, even if the Toronto administration agreed to it.

There has been a change of sentiment since the treaty was drafted. People who were thoroughly in favor of its terms have given the subject further consideration in the light of the economic situation and have changed their minds. They conceive the project to be admirable in principle, but scarcely feasible from an economic standpoint at the present time. In addition, they are frankly critical of any thought of a further surplus of electrical power being acquired when they already have more of it than they know what to do with.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Former members of the Ontario Hydro Commission are accused of using Hydro funds to secure political ammunition. The outcome of the suit to recover the money will be awaited with much interest.

Dr. G. E Tanner, Liberal member for East Simcoe, says that he has had 2,700 applications for Government jobs, and there are only 200 positions in his riding if the present holders were all discharged. It is not all roses for members of the Government under such conditions.

Premier Bennett arrives back in Canada just in time to rush to Toronto for the laying of a cornerstone. In demanding the attendance of the head of Government at so many functions of this kind, the Canadian people show little consideration for the man who happens to be Prime Minister.

There is no lack of announcements from Queen's Park these days, but an anxious public has failed up to the present to hear any statement that would indicate plans to put some of the province's unemployed back to work.

Perhaps it is the strength of the imitative faculty in children which accounts for the strikes of school students.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

NO WAY TO FORCE PAYMENTS

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—When Germany began to back up on her payments of reparation money the French decided (in 1925) to occupy the Ruhr until payments were made. Whereupon the Germans caused the value of the mark to so deflate that instead of 4 marks to the gold dollar of their creditors currency it went up to forty million. This made the mark worth really nothing and the payment of reparations in marks worth nothing. The French had to withdraw Germany was unable to pay even the expenses of the French occupation because her money was worth nothing. When the French left, the financial circles of Germany began to restore the value of the mark to reasonable standards. So we see that there is no way where once a treaty has been signed to compel payment except appropriating more territory which the other powers will not allow.

FIXED ASSESSMENTS

Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir,—In our previous letter of Oct. 16 we dealt with the increase in taxation caused by fixed assessments which in this city has climbed to over four and a half million dollars, this is more than the combined exemptions carried by 22 other Ontario cities, and adds over one dollar in seven to our taxes, amounting to the unreasonably large sum of $118,625 per year and incurring a loss of over one million dollars every nine years and if interest were added it would come to over $230,000 more.

Not one dollar of this huge amount goes for any city service as it all flows into the coffers of the favored industries at the expense of the ordinary taxpayer, and if the ratepayer is taxed $140.00 for his dwelling, over $20.00 of this tax is a yearly loss and he wastes over $100.00 every five years to provide relief for eight prosperous industries.

Peterborough has 78 industries, most of them built up by local enterprise, 70 of these pay their full share of taxes. Is it not unfair to tax these 70 full paying industries for the benefit of the part paying concerns? Is it not grossly unfair to ask the working man with a mortgaged home, with taxes in arrears, with uncertain employment, (if any) to help bear this absurd expense for the benefit of corporations?

Ratepayer, asks us to explain the Council's responsibility, the primary responsibility rests with the Council and both the people and the Government expect them to use it. The Ontario Government has endeavored to protect the taxpayer from assessment exploitation by amending the Ontario Municipal Act. Under this Act as at present amended, NO RENEWAL of a fixed assessment is permitted, and only by the gross connivance of the Council, and a total disregard of the intent and purpose of the act could a renewal of assessment, or other evasion or subterfuge be submitted to the people, and if this improbable act was committed by the Council it would at once be challenged by an injunction.

The Government intends the Council to be the leader, instructor, and protector, of the electorate and has given them special powers for this purpose. For the information of ratepayers we quote the act:

Section 397, paragraph 1 reads:

"(a) The fixed assessment shall not be for a longer period than ten years, SHALL NOT BE RENEWABLE, and shall not apply to or affect taxation for school purposes or local improvements.

(b) The by-law shall not be passed except by the affirmative vote of three fourths of all the members of the council, and the assent of TWO THIRDS of the electors qualified to vote on money by-laws.

(c) No person to whom, or no person who is interested in, or holds shares in a company, and no nominee of a company to which a fixed assessment is to be granted, shall be entitled to vote on the by-law."

Why does the Government confer this special protective power of a three fourths majority on the council?

(1) Because a council by submitting a by-law practically endorses it. Otherwise it would be guilty of "passing the buck," "pussyfooting," or showing a lack of "back bone."

(2) The Government well knows the effect of "smooth talk" by "high pressure" salesmen on a small group, and experience has shown that a majority vote is not a sufficient safeguard for the taxpayer.

(3) Experience shows that corporations (like politicians) do not hesitate to make promises that they cannot fulfil, assurances that sound well but have no meaning in time of stress, presentation of camouflaged finances, concealed profits, dividends on watered stock, faked claims of being in the red and other wiles of a dubious character have fooled councils in the past and made this legislation necessary.

(4) Past experience shows that pressure is brought to bear upon employees, a species of compulsory vote, also bluffs and veiled threats through stool pigeon agencies, all such schemes are prevented by the council acting as intended by law for the electors protection.

The amended act also prohibits any company that has been receiving a fixed assessment here, removing to another place and receiving a fixed assessment in that place.

The object of this clause is to prevent bluffs and threats being held over the electors heads, and action by the council prevents this condition. If the Council fails in its protective duty to the community there is still a protection (against the credulous or intimidated voter) by the requirement of a two third majority of the electors qualified to vote on money by-laws, this makes the result about as near fool proof as possible.

Ratepayer asks what we propose to do if the council should fail to refuse the submission of such a by-law?

Our first objective would be to defeat the by-law at the polls, and at the same time defeat any candidate who fails to come out OPENLY for this policy of putting all industries on the same footing—a square deal for all and no special favors.

This is a sane business policy, and we must not continue a course that has made our city an "easy mark" and a "happy hunting ground" for the promoter and bonus seeker.

Is it not grossly unfair to ask the workingman with a mortgage on his home his life savings), with taxes in arrears, with uncertain employment (if any), to help carry this absurd burden for corporation benefit? We want it distinctly understood that we are not advocating the canceling of present agreements, the present situation is our own doing, and the primary cause lack of information to the electors, but with the information that we are furnishing to both councillors and electors a continuance of this policy would be an absurdity.

We ask your fullest co-operation against RENEWALS or other forms of unequal assessment, if electors will take a live interest in civic matters it will be impossible for a council to take a dilly-dally attitude and if any councillors do so we must weed them out at the polls.

Further inquiries from Taxpayer or others will receive our careful attention and this quickened interest should apply to all our elective bodies.

Yours for fair play,
The Ratepayers Association.

What's in The NAME of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

EDMUNDSTON, NEW BRUNSWICK.

Colonization of Madawaska county in which Edmundston is situated began in 1785, with the little settlement bearing the same name as the county. In those early days the present site of Edmundston was not favored and up to 1820 only one settler was to be found there. In 1831 another settler arrived, but settlement was slow and it was not until about 1850 that the people saw that the site of Edmundston possessed an important industrial advantage in that it stood at the junction of the Madawaska and St. John rivers.

The name was changed from Madawaska to Edmundston in 1856, in honor of Sir Edmund Walker Head, then governor of New Brunswick, who visited the town in that year.

THE SHOW-OFF.

Mary Fry of San Mateo sends me some paragraphs about a bird, and I suspect it's because he was such a show-off and because he was a male bird and because his wife minded her own business and DIDN'T show off.

He was in a cage, and even in a cage he couldn't restrain himself. "He was a brightly colored fellow, almost gaudy. Orange breast and black wings, and he carried a great air of cockiness about him. . . . He would run from one end of the cage to the other, shrieking at his mate. Once in a while, he would run to the screening, peer at the other birds, then spread his wings, let out a shrill whistle of disdain, and they fly to the top of the cage.

His mate was quieter in color and not so obstreperous. She sat quietly most of the time and merely looked at him. And when she did attempt to fly, he would dash at her and drive her back to her own corner again. . . . "His sole ambition in life was to fly to the top of the cage, grasp the screening and hang by his claws downward. He would repeat this five or ten times, stop to rest and again take up his work. Each time he reached the top, he would let out a triumphant shriek, and look about him for applause. Sometimes the other birds would look up at him, but after the fifth time he had attracted their attention in this manner, they would keep on eating or sunning themselves and pay no attention to this fellow who awkwardly hinted for praise."

Once his mate decided to speak her mind to him. "She flew to him and jabbered in a low but decided tone, but he wasn't to be preached to, and in the midst of her warnings, he took up his flight to the top of the cage, hung warily from the screening and mocked her. . . . She immediately flew to her corner, resumed her air of resignation, and let him beat about to his heart's content."

And as Mary Fry watched that bird she couldn't help comparing him with some human beings who "are forever trying to attract attention to themselves, not by useful acts, but useless ones, such as this bird was doing."

That's right, and yet I'd rather not hear any more about him. It's too painful. . . . That noisy bird in that cage squawking and parading and showing-off is entirely too male for my masculine equanimity and I'd rather not be reminded of the parading vanity of my own sex. . . . I thank Mary Fry but her description of that bird leaves an alum taste in my mouth.

ON THIS DATE
A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY
By Fred Williams

A FIERCE BATTLE AT QUEBEC.

On this date, in 1690, the British from Boston under Sir William Phips made an attack upon Quebec, defended by Frontenac and a small force. Parkman gives a vivid description of the day:

"Phips left his moorings, anchored his largest ships before the town and prepared to cannonade it, but the fiery veteran, who watched him from the Chateau St. Louis, anticipated him and gave him the first shot. Phips replied furiously opening fire with every gun that he could bring to bear; while the rock paid him back in kind and belched flames and smoke from all its batteries. The din was prodigious, reverberated from the surrounding heights, and rolled back from the distant mountains in one continuous roar. On the part of the English surprisingly little was accomplished. Their guns were very light; the balls failed to pierce the stone walls of the buildings and did so little damage that, as the French boasted, twenty crowns would have repaired it all. Night came and the turmoil ceased."

Next morning the battle was resumed at daybreak by Frontenac. One of the shots from the town "cut the flagstaff of the admiral's ship, and the cross of St. George fell into the river. It drifted with the tide towards the north shore whereupon several Canadians paddled out in a birch canoe, secured it and brought it back in triumph. On the spire of the cathedral in the upper town had been hung a picture of the Holy Family, as an invocation of Divine Aid.

The Puritan gunners wasted their ammunition in vain attempts to knock it down. That it escaped their malice was acribed to miracle; but the miracle would have been greater had they hid it. "Finally the attacking ships were so badly battered that Phips had to abandon the fight. Five days later Phips retired to Boston and Quebec was divided between thanksgiving and rejoicing."

Autumn Constellations

BY H. W. L. MAHOOD

Last Thursday evening we watched Sagittarius and the Scorpion disappear below the western and south-western horizon shortly after sunset, and the vanishing of the afterglow from sky and earth. With their disappearance September took its departure. September is a glorious month. But in this north temperate climate all nature suggests change, and the loss of beauty and the comradeship of field and forest and stream. As the leaves begin to fall and the flowers to fade a strange loneliness enters the heart of the nature lover. But the sky is so different. Groups of stars which have beamed joy into our minds during the summer months do not leave the sky empty. Other groups as brilliant and as full of mystery take their places. That which we trample over and trudge through is not as likely to suggest to our minds high thoughts as do the stars and the sun. If we were all gifted as was Robert Burns, the clump of sod, and the mouse, and the furrow in the field would be as full of mystey and appeal.

Take a look at some more of the Autumn Constellations. Between the zenith and Polaris, and westward from Cassiopeia is Cepheus. Cepheus is the Ethiopian King On his finger he wears a garnet star. Africa was famous in the long, long ago, in the myth days, for its jewels. In recent times large and brillant diamonds have found their way to the British crown. Many an adventurer has lost himself in quest of African jewels. The path into the mystery and the why of the stars leads to what may be known. The Astronomer never loses himself. In knowing the stars he comes to know himself the better. We have been looking westward. Now turn your eyes south-eastward of the zenith. Over there lies Pegasus. See that square. It is termed the Great Square of Pegasus. Pegasus is a race horse. His limbs are long and lithe.

FORTUNE GONE SELLS MATCHES

Former American Stage Star Makes Meagre Living in Old London.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (C.P.) — She sells matches now at a London pitch and has done so for 11 years. Miss Katherine Lucile Foote has spent three fortunes and will not go back to America poor.

Miss Foote is one of the few London street characters with a true American accent. Her father was a Colonel and her mother a society beauty from Washington. On her 20th birthday she was on the stage, with a brilliant future before her.

From the bottom she worked to the top—from an American three-shows-a-day circuit to London stardom. Marie Tempest, Ellaline Terris and Seymour Hicks knew her, and she was with George Edwardes for three or four years. She was playing as star at the Gaiety the day before embarking on a 20 weeks' tour of Australia.

Then came the first of her marriages, to an Australian. He died and left her $100,000. She married the nephew of the then Lord Mayor of London, and he died too. She had a second fortune. Her third husband was Isidor Maas, a wholesale tobacco merchant, who died and left her a third fortune.

Then, after many losses at Monte Carlo gaming tables the end came. She was too old for any other work, and selling matches gives her sufficient to live on.

TEMPERANCE FORCE MEETS IN VICTORIA

Plans Are Laid for the Calling of a Convention.

LINDSAY, Oct. 18 (Examiner Correspondence) — A Temperance Convention of the County of Victoria was held in Lindsay Tuesday to discuss the best means of dealing with the present liquor situation. Rev. Dr. Reddick, of Omemee acted as chairman and Rev. R. A. Whatham, representative of the Ontario Temperance Federation, was the chief speaker. He claimed that there must be legislation as well as education in dealing with the liquor evil. The Ontario Temperance Federation was going to do everything in its power, and the rest will be left with God. A resolution was passed requesting the Federation to give earnest consideration to the question of seeking a provincial referendum at the earliest possible moment in the new year on the question of authorities for beer and wine; that sympathetic support and encouragement be given to all municipalities of Victoria County that are contemplating a vote on the beer and wine issue in the near future. A nominating committee was named to arrange for a temperance convention for Victoria County.

One of the salesmen was given suspended sentence in the local police court a few days ago on charges of converting and operating without a license. The men were instructed to report at the Commission's office in Toronto.

MINES DECLINE HEAVY SELLING

Gold Section Hardest Hit While Silver Shares Also Show Drop.

FOLLOW LONDON CUT.

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (C.P.) — Selling pressure was applied to the mining list of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day and a considerable wearing down of quotations was noticeable at the close. Gold section was the hardest hit, but there was a definite downward adjustment of silver share prices, the result, perhaps, of a cut in the London and New York quotation on bar metal.

HEPBURN WILL OPPOSE SEAWAY

Characterizes St. Lawrence Project as Uneconomical and Unnecessary.

POWER NOT NEEDED.

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—(C.P.)—Opposition to immediate construction of the St. Lawrence waterway was voiced to-day by Premier Mitchell Hepburn who characterized the waterway as "totally uneconomical under present conditions."

"The seaway cannot be justified on the ground Ottawa and Quebec need power. Both provinces are now generating far more power than they can absorb," the Premier said.

As far as its use as a transportation agency is concerned, the Premier declared, "there is no need for another avenue of transportation at the present time."

The Dominion's railway problems is "so acute that even Premier Bennett has said that it is jeopardizing the national credit," and "the canal would be frozen several months of the year," Mr. Hepburn observed.

He said his government would oppose any effort at immediate construction.

39½ HOUR WEEK WOULD AID 200

T. & N. O. Recommendation Would Increase Employees' Pay Roll.

RACINE REPORT.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 18.—(C.P.)—Slightly more than 200 employes of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway will benefit if the Ontario Government puts into effect the recommendation for a 39½ hour week in the North Bay shops, urged by Commissioner Armand Racine, who investigated the railway, it was estimated here to-day.

The average schedule for shop employes is now approximately 35 hours a week and if the 39½ hour schedule goes into effect it will represent an increase of about seven and one-half per cent. in working hours with a consequent increase in the pay roll.

Not affected by the proposed increase in working hours would be about 40 shop employees whose present schedule is slightly in excess of the 39½ hour figure.

Quebec Enumerators In Language Trouble

QUEBEC, Oct. 18.—(CP)—Enumerators gathering names for the Dominion election lists are in many cases leaving French language notices with English-speaking electors and English language notices with French-speaking electors, according to complaints registered with officials.

Several complainants were said to have suggested the enumerators be supplied with a type of form having both languages printed on it.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—Selective buying gave the stock market a better appearance to-day following early easiness, primary in metals and oils. Packing shares and other specialties were firm. Gillette gained a point. Wilson Company "A" and Armour of Illinois Preferred (new) advanced more than 2 each. U.S. Steel and American Telephone were narrow. The late tone was steady. Transfers approximated 800,000 shares.

BROKERAGE FIRM ISSUED WARNING

"insiders," but declined to reveal the source of the rumor.

Brooks also expressed "suspicion" of Teck-Hughes and said, in his opinion, there had been "definite sponsorship" or "market manipulation," of the issue for the last two years. He would not hazard a guess who was responsible for the sponsorship, but suggested it had come from New York.

Confidential Message

Four days prior to the announcement of a reduced dividend on stock of Teck-Hughes Gold Mines, a confidential message predicting such a move was sent out by the brokerage firm of O'Hearn and Company to all branch managers, said B. W. Brooks, statistician for the brokerage company.

Brooks said his department had also advised clients of all branches of adverse rumors as early as Aug. 28, nearly two weeks before directors of Teck-Hughes first considered a lower dividend.

Heavy liquidation was evident in the stock on the morning of Sept. 12, the day following the first directors' meeting.

The same day, Sept. 12, Brooks said, he sent the confidential letter giving a candid, unbiased opinion of the Teck-Hughes situation. The message said the company "appeared to be having trouble establishing new ore," and that on top of this information came the report that a mill and shaft were being closed down. Brooks also said that in his opinion there had been "a definite sponsorship," or "market manipulation," of Teck-Hughes stock for the last two years.

This sponsorship, which Brooks believed came from New York, "might keep the market up, or what's more might put it up."

Reminded by Mr. Godfrey that directors from New York had denied influencing Teck Hughes stock values in any way, Brooks said he could not suggest who might be responsible of sponsorship.

Brooks also said he did not believe Teck Hughes stook "was worth what it has been selling at." He expressed agreement with the view of Dr. D. L. H. Forbes, president, that the Teck Hughes directorate was justified in cutting the dividend. In fact, he added, the action appeared to have been delayed because in his opinion the company had not been earning the annual dividend of 60 cents "for a long time."

WALDO YOUNG

There has not yet devoloped a broad public buying psychology, and until there is a larger public interest than exists present there would be no broad and active plowing through the stock for sale at this level; for the present, the picture is one of rotation of advance through the resistance, with one stock after another absorbing the offerings immediately overhead.

Viewing the market then as fundamentally strong but without the "power" behind it of broad public participation, the logical expectation is a gradual plodding through the difficult area rather than plowing through. The plodding will be accompanied by spurts and hesitations, by a mixture of rallies and recessions, but with the main trends upward. The market will be under close observation from here on for signs of exhaustion of the move. Thus far there are no such signs, and positions will be held for further development of the advance.

WILD RUN BY FLAT CAR

ST. STEPHEN, N.B., Oct. 18. — (CP)—Release in some unaccountable manner from blocks or "trigs" which held it on a grade, a runaway flat car partly loaded with railroad ties raced through St. Stephen at a speed of about 70 miles an hour, crossed 13 streets without injuring anyone and wrecked itself in a field.

The car travelled two miles before it left the end of the Canadian Pacific mail line and plowed across a field last night.

CANDY HEAD NOT LEAVING EITHER CHAIN

Frank P. O'Connor Will Retain 25 p.c. Control of Fanny Farmer.

WILL OFER SHARES.

(Financial Post.)

Announcement of the intention o Frank P. O'Connor to dispose of a large block of his holdings in Fanny Farmer Candy Shops Inc. does not mean that the founder and president of both this company and Laura Secord Candy Shops Ltd. has any intention of getting out of either business. The Financial Post is informed. Neither, it is stated, does it mean that a similar sale of Laura Secord stock is anticipated.

Subject to United States Government approval Candies Investments Ltd., personal holding company of Mr. O'Connor, will offer publicly 180,000 shares in Fanny Farmer through A. W. Porter Inc. The latter company has taken a commitment and options to purchase this amount of stock which represents almost 66 per cent. of 280,000 shares reported held by Mr. O'Connor.

Stock Split.

Under the stock split of Fanny Farmer approved at a special meeting of the shareholders on Sept. 24 last the number of authorized preference shares was reduced from 45,000 to 6,650 the actual number not redeemed and still outstanding and the 100,000 shares of no par value common were changed to 400,000 shares of common with a par value of $1 each. Of the latter issue Mr. O'Connor is stated to own 70 per cent or about 280,000 shares. It is understood that absolute control is not considered necessary today and the 100,000 shares or 25 per cent. of the stock may be sufficient to maintain working control.

Rumor Discredited.

Rumors that Mr. O'Connor was liquidating a substantial portion of his stock holdings as a preliminary step toward accepting the position of Lieut.-Governor of Ontario are not regarded seriously in Ontario governmental circles. The Post is informed. It is no secret that Mr. O'Connor is a staunch supporter of the present Hepburn Government and he is generally credited as being the unofficial financial adviser of the present administration. On the other hand it is stated very definitely that Mr. O'Connor could not be induced to accept such a position because of his personal aversion to public functions. It is more generally believed that the founder of the two great candy chains is simply following his well-known business principle of diversifying interests and in this particular case is probably creating a private trust for the benefit of his family. Mr. O'Connor is in his fiftieth year.

It's All English to the Chinese Talks Pirates Into Her Liberty

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 18. — Pirates are terrifying. Chinese pirates are especially so. But they aren't half so terrifying to their prisoners as the English language is to them.

Mrs. Margaret F. Van Driest of Nova Scotia., who was a prisoner for two days, is here visiting friends with a story to prove it. She said:

"There were fifteen of them. They captured me in China. They wanted ransom.

"But when they tried to find out who I was and how much I could pay, I pretended I couldn't understand Chinese. When they became too insistent, I started talking to them in English, which they couldn't understand. And I kept it up

CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS ARE OPENED BY DUKE OF GLOUCESTER

Third Son of King George Rides in State Through Melbourne.

ESCORT OF 70 PLANES.

MELBOURNE, Australia, October 18 (C.P. Cable via Reuters).—With the triumphant entry of the Duke of Gloucester, third son of His Majesty, Melbourne and Victoria State's gigantic centenary celebration was officially declared open to-day.

The Duke entered the city in a state coach, and proceeded slowly through five miles of streets lined with cheering crowds and militiamen, with an escort of 70 airplanes dipping and swooping overhead. More than half a million persons were in the streets.

The city was decorated lavishly for the opening of the celebrations in which all Australia, representatives of her sisters in the Empire, and foreign countries will participate. Among Canadians here for the occasion is Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Leader of the Senate, while a team of schoolboy athletes is now en route for miniature British Empire Games next month. The celebrations last until the winter—which is springtime in Canada.

The Duke was welcomed at the City Hall and afterwards at Parliament House by Sir Isaac Isaacs, Governor-General of Australia, and delivered a message to the Australian people from the King which declared the occasion must stir the hearts of all those interested in the Empire.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(C. P. Cable) —Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and J. H. Thomas, secretary for Dominions, were among those attending a function at Australia house today which synchronized with the opening of the Melbourne and Victoria centenary celebrations 12,000 miles away.

The two government members which Stanley Bruce, Australian High Commissioner, helped to light 100 candles on a special birthday cake decorated with the Australian flags.

Prime Minister MacDonald, proposing the success of the celebrations, referred to the smallness of the modern world. He described how, during his recent holiday, he had listened by wireless in St. John's to every detail of the launching of the giant liner 'Queen Mary.'

"We heard the ceremony in such a way that we belonged more to the crowd than many people only a few yards from the vessel," he said. "Today, we are part of a crowd demonstrating the unity of the Empire, and the fact we all belong to the same system of government."

The resolution, modelled upon one recently passed by the Toronto Board of Education, contained the words 'Roman Catholic' when referring to the sectarian schools but these were deleted before being passed.

TWO GIRLS HURT RIDING BICYCLE

Collided With Car — One Has Fractured Leg, Other Broken Nose.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

Two girls riding a bicycle—one of them being on the cross bar of the machine—last evening sustained injuries necessitating their removal to Nicholls Hospital, when they collided with the side of a motor car on Park Street South.

The injured girls were Doris Tripp 14, and Grace Hancock 18, both of Monaghan Road. The former received a fractured left wrist and right leg, and the latter sustained a broken nose and extensive cuts about the face.

Riding north on Park Street in the vicinity of Edison Avenue at about 7.45 p.m., the girls swerved their machine into the side of a motor car being driven south by Alexander Turner. The left rear window and the handle on the left rear door of the car were broken, it is learned.

Following the accident the driver of the car rendered every possible assistance, first conveying the girls to the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic and later removing them to hospital.

"For example", said Mr. Croll, "the head of a family which receives a food allowance of $21 a month has been permitted to earn as much as $7 in a month by his own efforts without deduction. We are now saying to the municipalities that we will pay our share of the cost if they will permit him to earn this extra money as part of their works program."

FRENCH FEAR NAZI TRIUMPH IN SAAR VOTE

Are Seeking Moral Support in Extremity From Italy.

VOTE FOR HITLER.

Concessions to Mussolini Make Rome Virtual Capital of Europe.

By J. C. OESTREICHER
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 18.—With a tiny, lozenge-shaped piece of territory one of the chief pawns at stake, the diplomacy of Europe is undergoing a process of reorentation to-day.

New friendships and new enmities are bound to result. The eventual outcome either of the readjustment or of disposition of the territory cannot be predicted.

The land in question is the Saar valley, probably richer and more densely populated per square mile than any other territory in Europe, and the decision of its own people with regard to its future nationality promises to have a profound effect upon the status of Europe as a whole.

For the last fifteen years, the Saar valley has been administered by commissioners appointed by the League of Nations, and its valuable output of coal and iron have gone, by virtue of a clause in the Treaty of Versailles, to France.

In January, 1935, the 800,000 inhabitants of the Saar, who are packed so closely in their little territory that they stand 1,150 to the square mile, are to go to the polls and decide their own political future.

Have Choice at Polls

They can, if they wish, remain under protectorate of the League of Nations. They can become Frenchmen, and thus permit the fruits of their labors underground to enrich a flag they can call their own.

Or they can become Nazis.

Upon this latter possibility, which at present constitutes the most likely development, hinges much of France's present-day diplomacy.

It accounts in large measure for her feverish anxiety for a rapproachment with Italy. It is responsible in no small measure for Mussolini's nationalistic stiffening; for his recent series of sharp and firm warnings to Germany; for his virtual ultimatum to Jugoslavia to cease forthwith its provocative newspaper attacks upon the Italian national honor.

For there is grave fear in Europe that for Germany the Saar will be merely a jumping off place for a new policy of Nazi aggrandizement that would undermine if not blast completely the already shaky structure of European peace.

Reichsleader Adolf Hitler, through his emissaries in the Saar, has promised there will be no forcible seizure of the territory, no intimidation of voters at the polls to enlist the Saarlanders in the Nazi ranks by means more foul than fair.

He has promised that Nazi Germany will abide peacefully and lawfully by the Saarlander's own decision. The hysterical fears of a Nazi "putsch" in the Saar aroused when league commissioners charged Hitler with training storm troops for an armed invasion have died down.

The fear to-day is not that Hitler will attack the Saar, but that the Saarlanders will vote for him and encourage him to make good his boast that "Germany will regain all in the world that is German."

He has promised to do it by legal means and within the structure of existing treaties, but except in the case of the Saar inhabitants themselves, there is no legal provision made for Nazie embrace of all the Teuton colonies, wealth and glory lost in the world war.

So far as the Saar itself is concerned, the treaty provides merely that the inhabitants shall decide their own nationality. The millions of dollars in anual wealth represented by the output of the coal-mines will continue to go to France regardless of the outcome of the plebiscite, until such a time as Germany can buy them back for hard cash. And the French government has made it clear it will accept no depreciated currency—no 'baloney dollars" or inflated marks. Gold alone, up to and including the full value of the mines and property, will be demanded.

Before the Nazis came into power, sentiment in the Saar was predominantly pro-German. Nazi propagandists have attempted to see to it that this sentiment did not change.

France, Italy Opposed

But before the rise of Hitlerism, France did not so much fear the loss of the Saar. The rich revenue derived therefrom would still be forthcoming until Germany could pay for the mines, and it was this revenue that impelled France to ask for the Saar after the war rather than the mere acquisition of another 800,000 persons of doubtful national loyalty.

But to-day it is a different matter. A Germany bulwarked by 800,000 Saarlanders, with the western extremity of their territory touching upon the French province of Lorraine, is a vista unattactive to French eyes. A Germany encouraged by a pro-Nazi vote by 800,000 "outsiders" who just as easily could vote to be Frenchmen is a matter for grave concern in the Quai d'Orsay.

Thus Paris asks Rome for Franco-Itlian collaboration against the threat of Nazi aggrandizement on the horizon. Thus France bends the knee to Italy for the first time, and Rome truly becomes the capital of Europe because France fears a Germany bolstered by the Saar.

Europe's Potential Powder Barrel-Leading Statesmen

The Girl Who Is Always Right

"Men only THINK they prefer blondes—or brunettes or red-heads, as the case may be."

This profound finding was announced yesterday on the authority of Miss Josephine Leies, the DePaul University girl, who runs the "Blind Date Bureau," furnishing "the right kind of a girl" for the lonesome college boy. She adds:

"I know I'r right because I've proved it—over and over."

Just last week she proved it, the dance for the National College Press Association. This was her experience:

"After I run out of blondes and found the boys still asking for them, I studied the same boys and girls and I paired them MY WAY. Know what happened? Boys who demanded blondes and got brunets were perfectly pleased. Boys who asked for red-heads and got blondes complimented me for knowing what they wanted beted better than they did.

"Of course I did have to use some discretion. I paired the right heights together, since it was a dance. Tall people don't like to dance with short ones—of any complexion."

FAMOUS WRITERS NEWS MEN FIRST

New York Publisher Lists Various Fallacies Concerning His Business.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (C.P.)—The best selling books of the ages frequently are the masterpieces of history, according to M. Lincoln Schuster of a New York book publishing firm.

Mr. Schuster told the Columbia University School of Journalism this, exploded some fallacies connected with the book publishing business and said many of the most eminent writers had been trained on newspapers.

He named Daniel Defoe, Benjamin Franklin and Charles Dickens as journalisf's "early practitioners." John Milton, belonging to an era before newspapers as such had made their appearance, he termed one of journalism's "early champions."

The idea publishing is purely a dilettante pursuit, consisting chiefly of drinking tea with authors, was one fallacy Mr. Schuster exploded for the aspiring newspaperman. Not even at so-called literary teas, he advised them, is tea the drink. He listed as other falalcies: that good reviews necessarily meant good sales; that publishers conspired to discourage new and unknown talent; that attempted suppression or censorship made a book a best seller; that sensational best-sellers were forgotten after the first season was over.

Books such as "Don Quixote," "Pickwick Papers," and "Huckleberry Finn" had been spectacular best sellers from the day they were published, Mr. Schuster said.

A book publisher, he declared, was "a city editor to the universe." He lauded the late Joseph Pulitzer and said a publisher's list could be built for the "talent and genius" of Mr. Pulitzer's New York World. The publisher hailed F.P.A.'s "The Conning Tower," column in the New York Herald-Tribune. In it, he said, "a veritable renaissance of American letters flourished."

HOUSE CAT IS AIDING SCIENCE

Cat's Ears Being Studied to Find Out Cause of Deafness.

USE ELECTRIC WIRES

BOSTON, Oct. 18 (AP)—The house cat is coming to the aid of Science in solving some of the problems of deafness which afflict 10,000,000 persons in United States. How the cat's ears furnish natural, living laboratories where human deafness is almost exactly duplicated came out in one of the clinics of the American College of Surgeons holding its annual meeting here this week. The work was domonstrated by H. Davis, H. A. Derbyshire and M. H. Lurie of Harvard Medical School.

These cats are not sacrifices to Science. They come by their deafness naturally, the same as humans, and have nearly all the same afflictions because their ears work very much like human hearing organs. Their ears are not so well protected as man's, so that it is easier to see the puzzling causes of deafness.

A cat cannot tell man that it is deaf, but the scientists are able to read the animal's troubles on a pair of fine electric wires. One of these wires touched the "round window" in the middle ear, and the other, the animal's auditory nerve.

Sound travels over this nerve to the cat's brain in nerve impulses which are partly electrical. These nerve impulses readily switch to the wires in the form of measurable electric currents.

The wires detroit the messages headed for the cat's brain and register them on the dial of a galvanometer.

If the cat is deafened the electric current shows it by weakness, or by absence. The faintest sound which the cat appears to hear is equal, after it has been converted by the ear into a nerve impulse, to current from about a two-millionths of a volt of electricity.

By reading the currents on the wires, the scientists discover whether the cat is deaf. Examination of the ear then reveals the cause.

Four Major Afflictions.

The cats prove to have four of the major human hearing afflictions. First, infections which put out of commission the ear drum and ossicles, the three small bones that pass the vibrations of the drum along into the inner ear.

Second, adhesions in the middle ear, which prevent these ossicles from moving. Third, infections of the middle ear which may cause destruction of some of the organs there. Fourth, like humans, they may have trouble with the "organ of corti," which is the essential hearing organ lying in the inner ear, close to the nerves which transmit the sound to the brain.

The cats do not appear to suffer from otosclerosis, which is a bony growth.

Soft Fabrics Share Honors With Metal

Left, Carole Lombard; center, Mona Barrie; right, Kitty Carlisle.

By LISBETH

WHEN LOOKING at the glittering array of evening gowns you think, "Aren't those lames and sequin trimmed dresses stunning? They really represent the mode of 1934."

And the next instant you are "eating your words," as it were, because the next gowns in the procession are of the softest and clingingest fabrics possible.

It's the same with silhouettes. You decide that you just must have one of those delightfully full skirts that billow around you. And then you are overcome with the reflection that you would look wonderful in the slimmest of pencil silhouettes, with slits to let you walk about.

There's simply no excuse for a woman not to suit her own particular type of beauty this season. Stiff fabrics vie with soft, clinging materials for her favor—both being equally smart.

In the formal ensemble worn by Carole Lombard, left, the designer has played up the fabric itself by allowing it every advantage of drapery, softness and adherence to the figure. The crossed draperies in the bodice meet at the waist on the back and form floating panels with a train effect.

The color is smoky rose-beige in its palest hue, and the gown is appropriately named "Twilight."

The elaborate costume worn by Mona Barrie, center, has a Spanish inspiration. It's of rough-textured antique gold cloth, with red satin forming the upper section of the bodice of the gown, and lining the drapery which forms the train. It also lines the toreador cape of brown Alaska seal, which Miss Barrie trails carelessly by her side.

The toreador hat for evening features a pair of red pompons, and the frosted satin gloves are of the same Carmen red.

An unusually interesting dress is worn by Kitty Carlisle, right. It is green and blue silver cloth with a ribbed effect. The peplum is caught to the center seams in front, but is free in back. There is a long train, and the decolletage is one of the Hollywood designer's unadorned, sharp necklines.

A jeweled belt of square emeralds worn by Miss Carlisle adds the last touch to this stunning gown.

OUR MAIL

Dear Anne Wilcox:

If you will excuse my ambling and my mode of rambling, I would like to come back for a call to talk about our beautiful Fall. Dame Fortune has her own reasons for dressing up the months of the seasons, I think, the month of October, in the Fall, she gives the most gorgeous dress of all. The evening dress, so varied and bright is worn all day from morning to night gleaming in color of most every hue—even some fresh green that looks quite new. The gems are shed with shimmering fall, turf and walks covered all. So much these days about "Red" is said, the ornament of the trees are often of the brightest red. Large and small on the same bush is seen the beautiful apple blush. Jack Frost and the sun helpfully made these robes have so many a shade. I have lately had a lovely trip with some friends, which always to me, some benefit lends. Through ever curving and winding ways we crept around hills, then up them to gaze. Some places so narrow were the roads, we had to top to meet some loads. The Maple, Sumach and Beech, we could on each side almost reach. We stopped with kind friends, who at our meeting, gave us such a warm welcome and hearty greeting, then followed a bounteous chicken supper, so nice it disappeared almost in a trice. We came home by highway in moonlight bright, feeling as though we had been on a flight to some strange country place, all in so short a space.

I wonder if we neighbors all know that surrounding Peterborough there is beauteous scenery abounding. If I could get in the woods tomorrow, much of old time joy I would borrow. If in the Summer the country was my home, I'd almost try to write a poem, but knowing so little of the pleasure and toil that comes with the tilling of our productive soil, resulting in the supply of both food and fruit I would not dare attempt for I could not do it.

When King Winter comes, clad in his snow white wraps and gives us some more of his coldest snaps —I would rather be where I can get about and have my neighbors come in and out. So where I am, I am content, thanking God for all His blessings sent.

Meta.

Dear Meta:

I am sure you enjoyed your trip very much and you describe it so vividly that we all feel as if we had been along with you. You are right, Meta, we have some very beautiful spots within the bounds of our own county. Just at this lovely season of the year the scenery is at its best with all the lovely crimson, yellow and greens of the woods. A walk through the woods these beautiful autumn days is an inspiring sight. It fills one with awe at the beauty and magnificence of dying nature. Next we will have the majestic whiteness of King Winter and then the miracle of Spring. How wonderful it is to have Spring to look forward to.

Your letter was very interesting and we hope you will write soon again.

Have you read about our Recipe Edition which we are planning to get out in the very near future? Wouldn't you like to send in your favorite recipe. I do hope all the neighbors will send in one or as many recipes as they can. We are trying very hard to make this quite a successful venture. It will be so much easier if the women folk will do their share.

Sincerely,

Anne Wilcox

BAHRAM AN EASY WINNER

NEWMARKET, Eng., Oct. 18. (C. P. Cable).—Odds-On-Favorite, the Aga Khan's good two-year-old colt Bahram easily won the Middle Park stakes to-day from a small but select band, thereby establishing himself a leading contender for the derby and other classics next season. Bahram, starting at odds of 2 to 7 against, finished the six furlongs of the great two-year-old race two lengths in front of A. F. Bassett's Godolphin, in turn three lengths ahead of Sir Charles McLeod's Consequential. Six ran.

Warned England of First Air Raids, Is Now 'Phone Chief

Decorated by Earl Beatty for Coolness in War Emergency.

By Central Press Canadian

LONDON, Oct. 18—The woman who, in 1916, handled the message that 'brought the news of the first Zeppelin raid over London, now supervises the telephone calls of nearly two thousand guests daily, at a famous London hotel.

She is Miss Edith Sanderson, supervisor of the telephone exchange at the Regent Palace hotel, London, Eng.

While she was stationed at Immingham on the east coast in 1916, the terse message came over the telephone, "Zeppelins headed for the coast of England have crossed the German border.' Edith Sanderson, a girl of seventeen, calmly supervised the feverish activities of 40 girls, who were warning Britain that the Germans had crossed the North Sea for their first aerial attack on London.

Admiral Sir David Beatty (now Earl Beatty) himself presented Miss Sanderson with the O.B.E. on behalf of the King.

Another war-time incident Miss Sanderson recalls was receiving the message "A German submarine inside the River Humber."

Submarine in Harbor

The Humber hummed with naval activity. At its mouth was a boom defence. This defence was opened only between sunrise and sunset, and then on the wireless instructions of a high naval officer. A German submarine had crept through in the wake of a British naval ship and had then submerged. She came to the surface and Britain's war dogs were unleashed.

Until the submarine was captured, Miss Sanderson sat with head-phones on, in tense excitement. Came the news of the capture and the "all clear," and she breathed quietly again.

Daughter of a wireless warrant officer with 30 years' service in the British navy, Miss Sanderson inherited her father's interest in the telephone, and is an expert in all branches of telephony.

Over 30 miles of telephone cable, thousands of ingoing and outgoing calls, as well as special teleprinter service which sends and receives hundreds of telegrams annually, are now in Miss Sanderson's charge.

Where Did We Get the Dollar Sign

WHY don't we use a big D for "dollar" and draw two lines through that? Who started the idea of using an S instead?

Well, one explanation links us with old Spanish trading days. Prices were based on pesos, which was abbreviated to read Ps. Gradually, they say, we came to write the P right on top of the S. But that sign was too hard to read, so we rolled the loop off the P, which left $. And finally, we picked up another stroke and put it through the S, resulting in our present $.

Now reading the dollar-sign is natural to every one. But much more important, we believe, is learning to read dollar-values.

When you hold a newspaper in your hand, the dollar-values are right before your eyes. You find them in nearly every good advertisement. They tell you where to get the most quality at the lowest cost.

It's a good practice to study the dollar-values in your newspaper before you set out to buy. Then the price-tags mean more to you than a group of figures.

$250,000 FIRE STRIKES RESORT

For a Time Flames Threatened Whole Town of Hudson, Quebec.

CLUB HOUSE LOST.

HUDSON, Que., Oct. 18 (CP)—Citizens of Hudson to-day began returning their furniture, removed when it was feared the town was in danger of being razed by fire, to their homes. The first was checked last night before it could gain headway in the town, but not before damage of $250,000 was caused.

One of the largest ice houses in Eastern Canada, containing 20,000 tons of ice, the clubhouse of the Hudson Yacht Club and five refrigerator cars of the Canadian Pacific Railway were all destroyed by flames, while several homes were damaged. Firemen battled for three hours before getting the blaze under control with no injuries reported.

No reason for the firse could be found. Flames started in the roof of the ice house, property of the Hudson Ice Company, and before firemen could prevent it, it had reached the building of the Hudson Yacht Club, containing many row boats and canoes. Aid was summoned by nearby Vaudreuil when homes in the vicinity was threatened. Five refrigerator cars, stationary on a nearby siding, were destroyed by the flames.

WOMEN ARE NOT GREATER TALKERS

She must have something of absorbing interest to say—for long-winded speakers are absolutely taboo. Giving short speeches—stopping when the delegates are clamoring for more is the greatest short cut to popularity of the convention.

Very Businesslike

Are women, with practically only a generation of business training, more businesslike in the conduct of their meetings than men? Again under the chairmanship of Miss Kydd the National Council of Women demands punctuality and attendance of delegates, each session brings "to the minite." Miss Kydd and Mrs. C. Thornburn recording secretary make this an infallible rule. If they see a courtesy luncheon is running over time they always excuse themselves in order to be in the convention room at the appointed time.

Want No "Dead Wood"

If voting delegates falter a bit in constant attendance and perchance adjourn to the lounge for a "visit," they are not allowed to vote on a motion which they did not hear "put." Each local council and nationally organized society is asked to arrange with its delegates so that oneof them shall be present when reports of standing committees are given. And according to their notices of motion they are becoming more and more efficient. In future there is to be no carrying of inactive conveners — no "dead wood" for it is resolved "that national conveners who hold no communication with local conveners during the year shall be ineligible for re-election, nor, henceforth, will any convener be allowed to make a final "grand stand" report at the annual convention unless she has built this upon her personal year's work.

Then too in future no nominations for officers and convenors will be accepted without the consent of the nominee.

Milliners Are Using Veils In Most Unusual Ways

Left, veil worn with felt beret; right, halo hat with veil.

By LISBETH

VEILS ARE very much with us in these days, but are used in "mysterious ways their wonders to perform," if we may quote scripture in such a connection.

The 12-inch circular veil, for example, is used by Molyneux to widen a flat black felt, illustrated left above. The beret is draped high in the back to make it more alluring. The veil extends a full six inches beyond the beret, as you see. A knot of grosgrain ribbon on the crown holds the veil in place, flat in front and closely gathered at the sides.

The halo hat, so popular this summer, is with us again for the winter —and no wonder, for it is very flattering. The one illustrated right, by Molyneux, is particularly charming, with cartridge tubes forming the halo, and a softening and becoming veil with a two-inch border of gold thread making it a cheapeau that is easy to wear.

JAIL CONDITIONS ARE IMPROVED

Course Taken by Local Councils of Women Bringss Action.

INTEREST IN PENAL SYSTEM

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—(CP)—Conditions of jails, particularly women's quarters and detention homes for delinquent and mentally deficient children, have been improved as a results of attention paid by several local councils, the National Council of Women was informed today. Presenting the report of the committee on laws concerning women and children, Mrs. Helen Gregory McGill of Vancouver, convener, stated that penal reform "continues to excite national and international discussion." It was gratifying, she stated, to note the aroused interest of Local Councils of Women in the penal system.

Mrs. McGill said that the International Council of Women is still pressing the question of the nationality of married women. The co-operation of Canada, South Africa and Ireland is all now lacking to enable the question to come again before the League of Nations.

The executive committee of the International Council of Women recommended inquiry into conflicting methods of treatment arising under the various laws concerning children in one and the same country, she reported. They also recommended legislation forbidding entry of children, where alcohol drinks are sold.

DEFERS SENTENCE IN ASSAULT CASE

Elderly Woman Robbed of $75 Pension Savings.

SIMCOE, Ont., October 18 (C. P.). — Sentence was reserved by Magistrate Cross to-day in the case of Hilton George Sherry, an Indian, who pleaded guilty to assaulting 83-year-old Mrs. Sarah Louks, Walsingham, on the night of September 17, and robbing her of $75 saved from her old-age pension. Dr. Nicholson Langton testified that for 24 hours after the assault the aged woman's life was in doubt as the result of the injuries inflicted.

Arthur George Adams, Brantford pleading guilty to charges of breaking and entering and theft of goods from the shop off Miss Roulston and the Lake Erie and Northern Station at Waterford and of a Michigan Central Railway car was remanded until Monday for sentence.

Young Farm Laborer Faces Capital Charge

Gordon McCauley, 20, Glenalda farm laborer, charged with a capital offence in respect to the ten-year-old child of his farmer employer, was this morning remanded until Tuesday next without plea, when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. On a further charge relative to theft of a lamp he elected trial before judge and jury, and was further remanded on that count.

500 HOMELESS BY LANDSLIDE

Highways Blocked and Property Damage Estimated at $100,000.

TWO BOYS MISSING.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18 (AP) — Two boys missing, 500 people homeless, highways blocked by landslides and property damage estimated at more than $100,000 was the result to-day of Southern California weather potpourri.

Starting with a mild earthquake, nature brought out about every trick in its bag yesterday, including a mild tornado, thunder, lightning, hail, snow, torrential rains—and a waterspout.

Donald Butterworth, 9, Los Angeles, was reported missing by his mother. Police said they had been informed a boy had fallen into a storm drain near the Butterworth home.

Lloyd Spindle, 11, also of Los Angeles, failed to return home from school and it was feared he had drowned in flooded streets.

Police estimated the damage to flooded homes would approximate $100,000. In addition to this, severe damage was done state highways.

RADIO OWNERS MUST PAY FEE

Federal Government Threatens Prosecutions of More Delinquents.

PERSUASION FAILS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18. (CP).—Radio owners delinquent in paying their licence fees may find the long arm of the law reaching out after them. After trying all manner of methods of gentle persuasion to induce the delinquents to pay up the Radio Branch of the Department of Marine is now resorting to legal action.

A limited number of prosecutions have already been launched on a wide front and it is proposed to follow them up with more. The prosecutions are widely scattered in order to attract public attention. So far the prosecutions have been quite effective and license fees are now coming in at a better rate.

The Department is aiming at a revenue of $1,500,000 from radio licence fees and with the fee at $2 this means something more than 750,000 licenses for the whole of Canada, allowing for commissions and other expenses incidental to collection.

Revenue from licenses so far this year is ahead of last year but it is not yet high enough to satisfy the Department. More than six months of the fiscal year have now passed and government officials consider there can be little justification for radio owners refraining any longer from taking out licenses.

Numerous collectors were appointed to make house to house calls but this method did not prove satisfactory. In the past collectors have been paid 15 cents on each licence early in the year. In addition to proving unavailing, the convassing method is regarded as a bit too expensive.

Australian Aviator Plans Pacific Flight

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Oct. 18. (AP) Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith made minute preparations to-day for a take-off at dawn Saturday on a hazardous trans-Pacific flight to the United States.

He will proceed to Brisbane tomorrow and leave the next morning for Sua, Fiji Islands, on the first leg of the journey by way of Honolulu to San Francisco.

Extra gasoline tanks, a radio transmitter, signal flares and special instruments have been installed on the famous flyer's plane. Although confident of success, the Australian is fully equipped for a long float should he be forced down onto the water.

High And Low Wear Velvet

Left, blue velvet evening dress; center, shirtmaker frock; right, dinner suit in gold and black.

By LISBETH

High and low this season wear velvet. Quite different from the time when only the rich gal could afford a velvet gown, and the poor had to look on enviously, like Cinderella without the godmother.

Velvet even fashions some of the smartest of the sports types of frocks. Take the one at the center. It is a shirtmaker dress of blue Lyons velvet with square rhinestone stud buttons. Four patch pockets and bell-shaped sleeves are featured. With it is worn a simple velvet beret inspired by a matador's cap, from Lily Dache.

A formal evening dress from Schiaparelli is shown left. It is blue crystelle velvet garnished with crimson in the deep cowl back.

Luxuriously elegant is the dinner suit of shimmering gold and black velvet, right. The fitted jacket fastens single-breasted down the front and has a gold lame collar. A plastron on the dress also is of gold lame. The slightly trained skirt is slit above both knees.

With it is worn gold back clear prystal bracelet and earrings.

EDMONTON, Oct. 18. — (CP) — People should be taught to use their smaller budget to their most healthful advantage and should learn how to get the proper foods, declared Miss Elizabeth Smellie, C. B. E. As chief supervisor of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada, Miss Smellie is on a tour of western cities. She is also chairman of the nursing section of the Canadian Public Health Association and fellow of the American Public Health Association.

"The western provinces have made great advances in public health, and compare well with the eastern centres," said Miss Smellie. "We have no deficits, and there is no professional antagonism to our work.

"There is a more acute interest in the subject of health than there has ever been, I think, but I would like especially to stress the need for great knowledge of nutrition. Several home economic departments of the universities are taking special interest in this phase just now, and are forming voluntary clubs among their dieticians to study the subject."

STILL POSSIBLE TO HIRE HANSOM

One Time Popular Conveyance of Old London Nearing Museum Stage.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (C.P.).—London still has its old-time hansom cabs, popular conveyances before the introduction of motor buses, but now sadly reduced in number. Those persons who chanced to be going down Knightsbridge about 11.30 one night saw an accident whose like may never be seen again in this country — a hansom cab overturned after collision with a motor car which was overtaking it.

It looked as though the cab will never again be driven in London, thus reducing to three the number which now come out at theatre-closing time on the streets of the West End. The cabman, Arthur Wolff, had been driving for nearly 50 years in London. It was his first accident. Fortunately neither he nor his passengers were badly hurt. His mare was more bewildered than frightened, for she is used to motor cars.

There is seldom an evening on which the drivers of hansom cabs do not pick up several fares, but nowadays they are nearly all young people, who drive in them for novelty, rather than older people, who probably had enough of them in their youth. On fine summer evenings it is difficult to find an empty hansom cab after the theatre.

ANTIQUE CHAIR SOLD FOR $105

PITTSBURGH, Pa., October 18 (A.P.). — At a cost of only $105, someone is using a chair which the Emperor Napoleon once gave his sister for a present.

The chair was part of the luxurious furnishings sold at auction in the home of the late David M. Kirk, industrialist.

Four Children Now Almost Forgotten

St. John, N.B., received some free publicity when they were born. News value declined as they grew and St. John forgot them. Not for these four children of Mr. and Mrs. William Mahaney, did governments send public aid or protection against exploitation. For them no unusual amenities in life. Their parents were their sole support, declining to make money from the unusual occurrence of a multiple birth. Left to right they are: Lyda Christin, John Douglas, Edith May and Edna Louise. At the right is their mother, Mrs. Wm. Mahaney.

NO CHILD GIVEN FOR "DRESS-UP"

More Children Wanted Than Available for Adoption in Quebec Province.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18—(CP)—Applications for children to adopt far exceed the number eligible for adoption under Quebec laws. This is the report of Mrs. Mildred Kensit, executive director of the Children's Bureau of Montreal.

Among reasons given by people seeking to adopt children is the desire for a child to educate, to inherit property or carry on the family name. Death of their own child, Mrs. Kensit continued, is a frequent reason brought out.

Others, becoming bored with social activities, wish to settle down in their own home to attain a definite goal. In other cases, couples who have drifted apart need a common interest in the home. Frequently a child is taken as a companion to the child born into the home, but in a large number of cases the requests come from childless couples.

The Children's Bureau rejects applications for adoption when the request comes from people who simply think of a child 'to dress up and play with, but have no conception of the responsibilities of parents." They look with disfavor also upon the request from the neurotic woman who asks for a child as a cure—something with which to occupy her mind.

ST. JOHN'S MAHANEY QADRUPLETS GIVEN NO EXTRAORDINARY CARE

Healthy New Brunswick Family Content to Live Retiring Existence.

BIRTH NOW FORGOTTEN.

By Central Press Canadian

ST. JOHN, N.B., Oct. 18.—The Mahaney quadruplets of this city will soon be eleven years old. The arrival of these four children at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Mahaney on a frosty Christmas night in 1923 was heralded throughout the world. For several years they were objects of curiosity for visitors, but that curiosity has died and the children, Lyda Christine, John Douglas, Edith May and Edna Louise, are living the lives of ordinary children, with public school activities taking about all their time.

The lot of the Mahaney children has been very difefrent from that of the Key quadruplets, of Hollis, Oklahoma. Those four have been exploited to bring revenue to the family treasury and finding life quite an easy matter. Then, too, the Dionne quintuplets, of Corbell, Ontario, have had things much easier. For them private nurses and special doctors have been employed. A private hospital and public funds have been used in their behalf.

No Unusual Aid

The Mahaney children have had nothing out of the ordinary done for them. Mr. and Mrs. William Mahaney are plain people, whose ambitions for their children are high, but the family income is not adequate for more than the plainer things of life. The four desire to complete high school course. Further than this no plans have been made for their future. John Douglas shows a marked liking for baseball, but his health at times has been indifferent.

The three girls take an interest in everything that other girls do. They do not have ambitions to go on the stage or even be movie stars. They are content with life as they find it and are quite willing to be known as individuals and not as part of the Mahaney quadruplets.

Will Not Exhibit

Mr. and Mrs. Mahaney have refused several offers to have their children publicly exhibited for gain. They have no ambition to make a great sum of money through such means, though the father is a carpenter and is not always at work. The parents have been the sole support of the children and no generous contributions have been received from governments or individuals. The mother has had almost the sole care of the quadruplets during the 11 years, although another child has been born since the birth of the quadruplets.

Birth Now Forgotten

Saint John received much free advertising once, but the wonder of their birth has passed. Few people to-day in the old seaport on Fundy's shore give even a thought to the Mahaney quadruplets, and their welfare causes no public concern. Probably they will settle down in Saint John and become just "good citizens" as their parents have been.

Back In Canada

Rupert Harvey, well-known British theatrical producer, arrived at Montreal this week on the Athenia and proceeded immediately to Toronto where he will take over the work of producing plays at the Hart House theatre this winter. The program will, it is believed, include two Shakespearean plays. Mr. Harvey was adjudicator in the Dominion Drama Festival contests held two years ago.

'Cuss' Words Taboo On Canadian Radio Mike - Men Reveal

Public Taste Requires Complete Absence of Profanity.

By FRED HOTSON
Central Press Canadian Writer

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—When is a word a swear word?

That's a puzzling question which has left radio broadcasting moguls of the United States in a terrible dilemma. Their appeals to the broadcasting brain trust having gone unanswered, they are now preparing to ask both houses of Congress for a definition.

In Canada it's different. The question of swear words hasn't become an issue at all. The Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission has never been called upon to give a ruling in the matter. Every individual station handles the problem in its own way.

To quote one of Canada's foremost radio producers, managers and announcers, here's how it's handled:

"Impress upon any average Canadian radio artist that he cannot afford to offend one single listener, and he'll refrain from using d—n, h—l, or any one of the dozen or more words which might be regarded as swearing, and which occasionally creep into radio script."

In addition, every radio station is expected to read the manuscripts of its artists before their programs are given a public airing. The artist can't get away with very much where that practice is adhered to.

But then there are the politicans, and other artists of the ad libbing fraternity. They're the boys who brought the swearing question to a head in the United States.

Well—believe it or not—Canadian radio stations have found our politicans to be very considerate of the public taste. They have never been known to deliberately offend anyone but their opponents.

Finally, Canadian radio stations exert the greatest care in barring words and phrases which involve references to the Deity. Unless they have definite sacred implications—they are taboo. And there are no exceptions to the rule.

It is said that one of Canada's oldest and largest stations is still repenting because the word "damn" went out on the ether waves through its transmitter on one occasion. Its management is doing everything possible to prevent a recurrence.

With principles like that, it is concluded that Canada will not have to face the swearing issue for many long years to come.

Young Hunter's Bag Thirty Hen Hawks

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 18.—A bag of thirty hen hawks, probably saving the lives of hundreds of chickens, was made by three young hunters of Port Dalhousie Beach. The dense fog, for some reason, drove the birds to the shoreline of Lake Ontario, and the youths, John McGrath, Harry Palmer and Walter Abraham, with shotguns knocked off the farm pests as fast as they emerged from the mist.

The birds flew high, but the aim of the marksmen was true. The shooting had to stop when the cartridge shells gave out, otherwise the bag would have been much larger. The dead hawks were the size of a small hen.

That they were actually hen hawks, congregating in a death rendezvous in so strange and unusual a fashion, was amply proved by their claws and sharp curving beaks. One of the wounded birds gashed Russell Hart's leg. Reeve Charley Ansell, who was shown the heap of carcases, attested to the birds being the real thing.

A Law Every Mother Should Know and Observe

Never Give Your Child An Unknown Remedy without Asking Your Doctor First

"MOTHER, never give your child a remedy you don't know all about, without asking your doctor first." This is the only safe rule. If mothers knew what scientists and doctors know, they would never violate it.

Child specialists, family physicians and writers on health subjects, all stand together on this point.

When it comes to the important — and frequently used — "milk of magnesia," you know what the qualified advice is. Doctors, for over 50 years have said, "PHILLIPS'

Milk of Magnesia . . . the safe remedy for your child."

For Phillips' is the result of over a half century of continuous laboratory research — is rated the finest science knows in its field.

So — always say Phillips' when you buy. And for your own peace of mind, see that your child gets what you ask for — when you are asked to accept an unknown preparation in place of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Safety for You and Yours

You can assist others by refusing to accept a substitute for the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Do this in the interest of yourself and your children.

BURNBRAE CHURCH OBSERVES NINETY-FOUTH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. S. M. Scott, B.A., of Picton, Gives Splendid Addresses.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BURNBRAE, Oct. 18. — Celebrating the 94th anniversary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian congregation of East Seymour, large crowds attended both morning and evening services, when Rev. S. M. Scott, B. A., of Picton, was the special minister for the occasion. His evening message, a vivid portrayal of the ever-present Christ, will have a lasting impression on many of his hearers.

Assisting Rev. Mr. Scott, was his father-in-law, Rev. Mr. Craig, who fifteen years ago, conducted a series of evangelistic services in St. Andrew's church. Many of his old friends and acquaintances here enjoyed meeting him once more.

The musical section of the anniversary celebration was ably presented by the church choir under the leadership f Mrs. S. V. Taylor. A duet by Miss Fern Wetherall and Malcolm Hutcheon, George Donald and George Fry, were numbers at the evening service which were exceptionally well given.

The thankoffering was exceptionally generous in view of economic conditions, slightly exceeding last years figures, and will total around $600.

The final event of the anniversary occasion will be staged Thursday evening when the ladies entertain at the annual fowl supper. This event always attracts large crowds, and this year will be no exception.

Visits King

cident reflected the temper of the meeting with its obvious desire to forget the nineteenth of June, close up the ranks by a new muster of the party, and get down to the business of rekindling the old Conservative spirit for the next engagement, which Mr. Stinson said would probably not materialize until next June or October.

Mr. Allan was tendered the appreciation of the association for his diligent leadership during the difficult period of his term as president since June, 1933.

The new slate of officers is as follows:

President—Wm. Goodfellow.

1st Vice-Pres.—Roy Dodge, Cobourg.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Fred K. Denyes, Brighton Township.

3rd Vice-Pres.—Milton McDonald, Cramahe Township.

Sec.-Treas.—A. R. Willmott, Cobourg.

Regional vice-presidents are to be appointed to the executive from their respective municipalities by November 1. A resolution by Mr. Skeans, seconded by Major J. M. Bygott, Campbellford, instructed the retiring vice-presidents to call meetings at once for the appointment of the executive officers whose names must be forwarded to the secretary by the first of next month.

A motion by Chas. Fowlds, seconded by Mr. Skeans, allotted one member of the executive to each municipality.

It was stated that Haldimand has had three representatives and Seymour two, and members declared that Haldimand was not sufficiently Tory to warrant that numerical strength in the executive.

President's Acceptance

In acknowledging his election as president, Mr. Goodfellow thanked the members of the association for the confidence they had affirmed by appointing him.

"I realize the responsibility that lies behind this office," he said, "and I know the work that Mr. Allan has done for a number of years on the executive and during his term as president. It is the duty of the Conservatives to gather around the old banner again. There have been times when the party went down to defeat, but it has always recovered, and will do so again. If you look over the history of Canada you will find that the Conservative party has been on the top of the heap most of the time.

A lot of men forgot what governments are for, and thought they were mostly to hand out jobs. As your president I will try to carry on for the good of the Conservative party, and not for any personal ambition or benefit. I have always been a Conservative, and our family also since my grandfather came from Ireland. If I can do anything for the party in this riding I will be glad to do it."

A Brighton Idea

The spirit of the meeting was to forget the setback of last June, and start out with fresh courage and a new foundation which will comprise the central association, and the proposed Women's Conservative Association and also a Young Conservative group.

R. J. Ross of Brighton, in a peppery speech, said that the "clean-up" should extend throughout the county from reeve down to the last pound-keeper. Presumably he had particular reference to the early elimination of Liberals.

"Down in Brighton if anyone who looks like a strong man comes out, our aim is to trim him and get him out of the road," said Mr. Ross. "The trouble is that you keep on voting for a man because he is a good fellow, and the first thing you know he has got a lot of strength."

The Ross reference to "down to the last pound-keeper" was greeted with laughter and applause. He regretted that he didn't have a radio handy to carry his message broadcast.

T. H. Stinson, K.C., M.P.

Mr. Stinson said he was in complete sympathy with the object of the annual meeting to strengthen its organization. He also spoke of the need of party loyalty. The man who criticized his party or standard-bearer usually turned out all right on election day, but in the meantime he had probably done more or less harm by his talk.

"Let us show a united front in the next election. I don't think it will come before July or October next year, but we can't be certain about that. Let us repair our fences, get organized and go out to win.

One thing that anonys me is to hear Liberals saying that Bennett has lost our markets and created high tariffs that are working against Canada.

When the history of the depression is written R. B. Bennett will stand out as a world figure in bringing this country through in the sound way he has done. M. King talks of the tariffs creating trade difficulties. As a matter of fact you find that the high tariffs against Canada were raised by other countries during the ten years Mr. King was in power, and during that same time we saw the world markets lost to Canada.

It is the Conservative government that has been regaining those markets during the last four years, especially since the Ottawa trade agreements were put into effect.

We should endeavour to place before the people that the high tariffs were raised against us and the world markets were lost during those ten years of the King regime.

It is really surprising what benefits have come from the Imperial agreements. Last year our farmers were getting from $6 to $8.50 for bacon while the farmers in the United States were getting only $3.25. Last winter our eggs were bringing from nine to twelve cents more than the eggs produced in the United States. We can say our prices in such primary commodities were better than in any other place in the world. But the Bennett government has been so busy saving the country that we have had no opportunity of telling the people what we have been doing.

If the people rightly understood the situation there would be no doubt what the result of the next election would be. I doubt if any other government this country has seen put as much useful legislation on the books, especially for the benefit of the farmers, as the Bennett Government.

The economic council of the League of Nations declared last year that Canada had gone further toward recovery than any other country in the world, and without anything like the expenditure of money as the United States has done. They will have spent in their program the amazing total of twenty billions of dollars. I don't know whether you can comprehend what one billion dollars is; but since the birth of Christ there has been only one million minutes, and the United States have been spending during the depression at the rate of $20 a minute for all those 1900 years. And I don't think they have accomplished as much as we have."

Mr. Beamish has made nine trips to Western Canada, this being Mrs. Beamish's second visit in eighteen years. Both noticed many changes and improvements, although these few past years without a crop have been most discouraging for the Westerners, who still keep a cheerful outlook, hoping for better years to follow. Their first stop was at their daughter Clara's Mrs. Russel King) of Stewart Valley, who planned a very enjoyable evening for them by inviting many neighbors, formerly of Hastings locality. Among them were John Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart of the village. Mr. George Oakman also Mr. R. Stewart, who paid a lengthy visit here during the past winter. They then visited their sons James and Thomas, their daughter Ella (Mrs. Gibbons) and their son-in-law, Mr. Robert Pulfer. A pleasant surprise was afforded them on Thanksgiving Day while visiting their son Thomas, when the family all met together for a real Thanksgiving with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Beamish, although leaving their family in Western Canada were welcomed home by their sons and daughters here in Eastern Canada, Arthur, Donald, Mabel Mrs. V. Oliver) and Mary (Mrs. H. Morrow), all of Hastings and Gordon of St. Catharines.

Apsley

A full house greeted the production of the three act comedy "Pickle Fortune," on Tuesday evening at the parish hall, presented by the Apsley Young People under the auspices of the United Church. While the entire cast are to be complimented on the manner in which they portrayed their individual roles, special credit is due to Doris Whitmore for the excellent manner in which she acted the difficult part of the aged old lady, Mrs. Merry, and the same might be said of the acting of Mrs. McGregor as the vivacious (Tony) Warren; and also of Rev. Gordon Porter, who was an outstanding success in his double role of butler and multi-millionaire, and was indeed the life of the play. Very little prompting was necessary and the players well earned the success the production received.

The full cast was as follows: — Mrs. Samuel Warren, Miss M. Boyce; Gloria Warren, Mrs. Norman Wilson; "Tony" Warren, Mrs. J. McGregor; Roxanna Blossom, Miss Bell; Sadie Tweed, Mrs. Manning; Mrs. Merry, Doris Whitmore; Lily, a maid, Miss Ashenhurst; Maggie, a maid, Eva Tucker; Cupper, a butler, Rev. G. Porter; Emmerson Hawley, Norman Wilson; Brant Allen, J. McGregor; Steven, a butler, Donald Hester.

"SPIRIT" OF JOSE MARIA GOT $400

Soochit Maharaj, Treasure Seeker, Tossed His Roll Into Grave.

SUSPECTS ADVISER

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Oct. 18 (CP Cable).—Soochit Maharaj wants to get back his $400 from the spirit of Jose Maria.

Soochit, a Hundu priest, was looking for a $46,000 hoard of buried treasure. He wanted some supernatural help, he says, so he asked Budsey Williams to do what he could.

Williams, according to the priest, took him to a graveyard one night, and invoked the spirit of Jose Maria. From an open grave a sepulchral voice intoned directions for finding the hoard—and reminded Coochit not to forget the $400 fee.

The Hindu says he tossed the money into the grade, but didn't find the spirit's directions of much help. Now he claims the "spirit" was really a man hidden in the open grave.

He doesn't know just how to go about locating "Jose Maria" and his money, but he's compromised by charging Williams with obtaining money under false pretences.

'King Kong' Man Who Whipped 15 Italians Dead Victim of Former Sweetheart's Knife

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. (CP).—Black Harlem is burdened with black gloom to-day.

The "King Kong" of New York's Negro belt, Willie Smith, who reputedly whipped 15 Italians when he had broken a finger, is dead.

Police said Mary Williams, 25-year-old colored woman admitted plunging Willie's knife between his ribs and into his stomach Tuesday night. They held her for a homicide hearing. They said they couldn't learn the reason for the killing.

Harlemites pointed out that Mary was Willie's former sweetheart. They emphasized "former" and couldn't understand why any other motive for the slaying was necessary.

Willie stood six feet eight inches and his fighting feats made him a hero in the colored colony. They said he only used his bare hands—they were as big as footballs—and were suspended on arms that dropped them almost to his knees. That night he outslugged 15 Italians in a street brawl. They also spoke admiringly of the time he beat a longshoreman, only to have the latter fracture the colored giant's skull with a two-by-four beam. They said Willie staggered a little from the blow of the beam, then walked to a hospital. In three weeks "he was good as new."

Police knew Willie well. They said he lived by selling "cooked whisky" at 25 cents the pint, and on the proceeds of dice games. When a call came that Willie was in trouble they aways sent four policemen to bring him in.

They too, respected "King Kong" but it wasn't the adulation in which the colored folk held the now dead "hero."

Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no parting tears are shed.

METEOR SPRAYS HOT FRAGMENTS

Explosion It Neared the Earth at Sussex, N. J.

YOUTHS SCATTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(A.P.) —A meteor, coursing through a moonlit sky, came to earth and exploded near Sussex, N.J., last night, casting off a shower of sparks and hot fragments.

Civilian Conservation Camp Corps youths, gathered about the war memorial in High Point Park, six miles north of Sussex, fled for cover as the meteor hissed out of the heavens and scattered its fragments over hundreds of suare yards.

"When it exploded there was a slight detonation and then we heard the fragments rattling down like hail," said Chief John Paugh of Sussex police, who was near the monument. "It seemed that all of the fragments buried themselves in the earth for we could not find any in the immediate vicinty."

The phenomenon was sighted from the Metropolitan area about 9.15 p. m., E.S.T., the meteor passing over the Hudson River from east to west and illumining the palisades like a giant Roman candle. It appeared to be low in the sky and about one-quarter the size of the moon.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

It is not so difficult to formulate a rattling good diet for the family with an ample purse. With every shift to a lower income level, changes have to be made in the foods purchased.

It is to direct this plan of purchase on the lower level that Mr. Gove Hambridge's book, "Your Meals and Your Money," is written. Certainly a splendid idea in this year of the depression, and since the account is based on the work of Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, senior food economist in the bureau of home economics, it is authoritative.

The problem is to furnish a balanced, complete and perfectly healthful ration at the lowest possible cost. When people unfamiliar with the basis of dietetics begin to economize on their diet, the danger is that while they will pick a diet that satisfies their hunger, it may be inadequate in some respect, and will lead to deficiency diseases.

Dr. Stiebeling was able to plan adequate diets ranging in cost for a moderately active man, from 17 cents (0.169 to be exact) a day to 50 cents a day; $62 a year to $185 a year.

I will discuss these plans in more detail tomorrow. Here let us look at some general principles.

First, as every good dietician knows, the four fundamental needs must be satisfied: (1) enough energy—fats, starches and sugars; (2) enough protein; (3) minerals; (4) vitamins.

Under the first heading—to supply adequate energy—the major economy in diets of lower cost as against those of higher cost is made by using more grain products.

Grain products furnish fuel more cheaply than any other food, because in general grain is the cheapest food to grow, harvest, store, preserve and convert into a form fit to eat. Thus the thrifty are known everywhere for their grain food: the poor Oriental for rice, the Italian for spaghetti, the Scot for porridge, the American Indian maize. Lately Manchuria has become Manchukuo, because it is a fertile land for soy beans. And soy beans furnish a splendidly adequate diet.

The only food which competes with grain as the staff of life is the potato. As Dr. Sherman says, in dire need the potato may serve as a substitute for all other vegetables and fruits.

Other economies come from the kinds of vegetables and fruits used. You must have vegetables and fruits, but when funds are limited, the cheaper ones can be used—cabbage, carrots, canned tomatoes, dried beans and peas, dried fruits.

In furnishing protein, while some animal protein is essential, at least 75 per cent of the protein need can be obtained from the cheaper vegetable proteins—beans, again soy beans, and wheat.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

You can use some of your new pickles to serve with this tuna and celery dish. It needs a spicy relish.

Today's Recipes.

Escalloped Tuna and Celery.—Three tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, two cups milk, two-thirds cup tuna, one-half cup diced celery, cooked; two tablespoons chopped pimentos, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one teaspoon finely chopped parsley. Melt butter and add flour, when blended add milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Stir constantly. Add rest of ingredients, pour into buttered, shallow baking dish. Cover with crumbs and brown.

Bread and Butter Pickles.—Thirty medium-sized pickles sliced thinly, ten onions, sliced thinly. Soak over night in brine made with one cup of salt and enough water to dissolve it. Drain. Boil the following together: Five cups vinegar, five cups brown sugar, one cup water, two teaspoons celery salt, two teaspoons ginger, one teaspoon turmeric. Place the pickles in jars, cover with the liquid mixture which has been brought to a boil, and seal immediately.

Slender and Well-Shaped Ankles Are Assets in Slit Skirt Mode

KITTY CARLISLE

By GLADYS GLAD

Remember those peek-a-boo shirtwaists that were considered so hotsy-totsy in granny's heyday? They were regarded as quite daring in those times. But I wonder what the belles of that era would think of the fall styles of '34? For, according to a late cable from Paris, these new fall styles are going to be plenty peek-a-boo!

It is on skirts mostly that this new effect is being lavished. The skirts are snug and sheath-like, but are daringly slit in various places. Some are slit in the back, some in front, and some on the sides. And all of them are going to afford plenty of ankle exposure, whether you like it or not.

Slender, well-shaped ankles have almost always been highly admired assets. And they're just as much to be desired in this day of slit skirts as they were when skirts were conspicuous by their scantiness. For the slit skirt that discloses a pair of beefy ankles is bound to lose half its grace and swankiness.

When the largeness of the ankles is due to their actual bony structure, of course, there is little or nothing that can be done about it. And when the ankles are abnormally puffy, due to some acid condition of the system, a physician's advice is required for correction. But when the ankles are of an unpretty thickness due to an accumulation of fatty tissues, the following exercises practised vigorously every day will prove most effective in slendering them:

Sit on a chair, holding the muscles of both knees taut. Cross the left knee over the right, with the toesof the left foot pointing downward, and hold the right foot in tiptoe position. Then make imaginary circles with the left foot. Reverse, putting the left foot in tiptoe position and circling the right foot.

Stand erect, legs together, hands on hips. Then, running in place, try to kick your buttocks with your heels. Your ankles should receive plenty of flexing during this exercise.

Lie on your back on the floor, and bring your knees up to your chest. Then make a complete forward circle with each leg, alternating them in bicycle riding fashion.

Cosmetics.

Blondie: I think that a soft peach shade of powder, soft orange rouge and light lipstick would blend harmoniously with your coloring.

EDITOR'S NOTE: To obtain Miss Glad's pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" write, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling.

FACTS AND FANCIES.

Keep Silver Shining.

Don't wait until the day of your party to clean the silver and see if you have sufficient china and glassware. These things are just as important as the things to eat and should be looked after just as systematically.

White Hosiery.

Cold water and white suds and a dark place to dry means keeping the white silk stockings really white. They are so ugly when yellowed and this precaution should be taken. If washed after each wearing it is not difficult to get the soil out with colder water.

Gingham With Maple.

Washable red, blue or green gingham desk sets are good with maple—kind of light in feeling like the furniture itself. These cute desk sets consist of a big blotter with corners bound in the checked material, a hand blotter, inkwell and paper cutter, all with tops covered in gingham. They can be washed with soap and water, and the sets are nice for the schoolgirl's room, or the odd guest room in the country house.

PLENTY OF HOLDINGS.

NELSON, B.C., Oct. 18.—(C.P.)—While Doukhobors in Nelson know nothing of the proposal of Peter Verigin to sell holdings on the Christian community in Saskatchewan, they declared to-day the proposal to move several thousand Doukhobors to British Columbia lands would cause little concern. They pointed out a great deal of the present British Columbia holdings are uncleared and uncultivated and room could be found easily for new farmers.

Speeches were made by past presidents Mrs. Watt, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Booth and Past Grands Mesdames Flack, Williams, Brown, also Mr. F. Thomas, Past District Deputy Grand Master, who reviewed the business at the institution of the local Lodge, he and Mr. Thomas having instructed the new officers in their work on that occasion. At the conclusion of the Lodge meeting, a delicious banquet was served in the dining-room, where the tables were decorated with Autumn leaves, silver dishes filled with grapes and apples and pumpkins holding lighted candles. The head table was centered by a beautiful birthday cake which was decorated with twenty-eight candles in the pink and green colors of the Lodge. Mrs. Watts cut the cake, wishing at the same time for many years of success and happiness for the Rebekahs. PRETTY SCHOOL WEAR

Wool crepe prints have undying charm with schoolgirls. In navy blue and red coloring was today's darling dress. Plain navy blue crepe made the collar, cuffs and bow.

Adorable, to, is one of the criss-cross patterned woolens, or a plain wool crepe with checked or striped crepe for its trim.

Just a bit more dressy, but quite suitable for today's simple and charming pattern, are the tie silks.

Rayon novelties that suggest wool, challis prints, tweedy cotton plaids, etc., are also attractive.

Style No. 3326 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards of 39-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

The soup tureen has been relegated for so many years to the highest shelf of the china closet, where it was not even so much as seen that its return, not alone for its practical use, but as a decorative feature for a dining room is something of a surprise. But such is the fact. This turn of affairs, however, is quite in accord with the reappearance of any style that has been out. It comes back in some new guise, with some different twist, and so has its novel element as one reason for its renaissance. The soup tureen, today finds itself in demand for many another dish than soup. What these are will be discussed later in this column. Today it is enough to consider the ornamental possibilities of the tureen whatever its substance, silver, china sem-porcelain, etc.

* * * * * * *

Soup tureens have always been prominent dishes, large in size, and often beautiful in shape and style. Much artistic ingenuity has been expended in fashioning them to be distinctive, so that they give grace to a table to perfection. One of the handsomest styles is the octagonal pedestal tureen with its separate standard having an idented place for the base of the spreading stem of the tureen to fit. These standards are not insignificant but large as chop dishes or medium-sized platters, as befits the holder of so conspicuous a thing as a tureen. Oval tureens are next in ornamental value in the regulation shapes. There are fantastic shapes in tureen ensembles wrought in silver which are choice and costly. But whatever the style a soupe tureen is a piece of stemware as it has a pedestal supporting the capacious containers, which stem is in one with the tureen itself. It is the standard tray-like portion which is separate frequently making the ensemble in three parts, standard, tureen, and cover, instead of the more usual two-piece tureen of dish and cover.

* * * * * * *

A soup tureen, now, may be a centerpiece for a dining table, during a meal or between meals, and have no other frunction other than that of ornament. Such a tureen must be decorative of itself. It may be of choice ware without ornamentation save for its beauty of form and tone, or it may be rimmed with a border contrasting in color or having a design on it also. Or again the tureen may be embellished over its entire surface.

* * * * * * *

When used for a centerpiece during a meal, the tureen may be flanked by two lighted candles, or have four about it. Or vases of flowers may be used instead of the candles, not that either candles or vases are necessary. They are merely attractive adjuncts. When the tureen is minus a separate standard, it may be on a mirror which would reflect the shimmering light of candles or the gay beauty of flowers, if used with the tureen.

QUEBEC RURAL TEACHERS MAY GET SALARY RAISE

MONTREAL, Oct. 18. —(C P)—Small salaries paid rural school teachers in the Province of Quebec may shortly be a thing of the past. According to a report here, provincial authorities have decided to issue an ultimatum to various rural boards to increase salaries or receive a lower annual provincial grant.

The special committee which investigated the situation found teachers received $200 and even $150 a year, out of which they had to pay board and lodging. The committee recommended to the government that drastic means be taken to increase the teacher's salaries.

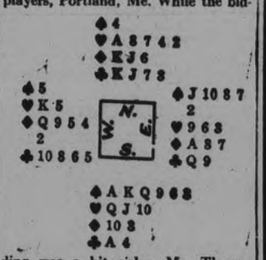
FIGHTING FOR AN EXTRA TRICK.

One of the thrills of the game is fighting to win one trick more than an ordinary player can see in the cards. The hand to-day was played by John B. Thomes, one of the most active players, Portland, Me. While the bidding was a bit risky, Mr. Thomes played the hand beautifully.



Bidding went: South, 2-spades; North, 2-no trumps; South, 4-spades, ending the auction. Two-spades for an opening bid was not justified, even if it did come out all right. The hand is worth a small slam at hearts. The proper response to the opening bid was 3-hearts, to show quick trick values. The 2-no trumps was misleading, denying possession of high honor values.

The opening lead was the 4 of diamonds. East's ace won the trick, but he was hard put for a good return. Finally East led the 9 of hearts, to beat the second best card of the suit held in dummy. Declarer's 10 forced West's K. Dummy won the trick. The third and fourth tricks were won with the Q and K of trumps. When West showed out of spades, the declarer took his Q of hearts, then fearing a ruff, he led back his 10 of diamonds, overtook with dummy's J. Upon dummy's K of diamonds, South discarded his last remaining heart.

Now the declarer led and ruffed a low heart from dummy, to reduce declarer's trumps to the same length as East's, to work the grand coup.

The ace of clubs won the ninth trick. Dummy's K of clubs took the tenth trick. This left East with the J-10-8 of trumps only, for his last 3 cards. South held the A-9-6 of spades for his last 3 cards. It made no difference what was led from dummy. Both East and South had to ruff any lead made. All South had to do to pick up 2 of the 3 remaining tricks was to be careful. If East split his equals, by ruffing with the 10 or J, South could let East have his second and last trick. While South must win the next 2 tricks, with his A-9, sitting back of East's J-8. If East ruffed with his 8, retaining the J-10, South's 9 would win one trick and his ace must win another trick. The grand coup was bound to give the declarer 5-odd. To an enthusiast, like Mr. Thomes, winning that added trick gave more pleasure than winning a dozen rubbers through routine play.

I wonder how many players sitting South would have noted the possibility of winning an added trick, and played the hand correctly to accomplish it.

SHOPPING WITH ANNE

Green accessories are smart this season. With a yellow beige ensemble, a very smartly dressed woman we met the other day was wearing a bottle green felt beret, green shoes, and carrying a green bag. We do not need to add she looked very charming indeed. She informed us that she had purchased her entire outfit with the exception of her shoes in the city.

Tree bark cloth is one of the newest fabrics for coats this Fall and it strangely enough resembles just what its name implies. A lovely model in this new weave in a deep brown shade with a Fitch collar and arm trimming is on display in one of our local stores. The coats are straighter and slimmer than ever this year. Some lovely swagger models are being shown in heavy nubby tweeds and they are very snugly lined with fur to make them very warm for the cold days to come.

Keep your head up and your neck and chin slender if you would fit smartly into the present fashion picture. Stylists and beauty experts say no fat necks and double chins are permissible, but one must have a queenly carriage, with your head well balanced on a swan-like neck, if you would be chic. Do you know they have a very successful class for this very thing at our own Y.W.C.A. for business and professional women. It is very interesting and helps to keep you fit. It is well worth looking into and also provides a splendid and healthful way to spend one night of the week.

* * *

Do you know what seems to be the smartest and newest style feature of this Autumn? The new three-quarter length suits that are being displayed. We just went into raptures over one we tried on the other day. It was fashioned of light weight beige tweed, the coat was lined with burgundy corduroy. With this went a short-sleeved jumper of the same color corduroy, and it was fastened with dull gold bars looped into cord. There were gauntlet gloves to match and a fedora hat in a deep brown shade would make this the perfect costume.

* * *

Paris says of hats—while crowns are higher, except in those low twisted velvet turbans, all settle comfortably on the head without elastic. Isn't that good news. No need now to worry about windy days.

* * *

The velveteen suit is so popular and serviceable that every wardrobe should boast of one. They are lovely in any of the new shades of brown, red or black.

* * *

Metallic tops give some of the formal velvet frocks an informal touch so that they may be worn at less ceremonious functions. Can you imagine anything more lovely than a Russian blouse carried out in gold lame or metallic cloth and worn over a black velvet skirt.

* * *

Now dear readers, I do wish I could get you so enthused over our Cooking Supplement, that we are planning to publish within the next week or two, that we would be just swamped with the number of recipes that you would send in. We have received a splendid number already but would like many more. We will be looking for yours. Don't fail us, please.

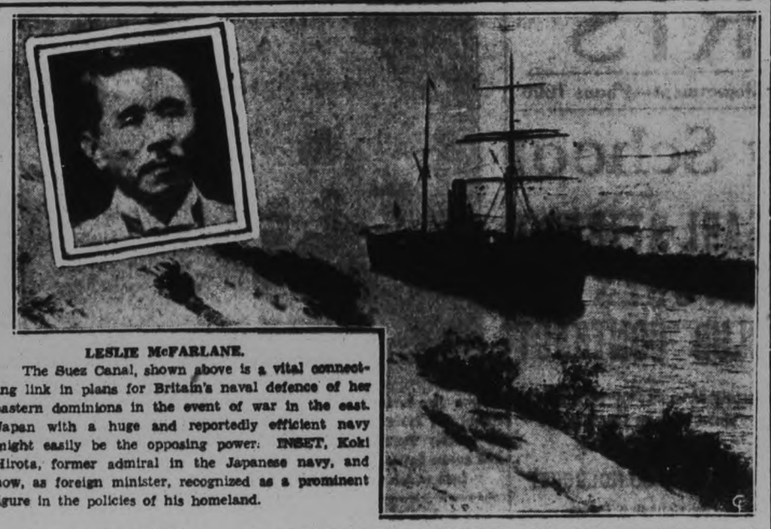
CHINESE EXPERT SAYS EASTERN WAR WOULD MENACE BRITISH EMPIRE

Singapore and Suez Canal Open to Crippling Attack



LESLIE McFARLANE.

The Suez Canal, shown above is a vital connecting link in plans for Britain's naval defence of her eastern dominions in the event of war in the east. Japan with a huge and reportedly efficient navy might easily be the opposing power. INSET, Koki Hirota, former admiral in the Japanese navy, and now, as foreign minister, recognized as a prominent figure in the policies of his homeland.

By JOHN GOETTE,
Central Press Canadian Correspondent.

PEIPING, Oct. 18. — Returning from an inspection tour of the Pacific rim of the Far East, Chen Kungpo, Chinese Minister of Industries, predicts that the outbreak of a Far Eastern war will be followed by:

1.—The sinking of merchant ships in the Suez Canal to prevent the main British fleet from quick passage into the Pacific.

2.—The possible destruction of Britain's naval and air base at Singapore by an air attack.

3.—The blowing up of the petroleum fields of Dutch Borneo to prevent them from falling into the hands of an enemy.

Chen's predictions were based on the assumption that Britain and Japan would be aligned in hostile camps.

Interviewed Immigrants.

The 44-year-old Cabinet officer, a graduate of Columbia University, was dispatched on a tour that carried him through French Indo-China, the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, and the Malay Peninsula. In all these islands he talked with leaders of the Chinese colonies, representatives of 3,000,000 emigrants from the homeland. Of the Philippines, he said:

"They are so busily occupied with their independence movement that they do not have time to think about the next war.

"French Indo-Chinese people either think that the next war will not concern them or that France has already made plans to cope with it.

"The Malay Peninsula and the Dutch East Indies do not find themselves in such a happy position. Should the Suez Canal be blocked, the British fleet could do nothing immediately about the events in the Indian Ocean. During that period India might refuse to recognize British rule, and the British oil monopoly in Persia might change hands."

Neutrality Impossible.

"Upon the outbreak of another Russo-Japanese war, there will be three policies for China to pursue, namely (1) allying herself with Russia, (2) allying herself with Japan, and (3) remaining neutral. The first policy has to be rejected because the Japanese occupation of the four Chinese eastern provinces would prevent close Chinese-Russian military co-operation.

"The second policy has to be rejected. Since Japan's occupation of the four eastern provinces, how can China ally with her To select Japan as an ally of China is against human nature.

"The third policy also impracticable. China has not yet been able to maintain neutrality in the wars that were previously fought in the Pacific. During the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-05, China declared neutrality, but the war was fought out on her soil. During the early stages of the World War, China declared neutrality, but in 1915 Japan attacked Tsingtao.

"If Japan wins in the next Russo-Japanese war, she not only would treat China as something in her pocket, but also she would immediately become the mistress of the Pacific. Japan would also dominate the Indian Ocean and Great Britain would have to lose her commerce in China, Hongkong and Singapore, in spite of the latter's naval base, which would be exposed. In the circumstances, if Japan emerged victorious there would be the maximum of harm and not one single advantage to British interests.

British Empire Menaced.

"Should Russia win the struggle, she not only would expand in an eastern direction, and immediately India and Persia would be affected. These two countries, figuratively speaking, are two legs of Great Britain's round table. Once they are shaken, no Britisher would predict what might be the danger to the Empire itself.

"Thus England is also in an unenviable position. The naval base at Singapore will not be completed before 1939. Nobody can tell when the next war will come. Even if nothing happens during the next five years, British insecurity would be felt all the same if the Philippines attain their full measure of independence and the American navy is withdrawn from the Far East."

VILLAGE HONORS PREACHER-POET

Ven. Archdeacon J. M. Almond of Montreal Officiates at Memorial Service.

FOR NORWOOD BROTHERS

HUBBARDS, N.S., Oct. 18. (CP) Two sons of the rectory, one a physician who gave his life fighting a dread epidemic, his brother a famed Nova Scotia preacher and poet who died two years ago, were honored at a simple but impressive service here when a new chancel and organ were dedicated to their memory in little St. Luke's Church overlooking Hubbards Bay.

The medical practioner, Dr. Edmund Norwood used to play the organ for divine services when he labored amongst the people of this seaside village. Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood preached his first and last sermon in this same church which was led for so many years by their father, Rev. Dr. Joseph Norwood.

The preacher-poet, rector of St. Bartholemew's Church, New York, had planned the memorial to his brother and had opened a fund for that purpose, but he died before completing his task and his friends decided to include his name in the memorial.

"The Norwoods are a remarkable family with a rare gift of friendship" declared Ven. J. M. Almond, D.C.L., C.M.G., C.B.E., Archdeacon of Montreal who presided at the dedication service.

"Robert Norwood was a compelling preacher; he was a poet of the finest sort, but these things, as wonderful as they were, were second to his gift for making friends. Robert Norwood's winning personality drew all hearts to him. He touched the lives of countless people, making them richer and fuller by the example of his own upright life", continued the distinguished clergyman who was Chaplain-general to the Canadian forces during the Great War.

Dr. Norwood's close relationship with the farmers and fisherfolk in the smaller communities of Nova Scotia had developed a kindly human touch. That capacity for friendship had established him in the hearts of the people of his native land and had endeared him to the congregation of St. Bartholemew's in New York.

"He still lives in the hearts of all who knew him. His unquenchable spirit lives on" Ven. Archdeacon Almond declared.

Prayers were said by the rector of St. Luke's, Rev. Alleyne C. Bradshaw, and the scriptures were read by Dr. A. H. Moore, president of King's College.

Ernest Melville presided at the new reed organ. He and Edgar Henson of the Maritime Cabinet Works, Halifax, designed and executed the new chancel.

Sought Interview With David Meisner

DETROIT, Oct. 18 (C.P.).—James Scott McLinn, deputy clerk in the Detroit traffic court, will not be permitted to interview a county prisoner in any capacity, according to Sheriff Thomas Wilcox. McLinn was arrested after he represented himself as a newspaperman in order to gain an interview with David Meisner, held here in connection with the kidnapping of John Labatt, London brewer. He was released with a warning.

McLinn is said to have admitted suggesting to Meisner that he would employ Cecil Croll, Windsor lawyer, to act for him.

BEHIND the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 17.—The technicolor people have invented a way to make an actress blush on the screen. The machine, which for lack of a better name is now called the "mood light", is being used for the first time on Ann Harding in the Walter Wanger production, "Peacock Feathers".

Ann Harding

In addition to blushing, it produces other startling effects, such as the greenish shades of mal-de-mer (seasickness, to you and me), the dark eye circles of the morning after, the pasty-white shades of fear or anger and so on into nearly every other emotion that can be associated with color.

HERE GOES to let you in on a secret. Laura Harding, who is Katharine Hepburn's closest pal, has donned masculine clothes and is playing a Scottish soldier in Kate's new picture, "The Little Minister". To keep the joke to a small circle, Laura wore a mustache, but when she and Kate let their amusement get away from them and had pictures taken together, the secret leaked out.

Unless the scenes find their way to the cutting room floor, you'll actually see Laura in the picture. Look for her among the soldiers who patrol the weavers' village.

"The Last Gentleman", George Arliss' second film under his new starring contract with 20th Century Pictures, comes to the Capitol Theatre Friday night and will prove perhaps the most delightful and certainly the most unusual comedy the talkies have produced.

As Cabot Barr, a wealthy, irascible, family-proud old New Englander, who calls together his relatives in the vague hope of finding a worthy heir, Arliss offers another of his rich and perfect portraits.

Immediately the members of the family are assembled under his roof, he proceeds to insult and humiliate them and accuse them of being after his money, for the mere fiendish glee of seeing them squirm.

Among those present are Edna May Oliver, as his sniffling but likable daughter, and Frank Albertson as Allan, her adopted son; Janet Beecher as the widow of Cabot's late son and Charlotte (Alice In Wonderland) Henry as her young daughter, Marjorie; and Donald Meek as Judd, Cabot's only living son, a thorough-going scoundrel who has been secretly recording his father's eccentricities in the hope of proving him insane and inheriting his estate.

TAKING HER morning canter in Topanga canyon the other day, Gloria Stuart heard a child sobbing in some underbrush. She dismounted, and found little Marjorie Jean Morris, seven years old, who had wandered away from a church picnic. Fifteen minutes later, the actress encountered a distraught Sunday school superintendent, who was heading a search for the missing tot. He insisted on Gloria revealing her identity and when she did the superintendent and little Marjorie got the thrill of their life. The star has received a note of appreciation signed by the entire membership of the Sunday school class.

Canada's Prosperity Is Aided By Britain

Government statistics published at Ottawa show that Britain's purchases of Canadian lumber, and of many other products are increasing in a most remarkable fashion. It is evident that these purchases are already an important factor in reducing our unemployment burden and in helping us towards lowered taxation and greater prosperity.

The important point for us to remember is that unless we buy from Britain, she cannot buy from us—that the more we buy from her, the more she can buy from us. So it is plain self-interest on the part of all of us, if we are going to buy anthracite coal, to buy Scotch anthracite. This anthracite is perhaps the finest in the world. The high heating value makes it exceptionally economical. It is clean and easily handled, nonclinging and has little ash. If you haven't tried it before, do so. A number of our local dealers, who have on order a large consignment of Scotch anthracite, tell us that this British product has already won a large share of the Canadian market—largely on the grounds of its economy.

Piles Go Quick

Under Dr. Leonhardt's Internal Method.

Large numbers of sufferers from itching, bleeding, or protruding piles have learned that quick and lasting relief can be accomplished with an internal medicine, when salves do not help and wish is to escape operation.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts lifeless. To end Piles an internal medicine should be used to stimulate the circulation and help to heal the affected parts.

Dr. Leonhardt was one of the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for large numbers of patients with a fine record of success and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID tablets from their own druggist, with money-back if not joyfully satisfied with the help one bottle gives.

So isn't it wise when other ways fail to go to McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store, who say: "No matter what kind of Piles you have, one bottle of HEM-ROID tablets must show you the safe, clean way to get rid of your Pile misery or money-back."

HOCKEY SCHOOL FOR AMATEURS OPENS MONDAY

Simon-pures Have Only to Present Permission Card to Gain Admission.

LEAFS START GRIND.

(By The Canadian Press)

The hockey school innovation, originated by Lester Patrick at Winnipeg and approved by amateur authorities, has caught on. There won't be another school this Fall as pretentious as the Ice Ranger schoolroom, but London Tecumsehs, International League champions, plan to hold classes starting Monday.

* * *

All an amateur has to do to gain admission to Toots Holway's London training camp is present a card of membership from the amateur people. He will be received with open arms by Boss Holway and all the other Tecs, because every professional on the London roster is going to assist in giving lesson.

* * *

School will open each morning at nine o'clock. The Tecs hope to discover a prospect or two worth signing and the amateurs hope to learn a thing or two worth knowing.

* * *

At Galt, Ont., Toronto Maple Leafs opened their training grind this morning with early setting-up exercises. Dick Irvin's method of getting his boys in shape is to keep them outdoors playing golf and softball and such, with only light ice workouts on the side for a few days. It has proved successful in the past. The Leafs got such an early lead in their N.H.L. group last season, that first place was conceded them by Christmas.

* * *

The Leafs will train at Galt until a few days before the campaign opens on Nov. 9. They are booked for a few exhibition contests early in November.

Just As Easy As Tossing Uppercuts

Jess Willard, ex-heavyweight boxing champ of the world, is taking lessons in the art of lawn bowling from a retired banker, M. D. Muir, St. Catharines, Ont., at St. Petersburg, Florida, where the big boy is passing the season with his family.

EARL SEIBERT REFUSES N.Y. CLUB CONTRACT

Strong Man of Rangers Wants More Money for Starry Defense Work.

HELLER ALSO HOLDOUT.

(By Canadian Press)

If there is any question about the potential value to the New York Rangers of Defenceman Earl Seibert it does'nt exist in Seibert's mind. The big Kitchener boy is definitely a holdout again. Already he has refrained from signing two contracts profffered by the Ranger manager and so insistent is he that better terms must be offered that he is not preparing to go to the Winnipeg training camp until they come along in the mail.

Seibert took a rigid stand on salary matters a year ago and finally signed just in time to get in on the opening game. He immediately proved himself one of the best defencemen in the N.H.L.

There was a time when Ching Johnson was the bulwark of the Rangers' rearguard, but not any more. Seibert is the strong man, a prolific scorer as well as a fine defensive player. Mr. Patrick probably knows his worth—or he will before the contract difficulties are settled.

Ott Heller, Kitchener's other Ranger, also refused the first Patrick overture but he is heading westward anyway, confident the money matter will be settled satisfactorily.

Eddie Gerrard and his St. Louis Eagles, training on the old stamping ground of Ottawa, held two brisk workouts. The former Maroon manager has 30 candidates in camp and is going to keep most of them munder his eye for several days more. Then he will start thinning out the squad.

"Eagles" as a name for the St. Louis club was decided on yesterday. The former Senators will wear white jerseys, trimmed with blue and a red eagle on the breast.

NIAGARA FALLS MAY BE WITHOUT SENIOR O. H. A. HOCKEY THIS YEAR

Desertion by Stars and Financial Situation Provides Serious Situation.

GENE FRASER THROUGH.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 18.—There is a possibility of Niagara Falls not having representation in the senior series of the O.H.A. this season, and the general hockey outlook at this point is none too bright.

Desertion by players and the possibility of the arena not operating are the main reasons for this condition, and, while certain interested parties are trying to resurrect things, their task looks hopeless.

A public meeting at the City Hall, called by the arena bondholders, attracted more than one hundred, and the whole affair was aired.

J. W. Butters, representing the bondholders, outlined the losses sustained by them last season, and asked for suggestions as to how the situation could be bettered. He hinted that they might be forced to close the building, but hoped that some arrangements could be made to avert this.

Gene Fraser stated that the playing material here would not warrant a senior team, and reported that he and J. E. Lawson had tried to arrange an amalgamation with Port Colborne. This had not materialized.

Fraser also stated that he was through with hockey.

PENALTY SHOT RULE WILL BE SNIPER'S DELIGHT IN MAJORS

National League's Latest Innovation Provides for Free Shot at Net.

TRIPPING A PLAYER.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—National Hockey League coaches, busy at their pre-season training camps throughout the country, are casting about for the most dependable snipers on their clubs to make full use of the new penalty shot rule. The new rule, reminiscent of soccer's free shot, was adopted at a meeting of the league last month as a penalty for tripping a player to prevent him scoring a goal.

Final terms and conditions of the new regulation are being overhauled preparatory to the opening of the schedule on Nov. 8.

The rule is designed to punish a defending player who trips or otherwise fouls an attacking player to prevent him getting a clear shot on the goal, when the attacker has eluded all players but the man who fouls him.

Calls For Free Shot

The offense calls for a free, or penalty shot to be taken at the offender's goal by any player of the opposite team not serving a penalty at the time. All other players but the player making the shot and the defending goalkeeper must retire to the side of the rink. The puck will be placed on a spot in the centre of a 10-foot circle 38 feet out from the goalmouth. The player making the penalty shot has his choice of taking the shot from a stationary position, or may take the shot in full stride, providing he shoots before the puck has left the 10-foot circle.

The anxious defending goaler must be stationary not more than one foot in front of his goalline at the time the shot is taken. If the penalty-shooter touches the puck after it has crossed the 10-foot circle line and scores, the goal does not count. If there is a score, the puck is faced off at centre ice, as in an ordinary goal. If the shot misses the cage or is stopped by the goaler, the puck will be faced off on the goalline 15 feet to one side of the nearest goalpost.

Another Free Shot

Should the goaler violate the rules concerning his position and actions at the time the shot is taken, another free shot is awarded. If the shooter makes contact with the puck after it has left the circle, he does not receive another attempt.

VINCE BARTON SOLD TO BALTIMORE CLUB

NEWARK, N.J., October 18.—Sale of Vince Barton, veteran outfielder, and Sol Mishkin, first baseman, to Baltimore Orioles was announced yesterday by the Newark International League baseball team. The purchase price was not revealed.

Barton, a left-handed hitter, tied Woody Abernathy of Baltimore for home runs in the league this past year, each hitting 32, but Vince's batting average was only .264.

COCHRANE IS GIVEN BONUS FOR INSPIRING LEADERSHIP

DETROIT, October 18. — Mickey Cochrane, who in his first year as a manager piloted Detroit Tigers from the second division to within a game of winning the world's baseball championship, yesterday was the possessor of a $10,000 bonus from the Detroit Baseball Company.

The bonus was awarded Cochrane for his inspiring leadership as a manager and his ability during the season as a player. Cochrane, whose contract has one more year to run, is reliably reported to be receiving a $26,000 a year salary. He was purchased a year ago from Philadelphia Athletics for $100,000 plus the contract of a reserve Tiger catcher.

TERRIERS SCORE FOUR GOALS IN THIRD FOR 14-13 VICTORY

Lacrosse Squads Set Championship Battle Pace in Vancouver Series.

NIP AND TUCK.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP)—Orillia Terriers, Dominion lacrosse champions, to-day were one game up in their best three out of five game exhibition series with Vancouver St. Helen's.

Snapping out of the trailing position, the Ontario aggregation slammed in four goals in the third quarter to win a 14-13 victory here last night. The second game will be played Saturday night.

Nip and tuck all the way, the Terriers had to fight for every goal they got and it was the same with the St. Helen's crew. Thoughts of suspension, threatened by the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association if the series were played, were tossed aside as the players set a championship battle pace.

Trailing Part Way

Victors over New Westminster Salmonbellies in the Mann Cup championship final, Terriers were one goal down at the end of the first quarter with the score, 4-3. They were three goals short at half time when the score stood 9-6. Then they rammed in four goals to take a single goal lead at 10-9. Each team counted four goals in the final quarter.

Mickey Maguire, St. Helen's rover, was penalized five minutes for slashing Tommy Scott across the mouth in the second quarter. Scott was taken from the game with a badly-cut face, but is expected to be back in the line-up Saturday night.

Daffy's Arm Sore; Must Not Pitch

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Those Dean boys, who are about as silly as a certified cheque, have finally broken under strain of the parade of triumph.

"Boy," sighed Big Diz wearily last night as he swept into Manhattan with li'l brother Paul, "if we wasn't dizzy, we sure are in a whirlwind now."

Paul has a sore arm and a doctor in Philadelphia told him he mustn't throw a ball for two months. Dizzy is weary right down to his soul.

"When this over," he said, "ah'm goin' down to Bradenton, Forida, and lock every durn door in mah house. They're goin' to have to shove mah fish into me through a stovepipe."

Barnstorming Trips May Be Prohibited

CHICAGO, October 18. — An absolute ban on all barnstorming bf major league baseball players was advocated yesterday by President Will Harridge of the American League. President Harridge said action undoubtedly would be taken on the subject at the anual winter meeting.

Citing a series of recent mishaps —Jimmie Foxx's injury that may ruin his career; the unpleasantness at Milwaukee when irate fans stormed the box office demanding their money back because the Dean brothers failed to pitch as many innings as advertised, and the soreness of Paul Dean's arm that may affect his pitching next year—President Harridge said the only thing to do was to prohibit barnstorming altogether.

"Only Wanted What Canadiens Paid Him," Chabot Says In Chicago Salary Fight

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (CP)—Lorne Chabot, veteran National Hockey League goalminder, admitted to-day there was little prospect of a salary agreement being reached between him and Chicago Black Hawks. He was traded to Chicago by Montreal Canadiens.

But that story about Lorne turning down the salary paid last season to the late Charlie Gardiner is all wrong. "I would like to have that corrected," Chabot said on his return to his home here from Chicago.

"I never mentioned anything about Gardiner's salary. How did I know what the Chicago club was paying him? All I asked for was the same salary the Canadiens paid me last year. it was not an unreasonable request.

"I felt I was worth that and I am still of the same opinion. If that's all the Chicago club paid Chuck Gardiner, then Gardiner was getting a small salary.

Chatbot said there was a difference of $500 in his demands and what the Hawks were willing to pay. But two or three National League clubs can use a good goalie, he believes, and he isn't worrying.

TIGER PILOT GIVEN HONORS IN CLOSE DUEL

Cochran Polls 67 Out of Possible Maximum of 80 to 65 for Star Second Sacker.

ROWE ALSO LISTED.

Lefty Gomez and Lou Gehrig of Yankee Camp Go on Annual Honors List.

(By PAUL MICKELSON)

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (AP)—Mickey Cochrane, the "iron man" who led Detroit out of second division to the pennant in his first season as ringmaster of the Tigers, to-day was named the most valuable player in the American League for the second time since 1928.

The 31-year-old Detroit manager won the honorary award, voted annually by an eight-man committee rtpresenting the Baseball Writers' Association of America, after an unusually spirited due of ballots with his star second baseman, Charley Gehringer. Cochrane polled 67 cut of a possible maximum of 80 votes to 65 for Gehringer. Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, star Yankee southpaw, polled 60 votes, Schoolboy Rowe, Tiger pitcher, received 59, and Lou Gehrig, Yankee first baseman, was given 54.

MICKEY COCHRANE

First on Six

Of the eight ballots cast, Cochrane was named first on six, Gehringer on one and Rowe on another so that all eight firsts, counting 10 votes each, went to Detroit players. The fact that Cochrane's name did not appear one ballot resulted in the close point total between himsel and Gehringer.

Nineteen players, including stars on every club except the downfallen Senators, received votes. Jimmie Foxx, home run slugger of the Athletics and winner of the award last year, was tenth with only 11 votes. For the first time since the award was made an annual honor in 1922, Babe Ruth's name was missing, even on the honorable mention list of 19 names.

Inspiring Leader

Cochrane, the only catcher to receive the most valuable player award in the American League, proved to be one of the most inspiring, dynamic leaders in baseball history as he led the Tigers to the very threshold of a world's championship He was the big bellwielder in the pennant drive, handling his pitchers with superb skill and working in 121 games. He batted .321 and fielded .988, making only eight errors all season.

The Detroit club, which purchased him from Philadelphia last December for a reported sum of $100,000 found him such great investment yesterday it awarded him a

A peculiar accident happened to Bill Taylor the other evening in the mat room of the "Y" gym. Taylor, one of the city's better known wrestlers, was doing a little practice grappling with Freddy Williams. In being tossed on the mat, Taylor fell on his arm dislocating his elbow. He was taken to hospital where an x-ray showed that no bones were broken. He will be fine in a few days, but Doug. Loomis, physical director, states that it is the first accident of this kind in his experience and he has seen his share of gym injuries.

Sports in Central Ontario is a bed of roses and feeling between the teams is a Damon and Phythias friendship compared with the enmity that exists among the various sports organizations in Toronto. Another example of this is furnished by the situation in the Toronto Amateur Baseball Association. A peek behind the signs of the T.A.B.A., which is responsible for all organized baseball in the Queen City, discloses that the association officials consider it most inadvisable to call a general meeting at this time. The various leagues and teams are carrying so many chips on their shoulders and are so anxious to make verbal warfare on one another, that the officials have decided that there will be no meeting until winter is over. It is hoped that during the cold weather the hotheads will cool off and sometime in the Spring a powwow may be held with a greater assurance of peace. And when the meeting is held the T.A.B.A. may revise its whole constitution and return to governship by a commission. So while we may have our little squabbles in this district but things were never that bad.

William Brown's suggestion to discontinue the existing system of scoring fights in favor of a method calculated to make the battlers battle got nowhere at a recent meeting of the New York Boxing Commission. Brown, a member of the Commission who seems to understand the fight game, holds no brief for the round-by-round method of judging a bout. He argued that under the present system boxers pit and pat their way around the ring to win a majority of the early rounds and get their heads knocked off in the last few, and still get the decision. He urged that there was a difference between rounds and wanted a premium placed on wallops instead of waltzes. The other two members of the Commission wouldn't head of such a suggestion.

The Commission announced a new heavyweight elimination contest to produce a suitable challenger to meet Max Baer. It selected Steve Hamas, Art Lasky, Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera as participants in the elimination. It was drawn to the Commission's attention that Hamas had already eliminated the German and Lasky, but the Commission ruled that Hamas must meet either Schmeling or Lasky as an opener because this was a new tournament and the past must be forgotten.

At least one new intermediate hockey prospect has loomed up on the local horizon. He is Gil Painter, former defenceman with McGill University now employed at the C.G.E. He brings something to the Petes that the team has lacked in recent years, weight. When he steps on the scales the beam balances at 220 pounds. Painter is keen about earning a place on the team. He may turn out for rugby too, and would the squad welcome him. If he is active at all that weight around the centre of the Petes' line would prove an anchor dragging at the heels of those Belleville plungers.

• • • • • •

Both local rugby squads held peppy workouts yesterday in preparation for their important invasion of Belleville on Saturday. The P.C.I. players were clicking better yesterday than they have in any drill thus far, and several surprise plays have been prepared. There will be few if any changes in the intermediate lineup, it being considered that the shifts made in the players in last Saturday's game brought results, giving the team more power than any arrangement yet tried. Archy Weir, who has a trick injury to his knee, may be able to take part in the next game.

Both teams will attend the luncheon of the Friday Night Supper Club at the 'Y' as guests of the club. Coach Bamforth will be the speaker at the luncheon and he will furnish the players a pep talk for the big contests.

The intermediate rugby series is being scored on a point system, two for a win and one for a tie. Thus Belleville now have three points and the Petes but one. If anything is needed to point out how evenly matched the teams are, a glance at the scores shows that the Quinte crew has scored a total of 13 points in the two games to the Petes 12. The locals are confident that given only a fair share of the breaks they can draw up on even terms with their opponents by winning in Belleville. The need to win or tie to keep in striking distance of the group title.

With all the N.H.L. teams swinging into pre-season training this week, fans will soon have an interesting time keeping track of just how their favorite stars are shaping up. Perhaps, no season in recent hockey history has there been so many amateurs trying to break into the big money ranks. It will further deplete the amateur teams, and the situation is somewhat serious when it is recalled that the team winning the Allan Cup this winter will have to represent Canada in 1936 at the Olympics.

The management of the Detroit Tigers has quite properly rewarded Mickey Cochrane, pilot of the team, with a $10,000 bonus for his season's work. He lifted the club from the second division to the league championship in a single year and all this with a group of untried young players.

These soccer games in the Public School League are attracting large crowds, and the boys are playing a brand of the game well worth viewing. "Its in the school league that all the local rugby punters have been developed," a soccer enthusiast stated today. "It's at soccer where they develop power in their foot and learn how to handle the ball." He may be right, and soccer is sure giving the youngsters an interesting fall.

CLEVER SCHOOL SOCCER SQUADS

Central and King Edward Give Nice Exhibition in League Game.

LATTER WINS 3-1.

Two well balanced teams—King Edward and Central—battled to a three-to-one decision, yesterday afternoon, in favour of the former eleven in a game that was productive of the finest calibre of the code, with halves dominating the issue time and again, also full backs giving their goal-keepers superb support. Innes and Cooperthwaite were brilliant for Central, while Leggitt, Mackness and Murduff for the winners.

Gets the Breaks

There was no advantage in the selection of the goals. Play ran from end to end at a rapid pace with each custodian being called upon to save his charge. After ten minutes' play, King Edward travelled down into the Central territory to find a stubborn defense meeting their onslaughts with clever clearance but Murduff got the advantage when he slipped the opening goal past Bartlett in a scrimmage who had no chance to save. The Central boys transferred the ball into the Southenders' area to cause Leggitt and Howden some anxiety but they responded with long punts up-field. Copperthwaite and Innes dribbled right opon the custodidan to find Ferguson stopping the drive but gained a successful penalty when Leggitt registered the second counter. Central confined the play to their opponents' goal until the interval. Half time—King Edward 2, Central 0.

Nice Exhibition

On resuming, both elevens showed an excellent brand of the scientific code to bring out the ever-increasing ability of the boys. The half-back division were well nigh perfect to baffle the smart combination of the front lines, the full backs blocking and kicking at the logical moment to feed the forwards who introduced many interesting tussles around the goal. After King Edward had the Central goal at their mercy, Copperthwaite kicked clear, Innes accepting the pass to break right through the south-end defence to let Millen beat Ferguson with a low grounder. Campbell broke up a left wing raid to send Mackness down the wing and with a clever back-heeler Murduff met the ball to pick the inside of the upright. For the remainder of the period play run from end to end with both front ranks missing scoring opportunities. Central had the King Edward boys hemmed into their own goal where Leggitt had to kick out to save his citadel from a downfall. Two flag kicks centered around Ferguson's charge just as the whistle announced the end of the game. King Edward 3, Central 1.

BROKEN TRICOLOR FOOTBALL SQUAD HAVE LITTLE CHANCE AGAINST STRONG VARSITY II

Queen's Would Have Made It Tough for Blues Except For Fraternity Ruling.

TIGERS VS. SCULLERS.

Argos a Single Point Behind Wheelers—Hamilton in Interprovincial.

(By Elmer Dulmage, C.P. Staff Writer)

TORONTO, October 18 (C.P.).—Anti-fraternity measures having dealt such a body blow to Queen's intercollegiate hopes, the more succulent bits of the East's football pie on Saturday will be tossed into the midst of a perplexed Toronto, and the public may scramble for the vantage points it prefers.

Queen's at full strength, might have been expected to make it tough for University of Toronto's hard-hitting Blues at Kingston in their struggle for the College Union lead But a decision suspending student members of fraternities knocked five players off Ted Reeves' Tricolor squad and left him with slight hope of beating Varsity.

Tigers vs. Scullers.

Several hundred Hamilton fans are expected to come to town with the Tigers, rading high once more with Frank Turville and Johnny Ferraro leading the way. A victory over Ottawa and a tie with Montreal placed the Tigers in a first-place deadlock with the Wheelers. The Scullers are a single point behind in the standing.

There is scarcely an injury in either squad. Argos are conceded some margin in plunging with Ted Morris, Tommy Burns, Frank Tindall, and Armour Munro to do this heavy fighting, but the rival backfields are evenly balanced any way you look at it. There is tremendous offensive power in each.

Ab Box, Jack Taylor, Morris, Bob Clark and Jim Staunton round out as brilliant a rear-division as any in football The Tigers merely have Turville, Ferraro, Boley Jeffers, Patterson and Glenn Small.. Turville has outshone any other half-back in the Big Four so far with his all-round excellence.

Late last season, when it was much too late to do any good, St. Michael's College surprised the pigskin world at large by beating Sarnia here. It would be a terrific surprise if they accomplished it again on Saturday despite the fact Coach Bill Storen's team has achieved recognition as a powerful unit.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18 (C.P.).—The final major tennis tournament of the eastern Canadian season gets under way to-day with the opening matches here for the Canadian intercollegiate title, held by McGill University. Four teams will attempt to wrest the championship away from the Montreal Collegians—Toronto Varsity, Queen's, Royal Military College and Montreal University

First and second round matches in both singles and doubles will be completed to-day with the tournament being brought to a close on Saturday. The championship is decided on a points system, a point going for victory in each match and two counting for a triumph in the final.

Pitt Or Minnesota Will Walk The Plank

(By Herbert W. Barker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—Those loud detonations United States fans are going to hear around dusk Saturday will be the exploding of at least four of football's undefeated and untied records at Pittsburgh, Birmingham, New York and Cambridge.

Barring ties, which would cut both ways, either Pitt or Minnesota will walk the plank of defeat in Pitt Stadium. At Birmingham it will be either Alabama or Tennessee whose record is smeared. Columbia and Navy stake perfect records at New York, Harvard and Holy Cross at Cambridge.

Incidentally, it is a significant tip-off on a topsy-turvey season that there are so few major games involving undefeated and untied teams on so early a date in the campaign. Ordinarily there would be a dozen or more, but the string of upsets that started with the opening of the season has decimated the ranks of schools which ordinarily wait until late in November, if at all, before joining the list of the undefeated.

The players were convicted of membership in an international fraternity and barred from student athletic, political and social functions.

ARREST LEADER OF ASSASSINS

Two Principals of Terroristic Group in Italian Police Hands.

THREE AT LARGE.

PARIS, Oct. 18. (AP)—The Surete Nationale was informed to-day that the Italian police had arrested Ante "Master Mind" Pavelich, head of the terrorist secret society Ustashi and his alleged chief of the assassination squad, Egon Kvaternik, known as "The Delegate."

The people claim that the Pavelich organization was responsible for the assassinations of King Alexander of Yukoslavia and Louis Barthou of France at Marseilles Oct. 9.

Three more members of the killers' organization were said by the Surete to be still at large. They were described as the beautiful "Gun Moll" Marie Voudroch, a man man called Moi Bzik, alias "The Glassmaker," and another still unidentified.

The police said "The Glassmaker" whom they know as a dangerous terrorist, aided "The Delegate" in instructing the gang in Pavelich's assassination plans.

The Surete said Bzik was implicated in the confession made by Mio Kraj, who has been under arrest since a few days after the shooting.

CHAPTER 7

Lee stopped halfway down the porch steps and stared at Blade. Friends though they were, Lee never permitted the younger man to usurp his authority on a case. Words began rumbling in his throat but the reporter ignored them.

"You can have her, inspector—I don't get her," he confessed, an air of bewilderment about him that contrasted oddly with his usual decisiveness.

"If you've ruined this case, boy," Lee said darkly, "it's your neck. What do you mean by ——"

"Hold it, inspector. Everything's O. K., no kidding."

"So?" remarked the other skeptically. "Suppose you come along with me and tell me about it."

They walked out to the detective's car. As it moved away, he turned to Blade. "Well?"

"I hung around upstairs after you went down but I couldn't get anything out of the doc. When I came down, you were behind closed doors with those witnesses and Brown was very much on guard. I stuck around for a while but I wasn't getting anywhere and I had an edition to make. So I went around back and found Dan. He told me about Reeves' wife and where she lived. I went up."

He fell silent.

"Do I have to dig this story out of you?" demanded Lee.

"I wish I could give it to you, inspector," Blade began again slowly, "——make you get it as I did."

"It's an apartment house, an old one with large, comfortable rooms. Mrs. Reeves is a tall woman, long-limbed, well-formed. None of this skinny childishness about her. She had on a crisp, lavender dress, the kind women wear around the house. It didn't have any sleeves and her arms were smooth and round. She's got dark hair and she wears it brushed straight back. She's the kind of a woman a man would do a hell of a lot for, if she loved him."

"And so they were married," interrupted the inspector. "You telling this to me or writing it for your newspaper?"

"Her face was white and controlled," continued Blade unperturbed, "but she had a look about her as if she knew something the rest of us couldn't know. Her eyes were large but with a curious, blank expression.

"I thought when I saw her that she already knew. And I didn't know what to say. She asked me to come in and we sat down in the living room. I couldn't tell her the truth at once. Finally I asked her if she knew where her husband was.

"He's gone away," she said without hesitation and a little hopelessly.

"Right you are, lady, I thought. I didn't know but what perhaps she was batty. Then I asked her how she knew. And she told me he'd said last night he was going away and wouldn't be back.

"That floored me for a minute. But I went ahead feeling my way. 'He must have given some reason for going,' I suggested.

"Then she showed the first sign of curiosity about me. She wanted to know who I was and why I was asking all these questions. I had to tell her. I couldn't keep on questioning her when she didn't know. It was like insulting her."

The inspector looked at him in surprise. "But you just said you thought she knew. How do you know she didn't? Maybe she did it herself."

"It was just at first I thought she knew. What she knew, you see, was that he'd gone away. She thinks it's suicide. 'So that's what he meant,' she told me. 'When he said he was going away, I didn't understand.'

"I tried to tell her it was murder but she paid no attention. She just kept repeating, 'So that was it.'

"When I asked her why he was going away, her eyes flickered for a moment and she said he thought it was for the best. I came away—matter of fact, I returned to get you. She knows something more than she's telling, of course. But she's uncanny. There's something screwy about the whole business."

As Blade finished, they reached the address and climbed out. Lee didn't question him. He had "got it," at least a littleof it, but he wasn't letting it bother him.

Mrs. Reeves opened the door for them, looking much as Blade had described her. There was an air of completeness and womanliness about her that even the hard-boiled Lee got. A woman for whom a man might do improbable things.

"I am Inspector Lee," he began. "You must know why I am here. We need your assistance." She stood aside for them to enter.

"It was suicide, inspector," she said in a low, vibrant voice. She sounded as if she were explaining to a child something quite obvious. Blade noted ruefully that since his visit she had managed to adopt a manner which she was apparently by no means unused to. Served him right for interfering like any Richard Harding Davis cub.

"Why do you say that, Mrs. Reeves," questioned the inspector.

"But I explained to this gentleman here. My husband told me last night that he was going away and that he wouldn't be back. I didn't understand then, but this, of course, is what he meant."

"Why did he tell you he was going away?"

"He thought it was for the best, inspector."

"Why?" He growled the monosyllable at her, but he couldn't startle her, couldn't break her poise and control.

"That was his affair, gentlemen."

The inspector was exasperated and spoke sharply. "But, my dear woman, you were his wife. Surely you must know what it was. It was your affair, too, wasn't it?"

Her reply startled him. "No," she declared definitely, "it was no affair of mine."

"Perhaps your husband did intend to go away, Mrs. Reeves." The inspector admitted her point conciliatingly. "But when he told you that, he didn't mean suicide. For he didn't commit suicide. The gun with which he was killed is missing. And a suicide can't get rid of the weapon. You must see that," he urged.

She looked surprised but said nothing.

"Can't you see it was murder?" the inspector demanded.

"Of course, I can't explain how the gun could be gone, but I feel sure I am right," she replied pleasantly but stubbornly.

The inspector tried a new approach. "When did he tell you he was going away?" he asked.

"Last evening when he came home for dinner."

"What time did he leave after dinner?"

"About half past seven," she replied. "He said he was going to the English House but that afterwards he was going away and wouldn't be back."

"Who was he going to meet at the English House?" questioned the inspector.

"He didn't tell me."

"And you didn't see him after he left at seven-thirty?"

"No," firmly and definitely.

"What did you do after he left? Where did you go?"

"I was at home all evening," she answered.

Lee shrugged his shoulders. "Very well, Mrs. Reeves, but there is one other thing I must know. What was troubling your husband so much that he was willing to go away and not come back?"

Mrs. Reeves looked straight at the inspector and her gaze never wavered. "That I cannot tell you, inspector. As I explained before, that was no affair of mine."

Colitis may be described as

The patient is usually thin and anaemic,

The digestive and excretory organs have failed
For lack of nerve force,
The power which runs the machinery of the body.
This treatment puts iron into the blood.
Through the circulation of the blood
New vigor and energy is carried to every organ of the body.
The natural functions are restored
And soon you are feeling fine.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, October 19.

A very likely day is predicted, according to the lunar aspects, but one of doubts, perplexities, confusion and intrigue, calling for the utmost precaution and watchfulness. There are omens of treachery, double dealing and subterfuge arising from subtle sources. Be careful with strangers, secret societies and dealings with rings or mergers. Safeguard employment from these pitfalls and protect funds also.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a lively year but one of confusion, perplexity and probable treachery arising from hidden sources. Be careful in all transactions with strangers, lodges, secret societies and combines. Safeguard the employment and be alert in handling finances. Literary matters flourish.

A child born on this day may be versatile, inclined to literary or cultural pursuits, but may have a leaning to the occult, mysterious, subtle or singular. It may succeed conspicuously in writing mystery literature.

Trent River

Jack Garneau landed a muskie weighing 15 pounds while trolling in McKenzie's Channel over the week-end. Melville Wight caught a fine muskie weighing nearly 13 pounds and a 4-pound pickerel while trolling in Thompson's Channel. Don Ellis caught a ten-pound 'lunge in Thompson's Channel. Henry Rogers, of Belmont Lake, landed an eleven-pound 'lunge while trolling in Thompson's Channel.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Goodman arrived Saturday to spend over the week-end with Mr. D. Walterhouse at "Riverview," returning to the city accompanied by Mr. Walterhouse, who will spend the winter in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Holmes have returned to Toronto after spending the past five months at their cottage.

Mrs. James Wright and son, Will, of Toronto, spent over the week-end at Windermere, returning Sunday to the city, where Mrs. Wright will spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Rose and two children, of Toronto, are spending a week with the former's father, Mr. Herbert Rose, at "Ye Olde Mill."

Miss Kathleen McNichol left Saturday for Toronto after two weeks at "Sum-er-in."

Mr. and Mrs. William Preston attended anniversary services at the Hastings United Church on Sunday morning.

Bensfort

Mr. Fred Dawson of Exeter, Ont., Dr. Walter Dawson and Miss Annie Dawson of Toronto, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Dawson.

Mr. and Mrs. K. D. Sisson, and son, Donald, of Peterborough, visited Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Barnard, on Sunday.

Anniversary services were held at Bensfort church on Sunday morning and evening. Rev. Mr. Wallace of Toronto, preached at both services. The music was supplied by the local choir, with Mr. Jack Staples at the piano. On Monday evening Rev. Wallace gave a most enjoyable lecture at the church. The rest of the program consisted of musical numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barnard visited Mr. and Mrs. Ross Moncrief, on Sunday.

A meeting was held at the church by the young people to reorganize their club. The following officers were elected for the year:

President: Isobel Dawson.

1st Vice-President: H. C. Howson.

2nd Vice-President: Mrs. Chas. Barnard.

3rd Vice-President: Clifford Emberson.

4th Vice-President: Helen Howson.

Committee: Willan Wood, Mildred Dawson, Mrs. Judson Pue.

Pianist: Jack Staples.

"Y.M." LOSES SUIT FOR LOBLAW GIFT

Judge Holds Subscription Form Not Binding on Estate.

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—Chief Justice Rose yesterday dismissed without costs the action of the Y.M.C.A. of Toronto against the estate of the late T. P. Loblaw for $8,500, as the unpaid part of a $10,000 contribution to the work of the association.

The chief justice hold that there had been no consideration to make the subscription a binding contract. An understanding later entered into that Loblaw employes should obtain membership at half the customary fee was held not to have been a factor in the subscription.

Inspired By "Morro Castle" Disaster

On a model of the "George Washington," three iron fingers are reaching up to clutch a lifeboat and set it gently upon the water.

The inventor, F. Forrest Pease of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, believes that the device will do much to prevent a recurrence of the Morro Castle horror in which only eight of the 12 lifeboats were able to get away.

MARRIED IN HASTE; GIN PARTY TRAGEDY

Married Law Should be Amended," Says Angry Chicago Judge.

"FOUR REPENT QUICKLY."

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—They married in haste—quite unexpectedly—after too many cocktails.

And they repented, as the old maxim says, but not at leisure. They repented, as they married, in haste. Next morning, in fact.

The two young husbands told Judge Rudolph Desort about it yesterday as they asked him to annual those marriages of haste. He annulled one, reserved judgment in the other, and delivered this stern rebuke to the law and to those who marry so frivolously:

"Hasty marriages having no hope of success—and marriages following gin parties—should be prevented by law.

"The Illinois law should be amended to prevent such marriages as these. Notice of intention to marry should be a requirement here, as in other states.

"Only then can we hope to halt this endless running to court to dissolve a marriage that never had a chance of lasting success."

Spirit of Frivolity

There was Daniel R. Thompson, youthful spirit of a frivolous age. Rather proudly he gave his age as 21. He wasn't so proud of the rest:

He and Ethel, likewise 21, had gone to Waukegan at 2 a.m., if he remembered rightly after so many drinks. Nevertheless, they could scarcely believe it when they discovered, next day, that they were married. Said the judge:

"Annulled."

John Norkus wasn't so old. Nineteen, he said with a blush. He didn't like being so young, but the rest didn't seem to matter. He told it rather boldly—that he held his bride up for the ceremony, at Valparaiso, Ind., because she was so tipsy.

"So Casual"

No, he hadn't exactly planned to marry Helen. Helen Pintvers, she was, and one wondered that he remembered, so casual had it all been.

He and Helen had just gone out to help Stanley Klaus celebrate his forthcoming marriage. Some one suggested that it would be entertaining, after it seemed that there weren't any more drinking places to visit, if they all got married.

They drove to Valparaiso, he said, and, with him holding Helen—so—they were wed.

Magistrate's Court

Charged with assault, occasioning actual bodily harm, James Hubbell, 79-year-old resident of Old Havelock, to-day reserved his plea. Through his counsel, W. J. Arthur Fair, the accused received an adjournment until Monday next.

The charge against Hubbell arises out of an alleged assault he made on Roy Longmuir. Wielding the shin bone of a dead animal, the aged man is stated to have struck the complainant over the head, inflicting a wound that required several stitches.

Two local girls, pleading guilty to charges of vagrancy, were bound over to be of good behaviour, and were ordered to report to the police matron once a month during the term of their probation.

Elmer Liddell, who had previously pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, appeared on remand and was represented by E. F. Sheehy.

While the accused is charged as a third offender, counsel argued that he could only be charged as a first offender by reason of the fact that since his previous convictions, dating back over six years, the section of the statutes under which he had been charged at that time had been repealed.

Magistrate Langley remanded the accused until October 25, in order to give consideration to the technical point of law raised by counsel for the defence.

DECLINE TO BAN GUIDES SMOKING

English Branch of Girl Organization Discusses Question.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Oct. 18.—(CP)—Whether Girl Guides should or should not smoke was debated at some length in the annual meeting of the Girls' Life Brigade, when delegates were present from all parts of the country.

It was stated that Brigade laws were too wordy, and a revised form of laws was under consideration. It was suggested that in addition to promising to abstain from intoxicating drink the rules should include a promise not to smoke.

One delegate said that they might as well add abstinence from gambling and many other evil influences.

Finally it was agreed not to press the question, and it was allowed to drop for the time being. It was definitely decided, however, not to include a gambling ban in the Brigade law. Mrs. Thrussell, district commissioner of Birmingham, said they all realized the danger, but she thought that some girls' consciences would not let them sign such a pledge. Rather than lose them it would be better to have them and use the influence of the organization on them for their good.

Small Family Slain Suicide And Murder

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., October 18 (A.P.). — A family of three—husband, wife and baby—was wiped out by shotgun slugs in a farmhouse near Doylestown in what police said was a double murder and suicide.

Entering his lonely farm house at Eureka last night, William Erhardt found his son Leonard, 23, his son's wife, Ida, 17, and the couple's child, Leonard Jr., three months, dead from three charges fired from a single-barrelled shotgun.

American Wants To Sit In Lincoln's Chair To Watch Royal Wedding In Westminster

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 18 (CP Cable).—The wedding of the Duke of Kent (Prince George) and Princess Marina of Greece in Westminster Abbey on November 29, apart from bringing considerable trade to a wide variety of London merchants, is expected to furnish substantial revenue for two national institutions—the Abbey itself and the adjacent Westminster Hospital.

Stands for spectators are being erected on the greensward fronting of the Abbey and also before the hospital. Revenue from sale of seats will be devoted to the fund for preservation of the historic Abbey and to the hospital, which hopes shortly to be able to move to quieter surroundings. At least 100 seats have already been sold at $50 apiece.

Facing the Abbey is a statute of Abraham Lincoln, depicted standing at the side of the chair, and a story was going round to-day that a fellow-countryman of the great emancipator had offered a "fabulous sum" for privilege of occupying the chair while the wedding procession passed. The story is not confirmed.

REPORT SYSTEM NOT PRACTICAL

Causes Delays in Hearing of Criminal Appeals, Says Chief Justice.

CRITICIZES DEPARTMENT

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (C.P.). — As far as court reporters are concerned, the Attorney-General's Department has a system "which is impracticable," and is delaying hearing of criminal appeals, Chief Justice Sir William Mulock to-day asserted in the Ontario Court of Appeal at Osgoode Hall.

His Lordship was commenting in this manner because evidence in the case of Julius Leblanc of Ottawa, who was convicted during the summer on a charge of obtaining money by fake pretenses and who is appealing against the conviction, had not yet been transcribed. In the meantime Leblanc is out on bail.

Joseph Sedgwick K.C., of the Attorney-General's Department, contended the Department was not responsible for delay in transcribing the evidence.

"Your department is responsible for the administration of justice; we cannot stand for criminal appeals being delayed," said the Chief Justice.

Prisoner Plunges From Second Storey

HAMILTON, Oct. 18 (CP)—Plunging headfirst from a second storey window, John Paul, a patient in the General Hospital was injured seriously last night when he eluded a police guard.

Paul, ill and in a delirium, was under observation at the hospital and was being guarded by Constable Archibald Hughes. In the same room was a Chinese, also in an abnormal state.

The Chinese made a break for liberty and Hughes rushed over to check him. As soon as he left Paul, that patient leaped from bed, and jumped through the copper screen covering the window. He fell heavily to a concrete areaway, 35 feet below. When picked up it was found he had suffered a broken leg and broken arm.

VILLAGE FOLK CLAIM CUNARD AS THEIR OWN

Rawdon Legend Pieces Together Story of St. Samuel Cunard.

CRADLE TO GRAVE

RAWDON, N. S., Oct. 17.—(CP).—Quiet, unassuming villagers here have no quarrel with world historians. They do not wish to argue or build up conclusive proof of their statements. But if you ask them where Sir Samuel Cunard, founder of the great steamship company, was born and where he was buried they will point to two spots in this peaceful village in a valley.

One is a rambling old homestead built 150 years ago. The other is an unmarked grave in the cemetery of St. Paul's Church. Others may piece together the story of Cunard's life after he left the village, but these simple folk know by the legend of the hamlet that the famous Nova Scotian was rocked in his crib here in the old Cunard home, and his body lies buried in the soil of Rawdon.

The simple dwellers in this scattered community not far from Windsor are not publicity-hunters. In their isolated village in the woods they are satisfied to live as their ancestors did back in the 18th century—tilling the soil and uncovering the veins of gold which lie buried in the hillsides.

To enter into their midst and chat with them is like setting back the clock or taking a trip into another world. The work horses and the men behind them move slowly. Seldom do the triple-toned horns of luxuriously equipped tourist cars break the silence. Work proceeds almost as it did two centuries ago and everybody seems contented.

The ancient church stands on the hillside on the far side of the valley. Just outside the porch is the inscription: "St. Paul's Church, Rawdon, first erected 1794, present church 1845, renovated twice and 1913."

The old churchyard is dotted with tombstones. Chiselled in granite and marble are the names of many old families: Withrows, Meehans, Bonds, Weirs, Moxons, Barrons, Wellwoods, but no Cunards.

Then three miles away, along the tree fringed road suddenly the foliage parts and an old farmhouse comes into view. It is square and solid with walls widely set apart. A massive chimney breaks through the centre of the roof. Inside are four huge fireplaces and an old-fashioned bake-oven with walls a foot thick.

"Yes, this is the old Cunard place all right," the owner, J. A. Meehan answered. He recounted how his grandfather had come from Ireland to work for the Cunard family over a hundred years ago. After the Cunards left his grandfather took over the farm. The present owner is himself a grandfather now.

A tiny stairway wound almost around itself to get to the second floor, and in a little cubby-hole cut in the wall Mrs. Meehan pointed out a box of books. It was hinged with leather and covered with a thick mantle of dust. Behind a baby's sled, piled high with attic accumulations she pulled out a volume inscribed: "Abraham Cunard, his book." It was dated 1811.

The registry of burials back at St. Paul's Church showed that Abraham Cunard was interred on Jan. 12, 1824, aged 60 years.

That is their link with fame. Historians may dispute it. Encyclopedias ignore it. Archivists say Samuel Cunard was born in Halifax in 1787 and died in London in 1865. But the people of Rawdon know what their fathers have told them.

Plans For Season Made at Chapter Meet

A large attendance featured the first regular meeting for this season of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E., held at the home of Mrs. E. M. Turner, with the regent, Mrs. C. S. Browne, presiding.

It was decided to have a rummage sale in October; a Hallowe'en party for members and friends at the home of the regent; a community bridge party early in November, with tea at the home of Mrs. E. M. Turner, when the draw will take place for the quilt made by Chapter members; a Christmas tea early in December, when the draw for the Hope Chest will take place.

Two new members were elected and two more names were added to the waiting list.

At the close of the business session, refreshments were served from a prettily-decorated table, with Miss Meta Meredith's group in charge.

The baby son of the Lord [illegible] of Dublin, Irish Free [illegible], Alfred Byrne, was christened Sylvester Louis at the Pro-Cathedral recently.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY EXAMINER

Polly Moran Claims Her Stolen Brooch

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. — Polly Moran, screen comedienne, had gone to police headquarters yesterday and got back a $3,500 diamond brooch stolen from her last May during a voyage from Los Angeles to Honolulu. The gem was part of the loot recovered after the arrest in August of Jules Rubin, international jewel thief, who has since been sentenced to a six-year prison term by the Federal Court here. Rubin was a fellow passenger on a liner with Miss Moran and her husband.

Kidneys Bothered Her for Many Years

Ontario Lady Always Finds Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Rice Always Has a Word of Praise for Dodd's.

Chatsworth, Ont. Oct. 18 (Special) —"I am thirty-eight years old and have been a user of Dodd's Kidney Pills for many years," writes Mrs. Geo. Rice, a resident of this place. "As a girl I seemed to have a weak back and my kidneys were in poor shape, so mother used to give me Dodd's Kidney Pills and I always felt better. Ever since that time whenever I feel a tired feeling across the back I take Dodd's Kidney Pills and the ache disappears. I now have four children and do all my own work. I always keep a box on hand."

The best evidence of the merit of Dodd's Kidney Pills is the fact that all users are so enthusiastic about them. Both men and women in all walks of life have found great benefit from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. You too can wisely follow their advice and keep a box on hand at all times, in case of need.

BE TWO WEEKS BEFORE SUSPECT IS IN CANADA

Kidnap Suspect Must Come to Canada to Stand Trial.

LIKELY APPEAL ORDER.

Protests Vigorously Against His Detention by Detroit Police.

WINDSOR, Oct. 19.— (C. P.) — Extradition of David Meisner, wanted in Canada in connection with the kidnapping of John S. Labatt, London, Ont., brewer, was ordered at extradition proceedings at Detroit today.

It will probably be at least two weeks before the extradition is carried out as time must be allowed for an appeal.

Commissioner Quinn issued the order today after officials of the Ontario Attorney-General's department had read into the record several depositions, including one signed by Labatt, in which efforts were made to identify Meisner as one of the members of the gang that snatched Labatt as he drove between Sarnia and his London home and spirited him away for 60 hours.

Labatt was released near Toronto after demands for $50,000 ransom, allegedly failed.

Surrendered in Detroit

Meisner surrendered at Detroit about four weeks ago after having been sought over a wide area of Canada and the United States. He maintained he was in Covington Ky., on Aug. 14, the date of the kidnapping.

He protested vigorously against his detention here without bail.

DAY AT PALACE WITH KING PETER

Young King Peter Gave Toys to Younger Brothers, Who Danced With Joy.

WANT HIM TO TRAVEL.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Oct. 19 —(AP)—King Peter gave his toys to his brothers today.

The 11-year-old monarch, having recovered from the first shock of his father's assassination, began his reign by turning his playthings over to Tomislav and Andreas who danced with joy.

The king took an early morning ride with his brothers through neighboring woods. He was mounted on a big brown spirited horse which Alexander gave him on his 10th birthday to repace the fat old pony on which he learned to ride.

Numerous Delegations

He then returned to the palace where he received a number of Yugoslav delegations who came here for his father's funeral. A patriarchal, beared man and a wrinkled old woman bowed before the new king, kissing the hem of his garment and wishing him long life.

After receiving other visitors Peter started his lessons under his

Two Liberals Deny Avoiding Election

TORONTO, Oct. 19 (C.P.).—Arthur G. Slaght and J. C. McRuer, widely-known Toronto Liberal lawyers, to-day denied vigorously assertions attributed to J. L. Prentice Liberal candidate in Parkdale Riding for the next Dominion election that they had declined the nomination in last Ontario election.

Mr. McRuer said he was not approached "directly or indirectly to run in Parkdale Riding." Mr. Slaght described reported assertions of the Liberal candidate that he had refused the nomination as "sheer nonsense." Mr. Prentice was reported as saying he accepted the nomination after some hesitation. He was defeated by former Attorney-General W H. Price.

Province Leads Dominion in Revenue From Gasoline and Auto Business.

QUEBEC SECOND.

Total Revenue Collected By Nine Provinces Amounted to $47,044,157.

OTTAWA, October 19 (C.P.). — Revenue derived by Canada's nine Provinces from various imports on automobiles last year showed Ontario collecting $20,493,342 from registrations and gas tax, with Quebec, the next highest Province, drawing $10,044,671 into the provincial treasury, according to figures issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Ontario's revenue constituted 43 per cent. of the total for the Dominion, which was $47,044,157.

From 1928 until 1933, the last year for which statistics are presently available, registrations enriched the Provincial treasuries by $123,069,603, or an average for the six years of $20,511,600 per annum In the same period the Provinces collected $130,041,466 in gasoline tax, or an annual average of $21,673,577.

Revenue Constant.

In all of the Provinces the revenue from registration in the past six years has remained fairly constant. With the exception of Saskatchewan, however which last year dropped about $10,000 gas revenues have soared.

Ontario in 1933 collected $12,852,577, or 178 per cent. more than in 1928. Quebec's gas revenue was $4,952,764 compared with $2,774,401 six years ago; British Columbia's figure for 1933 was $2,023,403 as against $892,141 in 1928. Alberta increased by about 41 per cent. to $1,739,240; Manitoba by 95 per cent. to $1,643,600.

New Brunswick registered the largest increase, her gas revenues bringing in $865,790 in 1933 or 266 per cent. more than in 1928 Nova Scotia's collection was $933,571 against $561,024, while Prince Edward Island took in $166,831 compared with $89,189 in 1928.

YUGOSLAVIA IS MOVING TROOPS

Force Being Concentrated Along the Hungarian Border.

FRONTIER IS 'DANGEROUS.'

MARIBOR, Yugoslavia, Oct. 19.—(A.P.). — An unconfirmed report from a usually reliable source said to-day that Yugoslavia was concentrating troops along the Hungarian border.

Neutral observer here regarded the situation along the Hungarian-Yugoslavia frontier as "dangerous."

Four former opponents of the regime of King Alexander were freed to-day from the government ban against them. They are Dr. Koroshetz, former Premier of Yugoslavia, Dr. Kulovec, Dr. Natlacea, and Dr. Obrivec.

It was generally believed here that a general amnesty soon would be granted all Croatian leaders who are in prison.

The release of these four prominent leaders of the Slovenian clerical party was viewed here as inaugurating a "new deal" in Yugoslavia's internal policy and as the death of the harsh military regime instituted by King Alexander.

VON KLUCK DIES IN 89TH YEAR GREAT WARRIOR

Leader of German Forces in March Through Belgium in 1914 is Dead.

STOPPED AT THE MARNE.

War Career Ended With Shrapnel Wounds in 1915.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—(C.P.)—General Von Kluck, German leader in the Great War, died here to-day.

The warrior's active career in the Great War ended with shrapnel wounds in March of 1915, and caused him to be put on the retired list a year later.

Von Kluck's name will aways be remembered in Germany as that of the man who looked like winning the war as soon as it started—before the first drive of the Germans was checked and the initial Allied retreat stopped.

Drove Back "Contemptibles."

It was Von Kluck's forces that drove the "old contemptibles" from Mons, and the Allies from point after point in those dread days of August, 1914. But Von Kluck failed to wipe out the harassed British Second Corps commanded by General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrain, and finally, with British and French driving a wedge between Von Kluck's first army and General Von Beulow's second army, Von Kluck was forced to go to the aid of Von Beulow and the immediate threat to Paris was removed.

The General who reached the peak of his fame at the Battle of the Marne, was in his 89th year.

KIDNAP VICTIM RETURNS HOME

No Money Paid Mike Young Man Refuses to Talk to Police.

NEVER SAW ABDUCTORS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19. —(A P)—Lewis Esposito returned home late last night, more than three days after he had been reported kidnapped for $20,000 ransom, but he refused to see police.

'Our work is just beginning," a federal agent said today.

He made this comment after a score of detectives had gone home to bed, thwarted in their desire to question the 23-year-old son of Antonio Esposito, junk yard owner.

'I'm too tired to talk now; I may talk tomorrow." That was the word the young man gave police through his father.

No Money Paid

"We haven't paid a cent," the elder Esposito said. "Apparently those who took our son found out that we were not wealthy, found out that it was useless to try to get money from us."

The father said Lewis was tired and nervous, but otherwise in good health. He said two men had stepped into his son's automobile while he waited for a traffic light, taped glasses across his eyes, and drove him off.

Lewis could not identify his abductors because he never saw them, the father said.

Last night they drove Lewis to a neighborhood which he knew, the father said, and he telephoned for the friend to come and get him. Lewis' own automobile had been found several miles from his home.

Women Radio Listeners Face Opposition In Their Strong Affection For Crooners

WINDSOR, N.S., Oct. 19 (C.P.).—Women radio listeners may not know it, but they have something in common with moose—the moose-like crooners, too. Or maybe they don't. It all depends on what this moose was contemplating as he listened to the crooning canoeist.

The canoeist was out on the lake because he and a fellow hunter had decided crooning was the only way to lure the moose, a wily fellow, within gun range. So, as he paddled up and down the shore near the moose's habitat, he gave voice to tuneful melody.

Along came the other hunter through the brush to find the moost standing on a point of land, well screened by bushes, listening intently to the strains that rolled across the water. Walking up within easy range, he downed the big fellow with one shot.

They never did learn whether the moose was enraptured by the crooning or thinking of mayhem.

Let People Know of New Authorities

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—(CP)—Ontario Liquor Commissioner E. G. Odette announced today he was giving "very serious consideration" to inauguration of newspaper advertising in localities where new beer and wine authorities were likely to be granted.

He said his plan, if instituted, would call for advertizing of authorities in cases where a reasonable possibility of a new license existed. Anyone objecting to issue of the license would then have an opportunity to protest, he explained, and a reasonable interval would elapse after the advertisement to receive objection and discuss the situation.

PRINCE INSPECTS PLANES ENTERED IN AIR DERBY

King and Queen Also Pay Visit to Mildenhall Airdrome.

RACE STARTS SATURDAY.

C. W. A. Scott, London, Officially Ranked Fastest Speed of 184.44.

MILDENHALL AIRDROME, England, Oct. 19.—(C.P.-A.P.) — John K. Wright of Utica, N.Y., long had the ambition of seeing the Prince of Wales. He more than achieved this to-day, for it developed into a case of the Prince seeing Wright.

The air-minded prince, bareheaded, wearing a big checked coat over his gray suit, and his feet clad in brown suede shoes, came out to inspect the planes which will take off to-morrow in the race to Melbourne.

Climbed Up On Each.

He went to the machines, in readiness outside their hangars, clambered up on each, peered into each cockpit, and then, with h is hands clasped behind his back, walked around each in turn while officials and mechanics explained to him the technical details of each ship.

After the inspe ction, the Prince stood back and watched Wright put on an aerial display. The demonstrator turned the nose of his ship almost straight up in a display of steep climbing, then went into a series of immelman turns his audience.

37,000 Acres Of Bush Destroyed By Fire

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 19.—(C.P.)— Official estimates of the area destroyed by forest fires in the Sault inspectorate during the past summer are not available, but it was estimated to-day by Nigel Kensit, chief forester, 37,000 acres of forest were destroyed, half the 1933 total.

There were 20 fires this year, compared with 262 in 1933. By the end of the month the staff of the forestry branch here will be reduced to the winter total of six. In summer 60 men are employed. Size of the office staff will remain unchanged.

SOME SECTIONS NEAR FINISH ON NORTHERN ROAD

Camps 2 and 5 Prepare to Close and Distribute Men Along Other Stretches of Project.

600 STILL IN CAMPS.

Expected That Road Will be Completed by Christmas From Burleigh to Beyond Apsley.

With Camps No. 2, near the Burleigh end of the road, and No. 5, toward Apsley, already cleaning up on their sections of the big project and distributing their men among the remaining sections, prospects at present are that Santa Claus will have a fine new highway over which to travel on his trip from Burleigh to Apsley this Christmas.

Camp No. 5 finished its five-mile section of road with the exception of minor final touches last week. Some of the crew of more than 100 men in camp are being sent to Camp No. 6, some to No. 4 and a few to No. 1. As their stretch led through a sandy and comparatively level region, work progressed considerably faster than in the other camps.

Closed in Two Weeks

Camp No. 2 will be closed up in about two weeks. Although the crew in this camp encountered hard going, with much blasting and filling required, their stretch was somewhat shorter and is now completed all but a few hundred yards. Some of the 120 men in this camp are aiding on the north end of No. 1 section and the south end of No. 3 section. Bids for the buildings which comprise the camp are now being considered as it is likely they will be sold rather than moved to any new site.

Some Work Ahead

Camps No. 1 and No. 3 have the most work ahead of them. Both gangs have been cutting and filling through rocky districts throughout the year and at present drilling for the dynamite charges and removal of shattered rock constitutes more than fifty per cent of the job of these two sections. No. 1 has 100 men in camp and is expecting 25 more from the No. 5 crew Monday. No. 3 has 130 men on the job and 25 additional men will likely be transferred to the camp within a day or two.

The gang of 150 men at No. 4 still have a month of work in view, and Camp No. 6, with about 120 men enrolled is fininshing up its sec-

MOVIE BUREAU UNDER HAMMER

Sale of Government Plant at Trenton Considered Likely.

REPORT PREPARED.

TORONTO, Oct. 19 (C.P.).—Recommendations formulated during a survey of the Ontario Government owned motion picture studio at Trenton, will be submitted to the Government by Roy Buckley of the Theatres and Inspection Department who has been conducting an investigation this week at the direction of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, it was revealed from an authoritative source to-day.

Sale of the studio which once produced "Carry on Sergeant," under direction of Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, probably will be recommended by Buckley, along with complete reorganization of the Ontario Motion Picture Bureau at the Legislative Buildings. It was said the branch probably would be placed under the department of Dr L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education

Premier Hepburn on different occasions has criticized expenditures occasioned by maintaining the Trenton plant, and it was said the Government would offer it for sale.

For the last few years, both the Bureau at Trenton and Toronto have confined activities to production of silent pictures on educational and publicity topics, which, with the advent of "talkies" are said to be in little demand.

Air Liner Missing; Had 10 Passengers

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 19 (AP)—An air liner with 10 passengers aboard was missing to-day on the Launceston, Tasmania, to Melbourne, route.

The plane, flying the 265-mile sea route from Launceston across Bass Strait to Melbourne, left at the usual time but has not been seen since.

HEAVY POTATO CROP PROBLEM

Growers in Eastern Canada to Discuss Sales Plan Monday.

OTTAWA CONFERENCE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19 (C.P.).—With the object of working out the best possible method of disposing of this year's crop of Canadian potatoes in Canada, a conference of representatives of the five eastern provinces will be held here Monday. Canadian potato growers are confronted with a serious situation owing to glut on the domestic market and an almost complete lack of export markets.

This year's crop is some 7,500,000 bushels larger than last year, and the Cuban market, in former years a valuable outlet for New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island potatoes has been closed by a tariff which gives the United States a preference. Export to the United States is practically impossible as the crop there this year is also very heavy.

Representatives of the growers and departments of Agriculture in the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island will attend the conference along with representatives of the Dominion Department and the Canadian Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association.

EARLY MORNING SUBURBAN FIRE

Family of Five Have Close Call Near Downer's Corners.

LENGTHY WATER LINE.

An early morning blaze in a house near Downer's Corners to-day caused damage estimated at upwards of $2,000 and gravely endangered the lives of the five occupants. Loss is covered by insurance.

Thomas Burke, owner and tenant of the property told The Examiner that after getting up early this morning to light a fire in the kitchen stove, he lay on a couch in an adjoining room, instead of returning to bed. He was awakened a short time later to find the kitchen a mass of flames. He aroused his wife and three sons before the fire spread to the upper rooms.

"If I had gone back to bed I believe we would have all been burned to death. The fire was terribly fierce once it got started," he remarked.

House Destroyed

The house, a two-storey frame structure located on the section of Highway 7, known as Otonabee street, suffered extensive damage. The kitchen where the blaze orig-

WORLD PEACE IS ONLY SOLUTION FOR RECOVERY

No Immediate Prospect of Conflict in Europe is Belief of Mr. Bennett.

SIX WEEKS AWAY.

Discusses League Questions and European Affairs in General.

BY. C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC, Oct. 19.—(CP) —Only with the establishment of world peace on a firm foundation could there be any return to a reasonably secure economic recovery, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett declared on his arrival here today after six weeks in Great Britain and Europe.

"One must speak with certain reserve on such a subject," Mr. Bennett added, "but I think it reasonable to believe that there is no immediate prospect of conflict in Europe."

Appearing exceptionally fit and rested, and in excellent humor, Mr. Bennett was called upon to hold an impromptu reception to some 100 visitors immediately after the gang-plank was set up when the Duchess of Richmond docked this afternoon.

He discussed League of Nations and European affairs in general, but declined to comment on domestic affairs because of his long absence and lack of first hand knowledge of conditions at home.

The Prime Minister was accompanied by Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, who had accompanied him to Geneva, and by John Saucier, private secretary.

Nothing could be announced at the moment with respect to the Central Bank, Mr. Bennett stated. It had been anticipated that he would secure the services of an expert in central banking from Great Britain for the post of deputy governor of the Bank of Canada. Graham Towers, governor of the bank had arrived in London yesterday after a tour of European banking centres, he said, and he intimated that any announcement respecting the bank's personnel would await Mr. Tower's return.

Ottawa Trade Agreements

Contact with British statesmen and business men had convinced him, the Prime Minister said, that the Ottawa trade agreements were proving of increasing advantage every day. They were the only international agreements that had endured since the war, he added. Others had been negotiated among various countries but had broken down. The Ottawa agreements had continued satisfactory and where friction had arisen it had been followed by action which had removed the cause so far as Canada and the Empire was concerned.

"Naturally anything I may say about the new treaty with France may seem prejudiced," Mr. Bennett observed when questioned on that subject. "But the opinion of those best able to speak was that it was the best arrangement ever made between France and Canada. Having regard to the completmentary nature of the commodities involved it should prove of mutual advantage."

Mr. Bennett was obviously glad to be back in Canada, although he said he found it of great advantage to get around among the nations of Europe and learn their conditions first hand. Abroad Canada was considered to have made marked recovery from the depression, and was spoken of as a favored land.

Hepburn Intimates "Real Blast" To Ross

TORONTO, Oct 19 (C.P.).—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario said to-day he would "have a real blast" as a reply to yesterday's open letter addressed to him by P. D. Ross, dismissed member of the Ottawa Hydro-Electric Commission, and proprietor of the Ottawa Journal.

The Premier said that to-morrow he would give "reasons" why Mr. Ross was dismissed at the order of T. Stewart Lyon, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission. "There is one thing that is definite," he added. "He's fired, and there's no argument about that."

Improved conditions in Hawaii have greatly decreased the number of persons on relief rolls.

21 PLANES ARE READY TO START LONG AIR DERBY

England to Australia Race Starting Saturday is in Two Sections.

11,323 MILE TRAIL

Worthy Record to Shatter is Set for the World's Best Pilots.

MILDENHALL, Airdrome, England, Oct. 19.—(CP-AP)—Veteran fliers cocked anxious eyes at the skies today as they made final preparations for a race halfway around the world.

Some 21 planes will soar away tomorrow in quest of the fat prizes that await the winners in Melbourne. The race is in two sections, speed and handicap, and several pilots have entered both.

The entrants are fervently hoping for good weather, for the 11,323-mile trail will take them over sea, mountains and desert.

As it now stands the field includes nine English entries; two from Australia; two from New Zealand; one from the Irish Free State; one from British New Guinea; three from the United States; two from Holland and one from Denmark.

Has Big Handicap

The first definite indication of how quickly the fastest plane may reach Melbourne was given when officials provisionally assigned the twin engines monoplane of Capt. T. Neville Stack of England and a handicap allowance of 66 hours 45 minutes 36 second flying time in the handicap race.

These allowances will be subtracted from official flying times for the full route to determine winners of handicap prizes. Stack's allowance was based on a speed of 194.44 miles an hour.

The handicap is decided by a complicated formula based on the plane's theoretical performance. Allowances range upward to 108 hours 46 minutes, alloted the red and silver monoplane of Lieut. M. Hansen of Copenhagen.

Officials indicated that if James Woods of Australia is successful in getting a revised ruling from the United States Department of Commerce he might become scratch man with the smallest allowance, because he has the fastest plane.

A worthy record to shatter is set for the 21 planes awaiting the starting flag

Six Day Record

The England to Melbourne route was covered a year ago by Charles T. P. Ulm and three companions in six days, 17 hours and 56 minutes.

Wiley Post, in his solo world flight, covered a distance of 15,596 miles in seven days, 18 hours, 49½ minutes.

There is good material in the entries for fast, hard flying.

The prize alone, posted by Sir MacPherson Robertson, Melbourne candy magnate, is a big incentive. It is the richest stake of contemporary aviation, for the double event.

The prizes for the speed race are: First, $50,000 and a gold cup valued at not less than $2,500; second, $7,500; third, $2,500. In the handicap race the winner will receive $10,000 and the runner-up $5,000.

TEACHERS URGED TO GIVE PUPILS EXTRA COURSES

Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson Addressed Northumberland and Durham Teachers' Institute.

STANDARDS NO LOWER.

Minister of Education Stresses Value of Music and Agriculture in Schools.

BOWMANVILLE, October 19. — At the convention of the Northumberland and Durham Teachers' Institute, held in the Assembly Hall of the High School yesterday, Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, stressed the imporance of more music and agriculture on the curriculum of both the Public and High Schools of the Province. The success of any school depends on the teacher, and the co-operation of school boards and the parents, stated the speaker.

To make the pupil the type of citizen Canada desires and to keep before the minds of the children the fact of Canada's greatness were two of the teacher's important duties.

Speaking of the abolition of the second year Normal course, Dr. Simpson declared that there was no intention of lowering the standard of teaching. Due to the fact that the second year Normal was an expense and of insufficient value to the teachers of the Province, the department had decided that it should not be carried on. Dr Simpson also stated that in future there will be no departmental examinations in July, and that changes of a practical nature will be made in subjects compulsory for the High School course.

In his talk to the teachers, Colonel E. E. Snider, B. A., Inspector of Schools in Northumberland and Durham,emphasized the importance of holding certificates in agriculture and other supplementary subjects. The abolition of all grades, and the teaching of each child individually would be the idea method, stated Colonel Snider.

A demonstration by the harmonica band of the Ontario Boys Training School, and chorus singing and solos by Starkville public school students under the able direction of Mrs. Donald Robb, Orono, were two of the interesting features of the morning program.

WEEKLY LIVESTOCK REVIEW

TORONTO, Oct. 19 (C.P.). — Irregularity prevailed in prices this week of the Toronto livestock market, but the dominating trend was to higher levels. While butcher cattle and weighty steers yielded ground, vealers were firm and hogs and lamb prices advanced. Sheep held firm.

Supplies of all classes of livestock were much heavier than for the previous week. Monday, Oct. 8, was Thanksgiving Day, and the market was closed, while this week it operated on the regular basis.

Cattle with 7,300 head for sale made the heaviest weekly run this year. While store cattle sold steady, prices on butcher cattle dropped 10 to 15 cents a hundredweight and weighty steers were down about 35 cents.

Good and choice steers sold at $4.50 to $5, with a top lot Monday at $5.25. Common steers sold as low as $2.50. Common to medium butchers sold at $2 to $3.50 and a few top lots made $4 on Wednesday. Monday's top load of handyweight steers was at $4.40. Thin boners sold at $1.50 to $1.75.

Butcher cows closed at $1.75 to $2.50, with canners at $1. Good butcher bulls brought $2.25 to $2.75, and bolognas ranged from $1.50 to $2. Red calves sold mostly at $4.50 to $6.25 and the top for the week was $7 for two head. The better stockers and feeders were first sellers at $2.75 to $3.50 cwt., while plainer kinds were slower at $2 to $2.50. A holdover of 2,800 cattle from Monday was cut down to around 400 head by the end of the week. Milkers and springers sold about steady at $45 for a general top.

Local packing plants were filled with beef at the week-end and heavy following runs will probably bring weaker markets.

Calves receipts were 2,600 head. Prices were firm on vealers at $6.50 to $7.50 for choice quality, with common downwards to $4. Some 600 heavy western calves sold slowly at $2.50 to $3.50, with some unsold at the close. Eastern grass calves sold Monday at $2.50 for bulk.

Hogs receipts were 3,500 head, 1,000 more than for last week. Prices advanced 25 cents a hundredweight, closing at $7.40 f.o.b. for bacons, $7.75 off trucks and at $8.15 off cars. Selects were $1 per head premium. A cable from England anticipated an advance of four to six shillings in week-end bacon prices.

Sheep and lamb receipts were about 10,000 head, or 3,000 more than for last week. Lambs with 10,000 head made the heaviest weekly run so far this year, being active in spite of this with prices 25 to 35 cents above last week's average. Good ewes and wethers sold generally at $6.25, with several hundred at $6.25 on Wednesday. The closing price was $6.25. Culls, bucks and heavies sold generally at $1 a hundredweight discount.

Show lambs from Manitoulin Island sold at $6.40 for the majority. Sheep were firm at $1 to $3 per cwt., with yearlings at $3.50 to $4.25.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion livestock branch were:

	Cattle	Hogs
This week	7,106	3,486
Last week	5,754	2,506
1934 to date	213,440	174,516
1933 to date	216,873	185,998

WINNIPEG WHEAT.

WINNIPEG, October 19.—Upward trend of values in world grain markets, usually one of the chief factors in price movements on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, influenced local wheat futures only temporarily yesterday. Liberal selling at the close wiped out fractional gains, prices ending ½ to ¾ cent lower.

Reflecting the strong tone of the Chicago and Liverpool markets values here also advanced for a time, but at the close the October futures was neat bottom levels, at 78 cents; December 78⅝c, and May 83 to 83⅛ cents. Reacting from earlier sharp declines, Chicago closed unchanged and Liverpool only ¼d lower after previous 1½d setbacks.

The closing spurt was almost the market's sole activity yesterday, the traders spending most of their time perusing outside news. Reports indicated frost might seriously affect the Argentine crop, resulting in estimates of wheat movements from that country this week would total only 2,750,000 bushels.

Lightness of offerings restricted cash-grain trading, despite continued good demand for high-grade wheats. Trading in the coarse-grains pits was dull, futures fluctuating with wheat.

Futures:

Wheat—	Open	High	Low	Close	Prev. Close
Oct.	.78	.79¼	.77⅝	.78	.78½
Dec.	.78¾	.79⅝	.78¾	.78⅝	.79¾
May	.83¼	.84¼	.82¾	.83	.83¾

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19. — Notable rallying power showed itself in the wheat market yesterday, and practically conquered an early downward trend of prices.

Recoveries were in line with action of foreign markets, especially firmness at Buenos Aires, where the price of wheat and the price of corn became virtually identical. In various quarters, much attention was given to the fact that the new Argentine wheat crop is at the critical period of growth, and there were numerous suggestions that the quality of wheat at present on hand in Argentina may be somewhat inferior, a circumstance implying likelihood of augmented demand for wheat north of the equator.

Wheat in Chicago closed steady at the same as Wednesday's finish to ½c off. May $1.00⅛ to $1.00¼; corn ⅛c to ⅝c up; May 80⅜c to 80½c; oats ⅛c to ¼c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

HEPBURN WRONG IN ALL CHARGES DECLARES ROSS

Never Received Government Pay Says Ottawa Publisher and Hydro Leader.

WEALTH, AGE WRONG.

Met Own Expenses as Royal Commissioner on Social Welfare.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19 (CP)—Asserting he had never drawn a dollar from the Ontario Government or any other government in his life, P. D. Ross, dismissed member of the Ottawa Hydro Commission, yesterday issued an open letter to Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario. Mr. Ross was answering references to himself made by the premier in an interview at Toronto. The letter, in part, follows:

"Dear Mr. Hepburn:—

"I note in a Canadian Press despatch to-day from Toronto that, in connection with the Ottawa Hydro Commission, you refer to myself as the most bitter Tory partisan in Ontario, as a millionaire, as 80 years of age, and as getting money from the Ontario Government.

"Your remarks are quite true except that I am not a bitter Tory partisan; that, alas, I am not a millionaire; that, thank goodness, I am no 80 years af age, and that I have never got a dollar of money in my life from the Ontario government or any other government.

"If you refer to the salaries of the Ottawa Hydro Commission, that money is paid entirely by the City of Ottawa.

"If you refer to the fact that I was chairman of the Ontario Royal Commission on Social Welfare, I did not get any salary, and I paid my own expenses during the year the commission was at work. The government gave us an appropriation for expenses, but I returned my share of that to the government.

"All rules have exceptions. It would be impolite in me to insinuate that when the Psalmist said in the Bible that 'all men are liars,' he meant to include even a premier of Ontario. If I wanted to insinuate anything as regards your veracity, I would be polite enough to remark what was once said of another public man, that he was in the habit of being guilty of terminological inexactitudes."

Mr. Ross then went on to review statements made by the premier in the course of the recent Ontario election campaign, which he said were inaccurate and which the premier had never troubled to correct or withdraw.

Her Bet On Tigers Brings Ninety Days

DETROIT, Oct. 19. — The cheering and tumult that was the Word Series re-echoed in the court room of Judge John P. Scallen yesterday when Elaine Morgan, 23, of St. Louis, was sentenced to 90 days for defrauding a loop hoted.

Miss Morgan came to Detroit with a member of the St. Louis Cardinals, she said, quarreled with her cavalier and proceeded to bet all her money on the Tigers. This was a silly thing to do future events indicated, and the end of the series found Miss Morgan with an unpaid $42 hotel bill.

Judge Scallen sentenced Miss Morgan after discovering that she was on probation for passing bad cheques in Kansas and had served 30 days on a similar charge in Oklahoma.

Boycotted Wife Refused Divorce

PHILADELPHIA, October 19 (C.P.). — John A. Clements, publishing house cashier, has been refused a divorce by common Pleas Court Judge Horace Stern because, he said, Clements had "boycotted" his wife for an entire year before they separated.

Clements had charged his wife, Rose, with desertion. A Special Master recommended a decree, but was reversed by the Judge, who said:

"He refused to talk to her, or eat at the same table. He refused to share the same bedroom. He commanded her not to touch even his laundry."

The wife, Judge Stern added, deserved commendation for her patience, rather than to be penalized for finally leaving Clements.

MAYORS DECIDE TO OUST CUPID

Aim to Stop Young Men Marrying in Order to Secure Relief.

PROBLEM IS REAL.

HAMILTON, Oct. 19 (CP)—Aiming to put a stop to the growing practice of young men getting married for the sole purpose of becoming eligible for relief, the conference of Ontario mayors, now in session here decided yesterday to ask a change in relief regulations, so that newly wed couples would not be eligible for municipal aid until three months after the date of their marriage.

"It's just transferring the residence rule over to marriage," Mayor Tice of Belleville said.

Mayor Sturm, Kitchener, asked if the fault was not with the regulations for discrimnating against single men, Mayor Kerr, Stratford, declared it was difficult to war on Dan Cupid.

Mayor Wilton of Hamilton gave notice that at the next session of Ontario mayors he would present a resolution which would ask that property qualifications for elected representatives of the people be reinstated.

Candidates in Jail

"At ... last election, some of the candidates were in jail," he said. 'Property qualifications would eliminate a lot of this trouble."

Mayor Sturm proposed that the Dominion Government collect an extra income tax from all persons and turn the revenue over to municipalities.

Mayor Davis of Chatham declared that there could be no difficulty in collecting income tax if the assessors were on the job and remarked that it was illegal for cities not to make such a levy.

A special committee was named to investigate the question.

There was unanimous approval of the suggestion that the Ontario Government assist municipalities in the upkeep of those roads and bridges in the municipality which form a natural link between provincial highways leading into and out of towns or cities.

The conference approved the proposal that Mothers' Allowances be extended to care for mothers with but one child.

A resolution was passed asking the Provincial Government to set up a board of control to exercise some power in the development of natural gas utilities. Mayor Davis of Chatham sponsored the move.

Nude, White "Corpse" Only Store Dummy

PITSBURGH, Pa. Oct. 19. (CP) If all murder mysteries were as easy to solve as this one, police wouldn't mind at all, at all.

It started when some one found the nude, white "corpse" of a woman behind some bushes tat the old Montefiore Hospital, deserted for several years.

A police car rushed to the scene and a crowd gathered in the eerie darkness. But the officer who pulled out the 'body" found it was only a discarded clothing store dummy.

DESTROYING THE EVIDENCE COSTS MAN FINE OF $10

LOS ANGELES, October 19 C. P.). — Hal M. Halvorfen walked briskly across a downtown intersection early to-day, a package under his arm.

Two policemen, in a patrol car, called on him to halt. He ran to the rear of their automobile and smashed the package. Wine ran out.

"Hey, what are you doing that for?" asked one policeman.

"Destroying the evidence," grinned Halvorfen.

"Haven't you heard of repeal?" the officer exclaimed.

"By golly, I forgot all about it," said Halvorfen ruefully.

And so Halvorfen pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking glass in the street, and received a suspended $10.00 fine.

Healthy ...Happy...Wise!

COUNT those friends of yours who get a lot of happiness out of living. Health helps them see the bright side of things—smooths over the every-day bumps. They're happy because they're healthy.

Downcast days frequently follow common constipation. It may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet it can be overcome usually by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Special processes of cooking and flavoring make Kellogg's ALL-BRAN more palatable than ordinary bran.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

IMPORTANT

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—because it is all bran with only flavor added, gives you the generous amount of "bulk" needed to promote proper elimination.

It is recommended as much more efficient in relieving constipation than part-bran products which cannot contain as much "bulk."

The evening service, Mr. Osbourne chose as his lesson, the 14th chapter of John from the 15th verse, his text was John 4th chapter, 10th verse.

Negatives Win Out In A.Y.P.A. Debate

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 19. (By Examiner Correspondent). — The regular meeting of Christ Church A.Y.P.A. was held in the Parish Hall, Tuesday evening, there being a good attendance. The fee of two dollars was to be sent to Peterborough for affiliation with the local district council.

A debate was much enjoyed. Resolved 'That the moving picture shows are more ' injurious than helpful." The affirmative was taken by Miss Vera Wood and Charles Smith. After much consideration the judges—Miss Eileen Linton, Rev. T. H. Floyd and Mr. Tyrell of Hastings—decided that the negatives had won.

After a sing song of a few old favorites the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A.Y.P.A. District Council

GERMANY FAILING TO PAY FOR GOODS

Geman Firms Willing to Pay But Too Many Restrictions.

HALIFAX, Oct. 19 (CP)—Difficulties encountered by British textile mills in collecting payment for exports to Germany were being encountered also by the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation in shipping iron ore from its mines at Wabana, Newfoundland, Sir Newton Moore, Dosco president, sid here to-day.

Accompanied by H. J. Kelley, vice-president and general manager of the corporation, Sir Newton came to the Capital on business after inspecting the coal mines and steel plant in Cape Breton.

Most of the ore exported from Wabana went to Germany, he explained, and considerable difficulty was being experienced in connection with payments owing to the restrictions placed by the German government on transfers of money outside of Germany.

All of the German plants are solvent and willing and anxious to make payment," he said. "It is hoped that the arrangements now being made between the British and German government for payments against reciprocal purchases through the Reichsbank to the Bank of England will prove a practical solution of the difficulty."

The steel-coal executive said that at present there was encouraging activity in the Cape Breton industrial area. While all branches of the plant were not equally busy, the whole operation was about 60 per cent.

Mr. Harry Seaborn of Blezzard's, was a visitor in town on Thursday, the guest of his brother, Mr. George Seaborn and Mrs. Seaborn.

A little amusement was caused on Thursday morning, when a well-known professional man walked up Front street wearing his last summer's straw hat, and seemed quite surprised when a friend asked him if the season had been extended, the explanation was that doctor had a call up-town and just grabbed the first hat he came to from the hall rack, jumped into his car and drove away. However, everyone knows this man has a food felt hat and even at that one could make allowances.

Freeman Bailey has just brought to town a few branches taken from one of his black currant bushes which had started to sprout, with some fair sized leaves already formed, and the pasture fields are greener and more luxuriant than they have been all summer.

Another item which might be recorded among the odd things was the queerest looking potatoe—in fact there were nine potatoes all joined together resembling some pre-historic relic and quite enough for dinner for the average family. This particular freak was grown in Charles Palliser's garden and is on display in a Front street window.

BYRON M. RICHMOND.

MADOC, October 19 (Examiner Correspondence). — The funeral of the late Byron M. THAT DEPRESSED FEELING IS LARGELY LIVER

Wake Up Your Liver Bile . . . Without Calomel, And Feel Like a Million Dollars.

Nothing can put your system out of kilter more quickly than your liver. All it has to do is stop pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels—and life certainly gets grey. That sluggish flow of bile slows up digestion and elimination and makes you "feel punk" Your stomach acts up—gas, bloating, sourness, pain. Your breath is bad and the taste in your mouth is nasty. Your head aches. Skin is blotchy. All, of course, because your system is full of poisons.

Mere bowel movers like salts, oil, mineral water, roughage, laxative candy or chewing gum are not good enough to correct this condition entirely. You're livery and you must wake up your liver bile to be happy again.

Avoid calomel (mercury). The thing for you is a box of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They never upset you because they're purely vegetable, gentle and safe; but how they do change your view on life!

Don't waste your money on substitutes. Be sure. Ask for Carter's by name—and get em! Look for the name, Carter's, on the red box. 25c. at all druggists. 30

SCHOOL PLAYGROUNDS.

Figures issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics would seem to indicate that Canada has not made much progress in the direction of utilizing school buildings and playgrounds for recreational purposes outside of school hours.

In the 70 largest cities of the Dominion, we are told there are 1,578 publicly-controlled schools with 1,829 individual playgrounds, the larger number being accounted for by the fact that a number of schools have separate playgrounds for both boys and girl pupils.

That these play areas are not used as extensively as they might be in holiday periods and after school hours is indicated by the fact that only in 20 of the 70 cities was there supervised play on any of the school grounds during the mid-summer vacation each year. In five of these cities the supervisors were paid by the school board, in nine by civic playgrounds authorities, and in six by voluntary associations.

Only one-seventh of the schools had skating rinks last winter, only 202 have properly equipped gymnasiums, and but 20 out of the 1,578 schools in the cities investigated have swimming pools.

There is a vast amount of public money invested in school property—and it has doubtless struck a great many people that it might be possible to get more use out of these educational plants during the hours they are not serving the purpose for which they were created.

JUST DO AS THEY ARE TOLD.

Commenting on the report that workmen had been driven out of a lumber camp near Cochrane by striking bushmen, Attorney-General Roebuck remarked that there had been "little violence."

In this connection the Port Arthur News-Chronicle arises to remark with considerable point that neither was there much violence when workers were chased out of a camp in that district last winter nor when law-abiding citizens were stopped on the highway. "They just had to do what they were told, that was all," says the News-Chronicle.

The point that the Attorney-General seems to be overlooking in this whole affair is that, as happened a year ago, there is danger of the strikers, led by I.W.W. and Workers' Unity League agents, taking the law in their own hands, preventing men who are quite satisfied with the conditions from working, taking possession of the highways and allowing the public to travel only with the permission of the strike leaders.

That is a situation that should not be allowed to develop, but against which apparently nothing is being done at the present time by the authorities.

The rights of strikers are quite clear under the laws of the country, and when they transgress those laws and interfere with the rights of others, those entrusted with the maintenance of law and order are expected to provide protection.

Certainly no Soviet or foreign-born agitators should be allowed to arrogate to themselves power that belongs only to the state.

HOW CAN THEY BE EDUCATED?

"The human element fails, and only by educating the careless driver into safer ways will the present heavy toll be overcome," declares the Ottawa Journal in commenting upon the cause of automobile accidents.

There is no doubt that the great majority of accidents are caused by reckless or careless driving.

In fact, a recent survey of traffic accidents in the United States establishes that fact beyond a doubt.

It revealed excessive speed as the cause of 32 per cent. of fatal accidents, while driving on the wrong side of the road and improperly assuming the right-of-way each caused 13 per cent. Five per cent. of the serious accidents was credited to "cutting-in," and a similar percentage to drunken drivers.

In all of these cases it was obviously the human factor that was chiefly responsible.

When it comes to "educating the careless driver into safer ways," however, there is a problem of major proportions.

Apparently there is a large proportion of those driving motor cars who are deaf to appeals to their common sense, and in view of that condition, it is by no means clear how such drivers are to be educated.

The newspapers have written warning articles to a wearisome degree, safety organizations have issued bulletin after bulletin, but the campaign has apparently failed to develop a generation of careful motorists.

If reckless drivers cannot be educated—and it would seem that most of them cannot be—it may be necessary to take more drastic steps and make it impossible for that type of motorist to handle an automobile at all.

BUSINESS PROSPERITY COMING.

It will be remembered that the well-known advertising firm of A. McKim, Limited, something over a year ago issued a pamphlet, "The Upward Trend of Business," in which the following developments were predicted:

1. The depression is past.
2. Business has entered upon a new cycle.
3. The upward movement will be rapid.
4. The velocity of circulation of money will increase creating the power and the will to buy.
4. The growing demand will go where it is led.
6. Manufacturers, traders and retailers will profit if they plan their course and create demand for their goods by advertising.

How accurate were those predictions Canadians are now in a position to appreciate, but a new brochure just issued by the McKim Company, "Coming Profits to Canada," gives a detailed calculation of the business advance in Canada that tells its own story.

These figures, dealing with the first half of 1934 as compared with the same period of the previous year, show an increase of 21.5 per cent. in car loadings, of 104.2 per cent. in automobile production, of 41.3 per cent. in newsprint production, of 43.4 per cent. in foreign trade, of 9.4 per cent. in the wholesale price index, of 17 per cent. in bank debits, of 85.1 in construction contracts awarded, of 28.2 per cent. in electric power production, and of 41.2 per cent. in the value of gold shipments.

As the booklet remarks, no comment could add force to the impression of progress given by these figures.

Furthermore, this most interesting publication follows up the accurate predictions of a year ago with the emphatic statement that a business prosperity is coming. "Profits are to be made now," says A. McKim, Limited, "and if the Canadian situation develops logically more will be available."

The business concern that takes advantage of its opportunities expands its production and sales through intelligent advertising, will undoubtedly fare well in the coming year.

ONE YOUNG BRITISH FLYER.

Mr. James Melrose, aged 20, seventeen months' flying experience, imperturbable, tireless, skilful pilot and fine navigator, takes his place among the world's great long distance aviators. He arrived at Croydon aerodrome early in the morning a couple of weeks ago, piloting his Puss Moth monoplane to a perfect landing 8 days 9 hours after leaving Port Darwin, Australia, surpassing the previous fastest journey over the route—achieved by Bernard Rubin and Ken Waller last summer—by three hours and J. A. Mollison's official record by no fewer than thirteen.

It was his second important flight. Last month he tested the endurance of himself and of his machine by flying round the coast of Australia, more than 8,000 miles in length, in the new record time of five days, eleven hours. On that journey he averaged 1,250 miles flying in every twenty-four hours. His average on the longer and more difficult flight to England was about 1,200 miles a day.

Far from being exhausted, this amazing young man actually reserved his longest spell in the air for the last full day of his journey, covering 1,800 miles between Cyprus and Lyons before stopping for a brief rest. The next morning he was away long before dawn and soon after seven o'clock he landed at Croydon, where he staggered a customs official by announcing, in reply to the usual question, that he had just arrived from Australia.

The young aviator's achievement and his unaffected modesty have most favorably impressed English flyers. No aviator since Lindbergh has so rapidly made his way into the good graces of English flying men. Actually, he is not unlike the great Swedish-American aviator. He, too, is tall, slender, extremely fair, smiling and quiet of manner. That he will prove an equally great flyer is by no means improbable. Lindbergh was 25 when he flew the Atlantic in 1927, and became world-famous. Melrose, with five years in hand, may well eclipse his forerunner's achievements.

He disclaimed adventures along the route. He had just kept on, he said. He "found places just about where I calculated them to be"—a magnificent understatement of very fine navigation. The only "incident" of the journey was to find Alor Star aerodrome, Malay States, under about two feet of water. "It was like a flying boat landing," he commented. "I had the cabin windows open and the water splashed in." For the rest the flight was comfortable.

These flyers are making the world seem very small. Note these hops from one to another of the world's romantic spots:

Mr. Melrose left Darwin at 6.30 a.m. on September 20, and spent the night at Sourabaya, after flying 1,400 miles. He was off again at 5.30 a.m. the next day, called at Batavia and reached Singapore in the early afternoon. He spent nearly 18 hours in Singapore and set off at 6 p.m. on September 22. After the "flying boat" landing at Alor Star, he flew on to Victoria Point that day. His next day was again relatively short, ending at Calcutta. Thence onward, he made for England in real earnest, covering enormous distances in every stage, flying largely by night, and resting very little. September 24 saw him away from Calcutta at 2.5 a.m. and at Karachi—1,400 miles on—the same evening. The following morning he was again away at about 2 a.m., to reach Basra—1,300 miles—by 3.10 p.m. On September 26 he reached Cyprus. On September 27 he flew in three stages 1,800 miles from Cyprus to Lyons. At 2.45 the next morning he took off from Lyons, landing at Croydon at 7 a.m., less than four days out from Calcutta. He was not tired and after putting his machine in the shed, he went into the aerodrome hotel for an enormous meal of bacon and eggs.

Mr. Melrose estimates fuel and oil to have cost him not quite $500. He left Darwin with 10 one-pound notes in his pocket and still had three of them left when he landed at Croydon.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Ontario Government's most serious handicap at the present time is not the Conservative opposition, but the horde of Liberal job-hunters.

Conservatives in Northumberland have organized for the next Federal election. Evidently they believe in keeping their powder dry, even if no battle is impending for at least six months.

Sentences handed out to the London blackmailers should do much to prove that Ontario is not fruitful soil for enterprises of that nature.

Canada's revenues have been improving at the rate of $80 per minute ever since the beginning of the present fiscal year. And, as the Border Cities Star pertinently remarks, that isn't bad progress in anybody's language.

The Stratford City Council has declined to petition the Government asking for a curtailment of beverage room hours, rightly taking the position that the responsibility for setting those hours is on the shoulders of the Government, and that the regulations should be uniform throughout the province.

Since nearly everyone in an official position seems to be in favor of freer trade between Canada and the United States, why not get on with the job?—Brockville Recorder and Times.

Emma Goldman, After Years of Exile.

After years of exile, Emma Goldman returned to the United States to meet old friends, and to catch up the threads of American life once more. That she can take it on the chin with any politicale personage of the age has been demonstrated. She came back to the United States in as good temper as if she had never been banished. Banishment is a raw experience. Few survive the shock. Napoleon died long before his natural life-limit. Exile was too much for him. After reaching his island-prison he seldom smiled. Read what George Dawson, the great preacher at Birmingham, England, said of him: "There was that great man, Bonaparte—shrieking Frenchmen and some miserable Englishmen to the present day will persist that he was an ill-used man because England put him in prison at St. Helena. For the life of me I cannot see it; it was not a question of the law of nations to be settled by Grotius, Vattel, and Pudendorff; it was a question of self-preservation."

Here was this man, the butcher of humanity—a man who lied by nature and told the truth by accident, who had neither ruth, truth nor pity—and we got hold of him after beating him in battle, and we locked him up. Now we are asked to pity him. Whenever I am asked to pity him, I say, "I shall," and I at once fortify myself by opening the Bible upon the history of Nebuchadnezzar, where I find that howsoever high men may build their Babel tower in this world, it must fall before it reaches heaven. And looking at Bonapart's miserable conduct in prison, and his death, if I were the jury to sit on his body: "Died of imprisonment, and it served him right." This much must be said, Napoleon Bonaparte suffered from no indignities at the hands of those who guarded him during his prison days. Politicals in these days in some countries are entirely outside the law. Emma Goldman tells a story that ought to be read.

Viola Lima, Her First Step.

Her book written, then came her first step in the attempt to organize the American Youth. A Central Bureau was set up. Its purpose, she asserted, was "to assist to foster sound, intellectual, spiritual and physical development of the youth of America." Her purpose known, money began to flow to her in a little stream of yellow, like a vein of gold held fast in the rock, suddenly become liquid. Anne Morgan does not easily part company with any bit of her income. But she gave and that liberally. Mrs. August Belmont is surrounded with appeals daily. The habit of saying "No" rapidly may may become a set, cold habit. To overlook one who has need, and for us to know about the need, and to pass it by, is sure to result in our overlooking all who may appeal to us. To know what, and when, and how much is a necessary accomplishment in these days.

Social causes, as well as the individual in need, are stretching their empty hands towards us. In the great cities contact cannot be avoided either with the worthy, or the unworthy. As has been demonstrated during the past three years, there is more kindly consideration in the human heart than was ever suspected. Many a man thought to be close-fisted is found to be generous-hearted. Men there are outside the church who are more charitable than some within the church.

Viola Lima was surprised to have Mrs. August Belmont offer to help finance her venture. More surprised was she when several brokers and business men in New York expressed their desire to help put the Central Bureau on its feet. The members of the Central Bureau were wisely chosen. Miss Lima refused to handle any of the funds. She is business clean. Her integrity has been tested in many ways. Her probity is not questioned. Because of her character qualities any appeal she makes for her cause is successful.

Emma Goldman, Lot of Political Refugees.

Does banishment strengthen the hold of the political refugee? Victor Hugo was a political refugee. While forcibly in a foreign land he wrote Jean Valgean. Nothing bitter in that immortal book. It was an exposure of the heartlessness of those who have, and of the miserable condition of the oppressed poor. It was more constructive than it was expository. Culture without the reading and appreciation of Victor Hugo's works is very incomplete. Exile lifted him into prominence. Banishment did not mar his idealism. Alone in another land he made the pen mightier than any rod of empire.

Emma Goldman, in 'The Nation,' of October 10, visualizes the crowd of world refugees: "The world war put an end to the golden era when a Bakunin and a Herzen, a Marx and a Kropotkin, a Malatesta and a Lenin, Vera Sazulich, Louise Michel, and all the others could come and go without hindrance. In those days who cared about passports or visas? Who worried about one particular spot on earth? The whole world was one's country. One place was as good as another where one could continue one's work for the liberation of one's autocratic native land."

Not in the wildest dreams did it occur to these revolutionaries that the time might come when the world would be turned into a huge penitentiary, or that political conditions might become more despotic and inhuman than during the worst period of the czars.

The war for democracy and the advent of right and left dictatorships destroyed whatever freedom of movement political refugees had formerly enjoyed. Tens of thousands of men and women and children have been turned into modern Ahasueruses, forced to roam the earth, admitted nowhere; if they are fortunate enough to find asylum, it is nearly always for a short period only; they are always exposed to annoyance and chicanery, and their lives made a hell."

Flinton Man Guilty Criminal Negligence

(Examiner Correspondence)

TWEED, Oct. 18.—Harold Cox of Flinton, pleaded guilty to a charge of criminal negligence, when he appeared before Magistrate Casement in the Police Court here on Tuesday.

The charge arose from an accident which occurred to Ed Wright while working on a ladder at the Trudeau garage. It appears that Cox backed his car across the road striking the ladder and hurling Mr. Wright to the ground. The latter was quite seriously injured and was a patient at Nicholl's Hospital, Peterborough. On the young man's plea of guilty and the fact that it was wholly an accident, Crown Attorney Bryson Donnan advised that other charges against the accused be withdrawn.

He was therefore given 6 months suspended sentence. Cox was defended by I. D. Corcoran and, the charges were laid by Constable J. C. Hayes.

A Thought

LIFE

What's life? A story or a song;
A race on any track;
A gay adventure, short or long;
A puzzling nut to crack;
A grinding task, a pleasant stroll;
A climb; a slide down hill;
A constant striving for a goal;
A cake; a bitter pill;
A pit where fortune floats or stings;
A playground full of fun;
With many, any of these things;
With others, all in one.

What's life? To love the things we see;
The hills that touch the skies;
The smiling sea; the laughing lea;
The light in woman's eye;
To work and love the work we do;
To play a game that's square;
To grin a bit when feeling blue;
With friends our joys to share;
To smile, though games be lost or won;
To earn our daily bread;
And when at last the day is done;
To tumble into bed.

—Griffith Alexander.

What's in The NAME

of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

PORT HOPE, ONTARIO

The earliest settlers of the site on which Port Hope now stands were Mississauga Indians, back in 1778. Between that year and 1790 only two white men made their appearance and they were itinerant trappers. The Indian name for the little settlement was Cochingomink, but later was changed to Smith's Creek, in honor of Peter Smith, one of these traders.

The first permanent white settler was Myndert Harris, a U.E. Loyalist who had come from Port Royal, N.S., in 1792. Several Nova Scotia settlers followed Harris and a small white settlement sprang up. The name Smith's Creek fell into gradual disuse and the name Toronto was substituted. In some cases both names were used and an agitation was started for a permanent name.

A mass meeting was held in 1819, two years after a post-office had been established and one of the residents suggested the name of Port Hope, without giving any reason. The name was officially adopted and has continued in use to this day.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

CAN YOU DO THE TRICK?

I've been reading a book on secrets of magic—and now I know how everything's done

When the magician asks me to select a card from a deck and then tells me what card it is, I know how he did it.

I know how he changes the spots on cards, produces rabbits from hats, makes cigarets vanish in the air.

When he saws a woman in two, makes a pretty girl disappear from a cabinet or the man go through a mirror—I know exactly how he does it and if I want to be smart I can stand right up in the audience and explain it to everybody.

He's fooling me, but I know his secrets. He has trick slates, trick tubes, trick containers and trick decks of cards. I can't see how he does the things he does, but I know he isn't doing what he says he is. His hand is quicker than my eye, but just the same "it's just a trick".

When he puts a girl in a box and sticks swords through it in all directions, apparently, then opens the front of the box and shows us that she isn't there, I know exactly how that's done, too. She IS there, in a little partition at the back of the box, but trick mirrors make you think she isn't there at all.

I've read a book that tells all about it—I know HOW he does the tricks, but I could never do those tricks myself. My fingers aren't clever enough, my mind isn't fast enough. I haven't the experience. And, furthermore, I haven't any desire to be a magician.

And that's the way it is with many, many things. We know how a lot of things are done, but WE can't do them.

There's magic everywhere in this world but few of us know how tomake it. We see poor people getting happiness out of common things, we see fine women loving most ordinary men, we see deaf lads like Edison becoming great inventors, we see average fellows doing incredibly brave things, we see wonders happening all around us—and we can tell you HOW they happen, but we can't tell you any more than that. We have all, somewhere, read a book of magic and received a hint about the mystery of it—and that's all we know about it.

Life is "just a trick", but what a trick it is!

One-Minute Pulpit

Look thou unto me, and be merciful unto me, as thou usest to do unto those that love thy name.—Psalm 119:132.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE FIRST ANGLICAN ORDINATION.

On this date, in 1789, the first ordination in the history of the church of England in Canada took place in St. Paul's church, Halifax. The order of deacon was conferred by BishopInglis on his nephew, Archibald Paine Inglis, who was then and long afterwards principal of the Academy at Windsor, afterwards King's College. This Academy was the honor of being the oldest Canadian college, with the exception of Laval at Quebec, which was founded in 1668.

One of the first acts of Bishop Inglis after his arrival in Nova Scotia—he was, of course, the last rector under the British regime of old Trinity in New York—was the encouragement of education and he opened the academy at Windsor, the first Church of England school in Canada. In 1790 the Legislature of Nova Scotia passed an act for "the permanent establishment and effectual support of a college at Windsor" and 400 pounds per annum was voted for its maintenance. It was given a royal charter in 1802. Not so many years ago it was destroyed byfire and was removed to Halifax and affiliated with Dalhousie University. It has given many distinguished graduates to the religious and lay life of Canada, perhaps the most notable being Thomas Chandler Haliburton, the author of "Sam Slick" and of many other more important but less known works.

It may be worth adding that one of the first acts of Archdeacon (afterwards Bishop) Strachan was to set about the creation of a church university at Toronto; but it was not until 1842 that King's College was opened there, to become later the University of Toronto.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner

Full name and address (complete) must be given in all samples sent in.

Ethel M. Dean, 1258 Lansdowne Ave., Toronto

Your handwriting is illustrative of a very gentle and refined nature. You seem to have a sweet personality, and I am sure that people must love you for your genuine devotion. You are loyal and true. You have just sufficient humor with which to appeal to the friends with whom you come in contact every day, but you are never loud or obtrusive in your remarks.

You appear to be rather nervous, and your health is perhaps below par, but if so, you can take more care of it than usual, through correct diet and nerve-building foods.

You are artistic, modest and retiring. Usually you efface yourself, rather than present your views, when in a large company of people.

Your name reminds one (according to the easy manner in which it is written) of soft music and ambition almost reached. Your 't' bars show flights of imagination. Your lower loops show interest in outdoor recreation, and all other graceful activities such as swimming and dancing.

Edith B. Smith, Warsaw

Your handwriting indicates a keen mind and a refined, well-poised bearing. You are exacting as to detail in any finished product, and will not be satisfied with 'slap dash' work.

You are especially fond of debates; in fact, any conversation or lectures where you have the ability to make use of that keen mind of yours.

Your brain is retentive, and you can impart knowledge once you have grasped the fundamentals. You have sufficient will-power and determination to enable you to complete any task which you deem worthy of merit.

You are easily able to ascertain if the project in question is worthy of the accomplishment, because your power of discernment is ingenious.

The general outline of your writing depicts intelligence beyond the average. You are adaptable to existing conditions, genial and thoughtful.

LOSSES OUTNUMBER INDUSTRIAL GAINS

Oils Again Volume Leaders, But Issues Most Prominent Close on Downside.

TORONTO, October 19 (C.P.). — The Industrial Board of the Toronto Exchange followed the same dull pattern to-day to which it has adhered through the week. Loss slightly outnumbered gains, but the variations in most cases were narrow. The oils were again the volume leaders, but the issues most prominent in the trading closed on the down side. A broad market in the foods produced a preponderance of gains. Utilities and beverages closed lower generaly.

WIRE PROBLEMS TOLD KIWANIS

Technical Aspects of Conducting Mediums is Subject of Address by E. T. Tracy.

YEARS OF RESEARCH.

The story of the wire and cable which plays such an important part in the modern civilization was unfolded for Kiwanians by Edward H. Tracy of the wire and cable section of the Canadian General Electric engineering staff at uncheon today. Mr. Tracy dealt in a conversational manner with the technical aspects of a wide variety of conducting mediums.

Illustrating the problems which wire manufacturers have been required to face in order to keep apace of present-day needs, the speaker referred to the familiar type of wire used to conduct the ignition charges in automobile engines. With the necessity of taking care of 5 000-volt charges on these wires, years of research was required before a suitable type of ignition wire could be developed. The problem was solved eventually by the evolution of a treatment for rubber which gave the rubber insulation a resistance to high voltages unheard of before and a resistance against the disintegrating effect of the "corona" discharge of high voltages, he said.

President A. B. Gates introduced Mr. Tracy as a graduate of the University of New Brunswick. He spoke of him as a competent authority on the subject of wires and cables. At present on the staff of the local branch of the C.G.E. Mr. Tracy is shortly to be transferred to the Transformer Division in Toronto.

Freddie Fowler, one of the city's younger singers, entertained the club with two songs. He was accompanied at the piano by Martin B. Chenhall.

ALBERT COLLEGE PRINCIPAL QUITS

Rev. Bert Howard of Arcola, Saskatchewan, is Appointed New Head.

PRINCIPAL 8 YEARS.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 19.—Following a meeting of the Board of Governors of Albert College yesterday, it was announced that the Rev. Chas. W. Bishop, D.D., had resigned as President of the college, and that his resignation had, with great regret, been accepted. It was also announced that he would be succeeded by the Rev. Bert Howard of Arcola, Sask.

Rev. Dr. Bishop has been Principal of the college for the past eight years. He was appointed at the time that the fine new buildings in which this old college is now housed were opened.

It is understood that the retiring Principal plans to return to the pulpit of the United Church, of which he is a leading minister.

Dr. Bishop was formerly minister of the Sherbourne Street United Church in Toronto, in whose pulpit he was later succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Richard Roberts, now moderator of the General Council of the United Church. Previous to that he was for some years the general secretary of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. of Canada. Through his connection with the Y.M.C.A. he became widely known through Canada, and especially because of the leadership which he gave to the service which the Y.M.C.A. rendered in the Canadian Army throughout the Great War.

The new Principal, the Rev. Bert Howard, is well-known on the Prairie, where he has held several important charges in the United Church. He has been conspicuous in the relief work of the United Church in the dried-out areas of Saskatchewan, and has made successful appeals on behalf of that work in Ontario.

Successful Concert St. George's A.Y.P.A.

A very successful concert under the auspices of St. George's A.Y.P.A. was held in the parish room on Thursday evening. The program, which was arranged by Mr. Arthur Busby, president of the A.Y.P.A., was greatly appreciated by the audience, and all the artists responded to encores.

Vocal solos were sung by Mrs. H. Doig, Ernie Davies and Walter Farr. Recitations were given by Miss Queenie Hope and Mrs. Otto Laderach. The instrumentalists included Mrs. C. Searles and Mrs. Turner, who gave several piano duets. Messrs. Chapman and Manley played harmonica and guitar. Al Pooley played the piano accordian, and sang several balads.. A trio, composed of Tom Arnott with the harmonica, Mr. Hopkins, Sr., violin, and Clarence Hopkins, banjo, rendered several old time selections, while Tom Parker delighted the audience with witty songs and sayings, accompanying himself with the guitar. Accompanists were Mrs. R. King and Mrs. Turner. Mrs. W. H. Andrews acted as chairman for the evening.

At the conclusion of the concert, refreshments were served to the artists and their friends by a committee under the convenorship of Mrs. F. Dorrell. The president expressed his appreciation to all who had helped in making the concert a success.

PRINCE INSPECTS PLANES ENTERED

The Prince shook hands with all the competitors.

The plane of Miss Jacqueline Cochran of New York was weighed to-day and given official approval. The gross weight allowed it was 7,000 pounds, but, loaded with fuel and oil, it weighed only 6,100, so she has an allowance of 900 pounds more for herself and her co-pilot, Wesley Smith of New York, their food, parachutes, water and other articles.

James Woods of Australia failed to hear from the United States Department of Commerce which had ruled his plane should not exceed 4,500 pounds, and from which he asked a revised ruling. He decided to go ahead with his plans on the basis of the certificate which he said "will only allow me gasoline enough for about four hours' flying time."

Seventh Fastest.

The handicapping was completed to-day and it gave Wright a handicap speed of 154.02 miles an hour and a time allowance of 79 hours 57 minutes, thereby ranking him as the seventh fastest in the handicap section of the race.

C.W. A. Scott of London was ranked as the officially fastest in that section with a speed of 184.44 miles an hour and a 66 hours 45 minutes 36 seconds time allowance.

Queen Mary evidently has no doubts about the Flying Mollisons reaching Australia.

The Queen, who visited the aerodrome to-day to see the machines and competitors, asked the Mollisons to convey a message for her to the Duke of Gloucester, her third son, who is now in Melbourne for the centenary celebrations there.

The King shook hands with a number of the pilots, and both inspected the machines in the hangars, staying for more than half an hour.

Lord Londonderry, Minister for Air, and Stanley Bruce Australian High Commissioner, were among other visitors to wish the pilots luck.

EARLY STRENGTH IS SHORT LIVED

Prices Weaken to Show Liberal Amount of Recessions During Afternoon.

TORONTO, October 19 (C.P.). — A morning show of strength was short-lived to-day on the mining section of the Toronto Exchange, and during the afternoon prices slowly weakened to show a liberal springling of recessions at the close. Selling was again in evidence in B.R.X., Read Authier, and Olga Oil, silvers and coppers were slow and heavy at the close.

WELSHMEN ENJOY MUSICAL PROGRAM

Young People Make Very Good Showing in Children's Competitions.

An evening's entertainment, unique in its character, was enjoyed last evening by members of St. David's Society at their regular meeting in the W.O.W. Hall. It was an attempt to introduce something in the nature of an Eisteddfod or musical festival, similar to those held annually in many towns in Wales and also in England. The initial step was taken a year ago, when the "Juniors" of the society were encouraged to compete in the art of public speaking. Last evening was also "Children's Night," when children of members were eligible to enter the competitions for handwriting, art, recitation and singing. There were two classes for each of the two first-named subjects, namely: under ten years of age, and eleven years and over. The recitation and singing contests were divided into three classes, namely: Junior, 8 years and under; Intermediate, 9 to 12 years, and Senior, 13 years and over.

Miss Cathleen McCarthy of The Examiner staff was present to act as adjudicator for the singing and recitation, while Mrs. George Blowers, who has had many years of experience in children's school work was elected to judge the art and handwriting. The young people made a very good showing of their talents, the tiny tots of 3 and 4 years old causing much amusement as they stood bravely trying to face the audience for their first appearance.

The list of entrants varied in number, the largest being the Senior art class, with seven competitors, while the Senior recitation class had one lone entrant.

Mrs. Blowers was not present, her general health not permitting her to be out too much in the evenings. She had sent her adjudications and had taken much time and trouble in studying the details of the work of close contestants.

The following were awarded the prizes in each class:—

Junior Recitation—Bobby Bradbury.

Intermediate Recitation — Aileen Hughes.

Senior Recitation—Kathryn Edwards.

Junior Singing—Margaret Jones.

Intermediate Singing—Lolo Bradbury.

Senior Singing—Kathryn Edwards

Junior Writing—Aileen Hughes (Mona).

Senior Writing — Gwen Davies (Weeping Willow).

Junior Art—Winnie Simmonds (Blondie), and Gladys Simmonds (Tiny), tied.

Senior Art—Gwen Davies (Weeping Willow).

Between the competitions, three very fine humorous recitations were given by little Miss Barbara Miller; and "Juanita" was sung in duet by Mrs. W. J. Davies and Mr. Alex Kirkcaldy; with Miss M. Flowers at the piano.

Mrs. Hughes tendered a hearty vote of thanks to the adjudicators and to Barbara Miller for her pleasing recitations. The prizes for the evening were donated by members, Mrs. Blowers kindly donating those for handwriting and art.

Rev. J. L. Hughes, president, presided for the evening's entertainment, and for the business session which preceded the competitions, and continued afterwards.

Several new members were present and received a welcome; also Miss Jarrett, a guest of the evening. Mrs. John Parry and baby who have just returned from an extended visit to Wales were also given a welcome.

The main business was the suggested proposal of the St. David's Society of Toronto to present here in the near future their concert form of Sir Joseph Parry's Welsh opera "Blodwen." This opera was given by them in Toronto last week, and was attended by three of the members of the local St. David's Society. The members were in favor of accepting the suggestion, the details being left for the executive to decide.

Following the contests, and before the final business, dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. W. Williams, and members of the social committee.

Published Book.

In 1920 he published his book, "The March on Paris."

The aged Field Marshal long had been saddened by the death of his only grandchild, Alexandra, who suffered fatal injuries in a motor accident near Bordeaux last March.

The 85th birthday of the old fighter on May 20, 1931, was the signal for a great demonstration by the former comrades of Field Marshal Von Kluck.

Celebrating at the suburban home in Gruenewald with members of his family, he received loads of flowers, letters and telegrams.

The late President Von Hindenburg sent an autographed photograph with cordial congratulations.

VOTERS' LISTS TO BE POSTED

Enumeration of Electors in the City Has Been Completed.

REVISION COURTS.

Enumeration of city voters for the next Federal elections was practically completed yesterday afternoon, Vincent Eastwood informed The Examiner to-day.

A few return calls remained to be made for minor personal details. Mr. Eastwood said he believed the enumerators had done their work well, and that the compilation of the lists of names had been thorough.

Announcement will be made in a few days of the arrangements for revision at several places in the city as a final opportunity for every qualified elector to be listed.

In the meantime the primary lists will be posted in each division of the city for examination by voters to make sure that their names have not been omitted.

Enumeration in the townships has been proceeding this week, and three extra days next week are provided as additional time for the enlistments in the country.

BE TWO WEEKS BEFORE SUSPECT IS IN CANADA

claiming Canadian authorities should have immediately sent to see him persons who thought they could identify him as one connection with the kidnap gang.

Today's hearing by Commissioner Quinn was the third since Meisner surrendered. Two previous hearings had been postponed at the request of the representative of the British Consul to allow further time for preparation of Ontario's case.

Expect Second Arrest

WINDSOR, Oct. 19.—(CP)— The Border Cities Star in a newspage story today says it has reliable information a new angle has been injected into the kidnapping of John Labatt, wealthy London, Ont., brewer and that another arrest may be expected at any time.

A Detroit police officer, the story says, while making a cursory examination of the police fyles, noticed a photograph of a former bootlegger that bore a remarkable resemblance to David Meisner, whose extradition to Canada to answer charges in connection with the case was ordered at Detroit today.

The new suspect is said to have been at one time friendly with Al Pegram, who has been definitely identified with the kidnapping. Pictures of the ex-bootlegger have been forwarded to Toronto for witnesses to look at.

Shaft Is Completed At Wingold Property

Sinking of the shaft at Wingold Mines' property adjoining San Antonio has been completed to its present objective of 500 ft., according to official announcement. The second level station has been cut at 275 ft. and the crosscut to intersect the No. 1 and No. 2 veins has progressed a matter of some 40 ft. According to the dip of the veins another hundred feet of advancement should reach the No. 1 vein. Barring unforeseen delays or a change in the vein dip the objective should be reached about the end of this month.

In the meantime development of the No. 1 vein at the 150 ft. level is progressing favorably. To date the vein has been drifted on for a distance of 55 ft. In the opinion of mine officials the material opened ranks as good commercial grad ore. Last channel sampling results showed .42 ounces and .56 ounces respectively in the east and west drift faces. Visible gold is being encountered which is not included in the foregoing assay results.

Work on the 150-ft. level was held up for a few days pending the receipt of additional ore cars. These are now on hand and development on both levels is going forward. Thirty-eight men are employed.

McGill, who are staging the tournament this year as defending champions, had a total of eight points. University of Toronto were second with five points while Universite de Montreal and Queen's University, Kingston, both had four points. Royal Military College, Kingston, had a single point.

YOUTH CONVICTED OF STEALING TIRE

Placed on Suspended Sentence—Charge Against Brother Withdrawn.

Charged with the theft of an automobile tire, and found guilty, a 17-year-old local youth was to-day placed on probation for two years. His younger brother, against whom a similar charge was withdrawn by the Crown, was warned by Magistrate A. E. Gee as to his future conduct.

According to the evidence produced by the prosecution the tire, the property of William Warner, was stolen early in October from the yard at the rear of Detcher's garage. The yard also contained a number of discarded tires that were to be sold as junk.

It was subsequently sold by the accused for seventy-five cents, and it was later taken possession of by city police.

Going into the witness box in his own defence, the accused, who was represented by W. J. Arthur Fair, denied having taken the tire from Detcher's garage, although he admitted having disposed of the tire.

He said that his younger brother, who was in the habit of going about salvaging junk, brought the tire home one afternoon. It was loaded on a small wagon with several other old tires.

Accused had been told by his father, he testified, that if the tire had not been stolen he was at liberty to sell it.

In answer to Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., the youth did not know whether the tire was on the rim or not when his younger brother first brought it home. He had believed that his younger brother had put the tire on one of the many rims that were lying around the yard at the house, and he had sold the tire without being aware of the fact that it was stolen.

He admitted a previous conviction for shopbreaking four years ago, on which occasion he had been sent to the Industrial School.

After finishing his lessons Peter spent some time with his grief-stricken mother.

"Papa has gone, mama, but I'll always be good and true to you," the court chamberlain heard him say.

In order to give the king a chance to travel and study abroad during a part of the year, Prince Paul and the other regents are trying to circumvent a paragraph of the constitution which says the king must preside permanently in Yugoslavia. The prince and Peter's mother believe the boy would suffer from the constant flattery and privileges to which he would be subjected in the atmosphere of the royal palace. His mother wants him to grow up like any schoolboy, leading an outdoor life with sports and games.

EARLY MORNING SUBURBAN FIRE

inated was gutted, while the roof of the house was completely burned off and each of the rooms and contents suffered the effects of smoke and water.

Mr. Burke, who resided in the house with his wife and sons Leonard, Stephen and Raymond, has been in poor health for the past three years, he said, and had got up to light the fire because he felt cold. After he first noticed the outbreak, the fire spread so rapidly that Mr. Burke had little time for anything but to arouse the other members of his household and run to a neighbor's house to phone for the brigade.

In response to the alarm, a portion of the equipment responded immediately and in view of the seriousness of the outbreak Chief George Gimblett ordered the pumper to the scene of the fire.

The nearest available supply of water was from the Otonabee River near Purdy's Mill and the firefighters laid a line of hose 2,250 feet long. According to the Chief the line was the longest ever used in the experience of the local Department.

WHEAT PROBLEM WILL BE SOLVED IN NEXT YEAR

John I. McFarland Hopes to Complete His Work in a Year.

APPOINTED IN 1931

Brighter Days Ahead Through Reduction of Surpluses for Canadian Wheat Farmer.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 19 (C.P.). — Delegates to the annual meeting of the Manitoba wheat pool swung into their final session to-day with words of John I. McFarland, general manager of the central selling agency of the Canadian pools, ringing in their ears.

The 'dollar-year' man who stepped into the limelight of Canadian export marketing when over-production glutted world markets, told a private gathering of the Manitoba pool delegates his job would be over —probably—in a year and he would be able to retire.

Appointed in 1931.

Snapped out of retirement by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett in November, 1931, when difficulties facing the pools were mounting, Mr. McFarland took the reins through joint agreement of the pool heads and Dominion and Provincial Governments. His job was to be the Government's man in the wheat business.

Seeing brighter days ahead through reduction of surpluses and greater steps towards co-operation in world markets, Mr. McFarland told the meeting last night his job should be over in a year. The glut on the market was being eliminated and co-operation was advancing despite efforts of Argentine, a signatory to the London wheat agreement.

Premier John Bracken of Manitoba told the meeting the Manitoba Government would never have apologies for guaranteeing bank loans to the Manitoba wheat pool. Payments had been met in full, and he was confident they would continue to be met.

At their business session yesterday, the delegates heard the net payment to farmers on pooled wheat totalled 66⅛ cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern on Fort William basis for the pool year ended July 15, 1934. They voted to continue the voluntary pool basis, permitting the members to either pool their wheat, sell direct through pool facilities and take the street price or bin the wheat and sell when they desire.

SOME SECTIONS NEAR FINISH ON NORTHERN ROAD

tion two miles north of Apsley.

With the plans of the department still unannounced, the men in the camps, totalling more than 600 in number, are now wondering what is ahead for them when the Burleigh to Apsley stretch is completed. If the department decides to continue with the 6-mile stretch linking the end of the present Apsley section with the road from Coe Hill to the Chandos Post Office, there will be work for the crew at No. 6 and some of the men in the other camps all winter. It is possible that some of the crews may be moved as complete units to new sections of the Northern Development project.

Sections Are Open

Considerable portions of the highway are open to traffic although a long, rough detour over the old road still exists on the No. 1 section. The other detours are shorter and in better condition.

The wide, well drained surface of the highway is covered with loose cut stone at present. Travellers over the road in the future will have lots to remind them of the hard work which went into its construction, for jagged cliffs of granite and limestone cut by the blasts of tons of dynamite loom over the road at intervals almost the entire length of its course.

GIRL SOBS LOVE FOR SUITOR AT DEATH INQUEST

Ex-Fiance Wounds Rival and Kills Himself as She Watches.

AT CHICAGO HOME

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—There were two men who loved Agnes Broberg, 19. One of them shot the other and then killed himself yesterday in the girl's presence at the entrance of her home. Too late, long after the tragedy, Agnes said:

"The one I loved, the one I really loved all the time, was Elof. I know that now."

That was Elof Gustafson, 23. The other was Walter Widen, 27. The two men had been friends.

Agnes' Story

Agnes, her voice shaken, told this story:

"Elof and I had been going together for two years. We saw each other every night. Maybe that is too often—because it led to petty quarrels. About six weeks ago we had such a quarrel at a dance. Elof introduced Walter to me and I went out with Walter several times. It made Elof jealous—I wish to heaven I had not gone it."

She was being taken home by Walter Monday night when Elof, who aparently had been waiting, followed them into the entrance and drew a gun, saying to Walter:

"I want to know if you are treating Agnes right?"

Wounds Rival

Walter replied:

"O course I am."

But Elof said:

"I'm going to make you confess."

Then he fired. Two shots in the abdomen. And he placed the gun to his own temple for the third shot.

Agnes wept at the inquest. It was continued to October 31.

Omemee Institute To Hold Bake Sale

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, October 19. — The October meeting of the local branch of the Women's Institute, was held on Wednesday evening, October 17, at the home of Mrs. E. MacPherson with a fair attendance of members and some visitors present.

The chair was occupied by the president, Mrs. Rea, who conducted the usual opening exercises.

An animated discussion took place on ways and means of raising money during the winter months.

Among other things mentioned, such as teas, a committee was appointed to arrange for the making of a quilt and a layette. The ladies also decided to hold a bake sale on Saturday, Oct. 27th.

Mrs. Ackerman gave a reading, entitled "The Back Seat Driver." Master Earl and Miss Hilda Marshall sang several vocal numbers.

Miss Knapp then sponsored a spelling match, which caused a great deal of fun.

Refreshments were served by the convenor, Mrs. MacPherson, and her assistant, Mrs. Henderson. The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Lloyd.

Strikers Clash With Police

Strikers, workers and police are tangled here a furious hand-to-hand melee during the recent uprising in Madrid. It was estimated that 400 were killed as Communists and others protested against the present government. Other outbreaks occurred in practically every other large city in Spain. The revolt was subdued by government troops.

Agricultural Course Of Little Use Here

"Instruction in agriculture would be fine in the rural public schools but I fail to see what will be gained by introducing it into our schools," E. F. Reid, chairman of the Board of Education, said to-day in a comment on the current announcement of Government officials that agricultural courses are to be made available in all public schools during the coming year.

"We have tried on several occasions during the past five or six years since the opening of the Vocational department at the Collegiate to organize an agricultural course but we have never found a worthwhile demand for it Furthermore, I understand there are only three Collegiates in the Province offering agricultural classes and making a success of them."

Mr. Reid was of the opinion that such classes would be of little use to the young pupils of urban public schools. He said the Board has not yet received official information regarding the Department's intention in the matter and that he was not clear himself regarding their object.

JUNIOR FARMERS ENTER CONTEST

REPRESENT ONTARIO.

Six junior farmers of Peterborough County left yesterday for Guelph where they will compete with a large group of young men from throughout the Province for positions on the team representing Ontario in the national contests at the Royal Winter Fair. The boys will take part in the elimination contest to-morrow.

Accompanied by Agricultural Representative A. D. Runions, the members of the party were: Harold Donaldson, Peterborough, and Gordon Hunt, Lakehurst, representing the Boys' Shorthorn Calf Club; Bruce Graham, Hastings, and Ronald McDonald, Warsaw, representing the boys Holstein Calf Club; and Clarence Coons, Lakefield, and Clare Leahy, Lakefield, representing the Boys' Swine Club.

In preparation for the trip to Guelph, the young men, along with a group of other juniors who are trying out for places on the County judging teams at the Ottawa and Royal Winter fairs, visited several farms where they were coached in the judging of various classes of livestock. The places visited and the livestock judged were: Canada Packers, hogs; Bertram Bennett, Peterborough, shorthorn cattle; Col. R. E. Birdsall, Birdsalls, Hereford cattle; Clarence Mann, Peterborough, Ayrshire cattle; and S. S. Staples, Ida, Jersey cattle and Clydesdale horses.

PRAISE EVENS UP FOR CRITIC TALK

Mrs. J. D. Roosevelt at 80 Takes Lively Interest in Activities of President Son.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (C.P.)—"It's awfully nice to be eighty," said Mrs. Jeames Delano Roosevelt on her last birthday celebrated a few days ago, "and I'm awfully glad to be so well and strong."

She declined to promulgate any octogenarian theories about life or to say whether the world was getting any better. "It doesn't matter what I think," she said. "Of course, I did hear some nice things when I was abroad last summer about what my son was doing for the world, but all I know is he is doing the best he can."

"I don't mind criticism much. So many other people say the other thing, that it evens up. I have some perfectly horrid letters sometimes about him. But every one has to sufer who is doing things for the good of the world. I am glad he has such a marvellous fund of knowledge—he got that from his father—and such a wonderful disposition, so that he can do what he has to do and keep strong and well."

Mrs. Roosevelt's birthday celebration began among the petunias and cornstalks in the children's garden of the National Plant and Flower Guild. It was all in the line of duty for the President's mother. She has been giving out prizes at the harvest festival of the tenement-house horticulturalists for 10 years.

Mrs. Roosevelt took back to her son a bouquet of the biggest dahlias ever grown on the East Side and a cluster of pale pink cotton blossoms. "I don't believe the President ever knew that cotton grew in New York city," she said to the donors.

FLYERS READY FOR BIG RACE

London to Melbourne Air Race Test of Flyers and Machines.

MOLLISONS IN

LONDON, Oct. 19 (C.P.)—More than 30 entrants are making last-minute preparations for one of the greatest competitive events the world has ever seen—a race across half the earth at a speed of around 200 miles an hour. The England to Australia air race in connection with the centenary celebrations of Victoria State, will get under way Saturday morning.

Machines have been specially built for this race, which is in two classes—speed and handicap. Special squads of workmen have been toiling day and night to bring the racers, either British or foreign, up to the highest pitch of efficiency. It is estimated a sustained speed of 200 miles an hour is necessary for a real chance of success. There is a speed prize of $50,000.

The take-off point is Mildenhall airport, specially converted for the occasion; the destination is Flemington race track at Melbourne. The distance is 11,500 miles to be flown in six stages. The stages are Mildenhall to Baghdad, 2,500 miles; to Allahabad, 2,300 miles; to Singapore, 2,210 miles; to Darwin, 2,084 miles; to Charleville, 1,390 miles; and to Melbourne, 790 miles.

The winner will probably set his plane down in Melbourne within three days after leaving England, or roughly half the present record time. The European Alps, the Arabian and Indian deserts, the wild Malay Peninsula, the shark-infested Timor Sea and more desert in Australia have to be crossed. The competitors will encounter all sorts of weather. Some of the aerodromes are uncomfortably small for the landing and take-off of the fast craft that are entered.

The race will be truly international in character, with entrants from Great Britain, New Zealand and the Irish Free State. Among noted entrants are Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mollison, Wiley Post, globe-girdling aviator from the United States, C. W. A. Scott, British flier who has twice made the flight between England and Australia; Captain Neville Stack, another experienced long-distance flier, and Col. Roscoe Turner, American speed ace. Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, the great Australian flier, purchased a plane but was unable to get here from Australia in time to enter.

Among the machines specially designed and built for the exacting test that will come in the race, are three De Havilland "Comet" planes, one of which will be flown by the Mollisons. These beautiful racing craft have a maximum speed between 240 and 250 m.p.r. Their range in still is 2,700 miles, considerably longer than others coming within ordinary commercial regulations which limit all entrants.

Another British aeroplane to be flown by Captain Stack is considerable of a "dark horse," like the Comet having only just had its first flights. It is a low-wing monoplane powered with two super-charged 300-h.p. engines. It has a speed of 200 m.p.r. and range of at least 2,000 miles.

BOOM IN MOSCOW.

By CORALIE VAN PAASSEN
Central Press Canadian Writer

Moscow, Oct. 19. — So this is Moscow?

The gray sky, laden with heavy raincloudS, which hung over the flat, monotonous landscape at which I had been looking through the carriage window since the first streaks of dawn, answered exactly to the mental picture I had formed myself of Russia. But that was all. Nothing else came even remotely near the preconceived notions which I had on the most-talked-of city in the world.

When I was whirled away in one of the 60-odd limousines which were required to transfer our party from the Warsaw station to the Grand hotel, I imagined I had landed in some American boomtown. Buildings are going up everywhere, rows upon rows, in all stages of construction. Batteries of heavy trucks were roaring through the streets. All contained building material, window frames, door sashes, radiators, bricks, tarpaper, tiles for roofs, cement sacks, sheets of metal, chimney pots, I don't know what else.

Heavy wine-colored street cars, one motor car and three or four trailers, jammed with people, rumbled by. White-gloved cops were directing traffic. One of them, who halted us, I noticed to my surprise was a tall blonde girl. She walked over to a truck-driver who had drawn up a little too far under the red signal light and gave him a talking-to which made our chauffeur smile. But the offending truckman duly backed up, believe me, without so much as a word of protest, right to the spot which she indicated with her club. Then, when the female police officer looked up and saw us, saw that a carful of strangers had witnessed her show of authority, she blushed.

No Crime Periodicals.

After we had lunch, the sky cleared and I went out for a stroll. I don't know the names of the streets I traversed and it does not matter. I stopped at the newsstands to see what they had to offer. No detective stories. No purple magazines. No crime specials. Nothing but serious books, pamphlets and periodicals, several of them illustrated. Do you know that Moscow, among the mass of newspapers and technical journals, prints a daily magazine of 20 pages devoted exclusively to the theatre and to new books? I didn't know and I was surprised, for there is not another city in the whole world which has anything approaching it. And yet these people here are called barbarians!

Several thousand kiosks throughout the city dispense lemonade, sirups and other kinds of soft drinks. This year the flower-stands are an innovation. They were doing a roaring business in violets, asters, marigolds, dahlias and even roses. Later in the evening I noticed many young people strolling in the streets who carried a flower in their button-hole or pinned on their roubashkas. "Are you trying to imitate the English?" I asked a boy-student by the name of Koska Pankoff, who was kind enough to show me the way to the Second Moscow Art theatre in the evening. I was referring to the gardenia in his coat-lapel. "Not at all," he said. "We are simply beginning to make life more beautiful. We take advantage of every bit of color to brighten existence. Did you notice all the gardeners at work in Moscow? That's something new this year. We are getting a beginning of leisure. We are going to make Moscow as pleasant and as beautiful as Paris or Vienna. We never had a chance before . . ."

"Were there no flowers and parks in Moscow in the old days then?" I asked.

"Certainly," he replied, "but not for the people!"

I bought some flowers myself before going into the theatre. I took violets, but a priest next to me purchased a large bouquet of roses. He stood sniffing at them with evident delight, nodding his head as if he wanted to say, "Well, well, that's how roses smell, is it?" A little girl walked up to him and asked for a flower. He gave her several and laughed happily.

Are these people just children, I thought by myself, that they behave this way as a baby with a new toy?

No Bread Lines.

My first day in Moscow I naturally looked for the famous line-ups of which you hear so much. I saw none in front of the bakeries and food shops, but I saw several queues around five in the afternoon in front of the newsstands when the evening papers were being delivered. This certainly is the land of the newspaper and of the book. They can't print books fast enough to keep up with the thirst for knowledge. Every two or three months a new paper-mill goes into operation, and still there is a shortage of paper. The third volume of Tolstoy's diary was published during the days when I was in Moscow—three million copies—all sold within 24 hours. And that wasn't the only new book published. Alexis Tolstoy, who is no relative of the great sage of Yasnaya Pollyanna, who is also a renowned man of letters, although no longer a count, showed me 19 new books published from July 1 to Sept. 1. Seven were translations from the French and English writers. All sold out in a few days. "There is no coping with the demand for books," said Tolstoy.

"Three million members of the youth league have voluntarily given up smoking cigarettes in order to make more paper available for printing and still there is no immediate hope to supply the demand," he said.

Second Largest Library.

And not only new books are bought. Every nook and corner of Russia is ransacked for old books, the old chateau libraries, the old museums, the garrets, the cellars of old houses, everything in printed form is seized upon as a treasure

"But some of the old books must be considered dangerous," I said. "Can people be trusted with what you would call reactionary literature?" I asked. 'Does the government permit it?"

Alexis Tolstoy laughed heartily at my question. "We don't burn books," he said. "We are not afraid at all to have the young people compare life as it was in days gone by with the new life they are living themselves." And so I learned that the Moscow public library became last year the second largest in the world, topped only by the British Museum, and that 480 branch libraries have been opened in the city, and that an average of 900,000 books are loaned out per week in Moscow alone, and that 15,000 travelling libraries are circulating in the country at present.

If they really are children, I thought, they'll soon grow up at that rate!

Home and School Association News

CENTRAL SCHOOL.

Under the auspices of Central Home and School Association, a meeting was held in the Legion Hall last evening for the presentation of entrance certificates to the successful pupils of Central School. A good attendance of parents and friends was presided over by the school principal, K. S. Wightman.

Mrs. W. R. Morris was chosen as special speaker. Splendid short addresses were given by other outstanding figures, and a good musical program provided a memorable evening.

Mr. Wightman, in his opening remarks, congratulated the class on the successful completion of their public school course. The parents also were worthy of praise for the help and encouragement to make that success. The chairman mentioned the public school teachers who laid the foundation for higher education.

A splendid valedictory address was prepared for the occasion by Pat Blagrave, but in his unavoidable absence, through illness, the paper was read by Robert Ferguson, the pupil who had the distinction of obtaining second place. The applause for the address was very generous.

Mrs. Morris, a welcome, familiar figure on such a platform, in a quiet, easy way held the undivided attention of the gathering in her address of congratulation, advice and encouragement. She expressed the joy and honor it gave her to be asked to speak to such a class. The pupils were warned that to obtain the most benefit from their collegiate course, they must observe the rule—a time for work and a time for play. Co-operation with the teacher was another factor. The speaker mentioned the splendid part that parents of to-day were fulfilling. Many of them, through great sacrifice, were educating their children to better meet the world's growing competition. Great applause was given the speaker for her splendid address.

Other speakers offering timely advice were Mr. A. Mowat, Mr. I. McNabb and Dr. J. J. Craig, who were all well received.

A much enjoyed musical program, including selections from St. John's orchestra, lent a brightness to the auspicious occasion. Others taking part were: Recitation, "The Bald-headed Man," Miss Mary Wainwright; three vocal selections by a chorus of sixteen girls from D. Munro's room, accompanied on the piano by Miss M. R. Rannie; piano duet by the Misses Helen and Frances Latimer; vocal solo by Master Frederick Fowler, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. W. Boorman.

The certificates were presented by I. McNabb to the following pupils: Edmund Downing, Jean Dougherty, Muriel McMillan, Madge Mycroft, Ralph Johnston, Muriel Quinn, Margaret Loudon, Margaret Fairbrother, Betty Barr, Helen McFee, Robert Ferguson, Irving Wigg, Marjory Preston, Muriel McKeage, Bert McClellan, Irene Donnelly, Jack Campbell, George Brown, Edward Everett, June Brooks, Robert Dean, Irene Constable, Pat Blagrave, Rosamund Burns, Flora Craig, Isabel Graham, Miriam Miller, Jean Stinson, Edith Burnham, Ilean Winslow, Bob Dyer.

Mrs. C. Stanton moved a vote of thanks to all those who had helped in any way to make the evening such a success. This was seconded by Mrs. W. Flannery, and all heartily responded.

The ladies' executive of the school club served refreshments to the graduating class, also their parents and the artists.

"LIVING GHOST" OF STOCK CRASH AT INSULL TRIAL

Retired Chicago Tailor Tells Court How He Lost $75,000.

DAUGHTER'S SAVINGS LOST

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—His hair was white, his face deep-lined and forlorn. Under his shabby coat, his shoulders drooped with the weight of despair.

One of the living ghosts of the "Insull empire," he stalked unbidden into Federal Judge Wilkerson's courtroom recently. Into a seat on a rear bench, he slipped unobtrusively. The Great Insull Trial was to him a tragedy.

Up in front of the rail, lawyers were wrangling about what could be told of the stock of Corporation Securities Company. United States Attorney Dwight Green called them "jewels of the Insull empire."

The hopeless old man in the rear seat seemed to know about those jewels, for you could see his eyes narrow and his lips tighten as he heard of them. You could see the lines of bitterness deepen even more as his tired eyes strayed to the defense table. He was looking at another old man—a man named Samuel Insull.

Slips Past Writers.

He sat there for a while, head forward, hand cupped to his ears to catch every word. Then he shook his head in bewilderment and slipped out again.

On his way he passed a room where typewriters clattered busily. He paused a moment. Apparently he couldn't quite decide. Finally, timidly uncertain, he entered and asked:

"Is this the press room?"

And that is how the story of Jacob Landau came to light. A hush fell over the group as he told it under much prompting:

"For fifty years I was a tailor for Hart, Schaffner & Marx. After a long time I had saved a few hundred dollars. I bought a little piece of real estate.

"Gradually I was able to buy more and sell it and buy more. By 1927 I had accumulated between $15,000 and $20,000.

"We were very happy. I was 69 then and my wife and I decided we could have a rest, at last. So I retired. And then I met a young man."

Draws Out Savings.

He learned about Insull stocks. He had known that Mr. Insull was a responsible citizen, a "big man in Chicago." So he drew $10,000 from the bank and bought some Middle West first mortgage bonds. It would be a good investment.

Dividends were regular—and generous. He bought more Insull issues. He converted everything he owned into cash and bought more. Including reinvested profits, he sank $75,000 altogether.

He stared reminiscently out the window and his eyes misted a bit as he recalled:

"My daughter was working as a stenographer and had saved about $2,000. It all looked so good I induced her to invest that, too."

And then, one day, the notices began coming in: "Middle West passes dividend" . . . "Corporation Securities passes dividend" . . . more companies pass their dividends. And finally . . .

"Everything was gone. I had a mortgage on a little North Shore home, but I could get nothing out of it. My wife became ill. She needed an operation. We had to call on charity to get it for her."

A dozen times he went into the basement with a rope to hang himself, he said. "I'd have done it. I didn't care about myself."

"But I decided it wouldn't just be suicide—it would be murder. My wife could not have stood the shock. So there wasn't even that way out. My daughter married and we went to live with her at 1211 E. Fifty-fourth St., but it hurts us to impose on them.

"Finally I raised $2,000 from my mortgage. For two years we've lived on that. When that's gone ——"

SHOULD DIVORCE POLICE FORCES FROM POLITICS

Chief Constable Should Not Be at Mercy of Municipal Governments.

CONSTABLES MEET.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18 (CP)—Chief Constables should not be at the mercy of municipal governments and police work should be completely divorced from petty politics of all kinds, Major General J. H. MacBrien, Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, told the Chief Constables' Association of Canada yesterday. Every effort should be made to keep corrupting influences out of police work in Canada, and municipal police forces should be given adequate protection by their respective provincial governments.

According to General MacBrien, men wishing to qualify for promotion in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police will have to be keen students of police work in all its many branches as well as men of broad practical experience. In this connection he announced that an officer was soon to be appointed who would be in charge of training and who would act as an assistant to himself. This officer would travel abroad, rub shoulders with police officers in all corners of the globe, and return with the concentrated experiences of foreign and other Canadian police forces.

FRANCES CLAIMS WOMEN SHOULD TRY FOR BEAUTY

Frances Dee

By GLADYS GLAD.

The charming Frances Dee, who is just as sensible a lass as she is beautiful, claims that women who place striving for beauty in the same category as wishing for the moon are extremely foolish. According to Frances, such women seldom, if ever, attain any great beauty or charm of appearance. It's the woman who reaches out for that moon who eventually achieves some semblance of loveliness. For the woman who makes an honest effort is bound to effect some improvement in her appearance.

Frances certainly is right about that. And red hands give a perfect example of just what she means. No woman feels proud or pleased to own red, beefy-looking hands. They are a distinct detriment to beauty, and are most unfortunately incapable of being hidden. A gal can't very well sit on her hands, or wear gloves all the time, you know.

The lass who possesses red, ugly hands, however, may make up her mind that she'll always own them, if she just spends her time in bemoaning their condition. For only by taking the proper steps, by administering the proper corrective treatments, can she restore her hands to an attractive, lily-white hue.

The first step in the treatment of red hands is to normalize the circulation of the blood throughout the entire body. For such hands are often due to poor circulation. Take deep-breathing exercises when you rise in the morning. Get plenty of exercise and fresh air. And eliminate all highly seasoned foods and stimulating drinks from your daily menu. In addition, practice hand exercises every day. There are some excellent ones for this purpose in my article on "Care of the Hands and Nails."

The second step in correcting red hands entails the use of an old remedy known as tanbark. About two handfuls of tanbark should be placed in an ordinary basin of hot water, and the hands soaked in the solution for from 10 to 15 minutes. Then the hands should be removed and thoroughly dried. And to eliminate any possibility of roughness or dryness resulting from the tanbark treatment, a generous application of a rich cream or good hand lotion should then be made to the hands.

French Trawler Is Placed Under Arrest

RAMSGATE, Eng., Oct. 19. (AP) The cruiser H.M.S. Dee escorted the French auxiliary trawler Sainte Marie Madeline of Boulogne into the harbor to-day, alleging the French boat was found fishing within the three-mile limit off the Sussex coast.

The Dee placed an armed guard aboard the trawler; police court proceedings were to be held later in the day.

It was understood British fishermen along the south coast have compained bitterly recently that French trawlers have been poaching on their fishing waters.

DAILY PRESS USED ADVERTISE BREAD

Because Women Are Greatest Readers of Newspaper Advertising.

Because women are the greatest readers of newspaper advertising, the logical medium in which to advertise bread is the daily press, stated James Dutton of Stocks Bread Limited, in addressing a meeting of salesmen, supervisors and officials at the local plant. The speaker emphasized the complete coverage of newspapers in the Peterborough and Lindsay area and the thousands of impressions on public consciousness made by such an advertising campaign.

"In the bread business, as in many other lines, it is being found that not only does advertised merchandise predominate, but that the greatest degree of satisfaction and repeat business is found in the advertised makes," stated Mr. Dutton.

"A newspaper campaign at this time, when the purchasing power of the average Canadian has risen from $326.00 in 1933 to an estimated $384.00 in 1934, will prove particularly effective," stated the speaker.

Mr. Dutton explained to the group at the meeting the important advances that have been made in bread production, and improvement in quality and flavor. He also touched on the economy of modern breads, which satisfy the individual taste preferences of a large number of people. A number of charts and illustrations were exhibited, showing the development of a distinctive Cracket Wheat loaf produced in the Peterborough plant.

NEWT. THOMPSON IS Y'S MEN'S SPEAKER

Former International President Gives Splendid Address at Supper.

One of the most successful and most interesting meetings of the Y's Men's club for the current season, was held in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

It was feature night at the club, the speaker being Newt. Thompson of the Belleville club, who was international president of the Y's Men for 1929 and 1930. Mr. Thompson based his talk on the principles of 'Y'sdom" and the opportunities for service open to Y's Men's Clubs.

It was in 1929 that a boosters club was formed by the young men of Toledo, Ohio, Y.M.C.A. in order to boost the work and aims of the Y.M.C.A. These clubs soon spread throughout Ohio and neighboring states and in 1922, a convention of these clubs met in Atlantic City. It was here that the Y's Men's Club had its birth. The first Canadian club was organized in Sydney, N.S., and was followed soon after by one in Vancouver.

The Y's Men's Club is primarily a service club connected with the Y.M.C.A. The main projects are boy's work, young men's work, world outlook and education. As an example of world outlook, Mr. Thompson told of his correspondence with a cub member in Esthonia. The urge for comradeship and service is so great that this cub meets three times a week. Since all clubs are governed by the same international executive, they can be and are a great factor in the cause for world peace and brotherhood.

Many hints and much good advice, gained through his wide experience with "Y'sdom" were left with the local club by Mr. Thompson.

During the evening the club was entertained by several well rendered selections by an instrumental trio composed of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Searles and Mr. Smith.

Eleven of the club members motored to Toronto on Sunday to attend the very successful regional conclave held at Central Y.M.C.A. It was the best attended meeting in years, over fifty being present and all clubs were represented by at least three members.

Ex-Service Men's Club Holds Meeting

The bi-monthly meeting of the Ex-Service Men's Social and Welfare Club was held on Wednesday at the Armouries, with a good attendance of members. A change of dates for meetings was necessary and it was decided that future meeting nights would be the first and third Friday in each month. A number of new members were sworn in and the meeting closed with the singing of God Save the King.

Bro. Sam Harris, chairman of the entertainment committee, took charge and presented a very pleasing program of songs.

A fine sleight-of-hand performance was given by Bro. A. Thomas much to the mystification of "Mr. Pepper" (Bro. P. Tobin), and to the amusement of the audience.

Thanks are due to Bro. Harris and his committee for their efforts to make each meeting such a success.

JUBILEE SINGERS WILL APPEAR HERE

Famed Group of Nego Singers to Give Concert at St. Andrew's Church on Monday Evening.

On Monday evening, Oct. 22, the famous Virginia Jubilee Singers will give a concert in St. Andrew's United Church, under the auspices of the choir.

The Jubilee Singers of Virginia are seven colored university graduates. They are perhaps one of the best known radio groups for the singing of Negro Spirituals. Their program here next Monday evening will include a number of the old familiar Negro Spirituals, as well as a number of the lesser known ones. Some of the numbers to be sung here are: "O Lord I'm Hungry", "Wade In De Water", "Buckle Up Your Shoes", "Lord I Want To Be a Christian", "I'se Got Good Religion", and many others.

The second half of the program will be in costume. It will depict a gathering of Negro farm hands for a camp meeting. Some of the plantation songs to be sung will be: "Meeting Here Tonight", "Roll and Rock 'Em", "Lonesome Road", "Old Black Joe", "Great Gettin' Up Morning", and others.

The troupe will include besides the two very fine tenors and deep second bass, two sopranos and contralto. There will also be a very fine reader and entertainer on the program, and the whole program will be under the direction of Esther Gaskin, director and accompanist. Wherever these artists have appeared they have been received by packed houses. After they appeared in High Park Church, Toronto, Rev. W. H. Avison, M.A., B.D., pastor, wrote: "Their concert was superb from beginning to end. I have great pleasure in recommending these singers to any of our churches."

Dymtro Bolejonuyak Charged With Murder of a Fellow Country Man Before Mr. Justice Jeffrey.

ONE MANSLAUGHTER CASE.

COBOURG, Oct. 19, (Examiner Correspondence). — Three criminal charges are in the docket for the Supreme Court Sittings which open here on Monday next, with Mr. Justice Jeffrey presiding.

Dymtro Bolejouyak is charged with the murder of his fellow countryman, Peter Rogouski whose dead body was found in a swamp in Manvers township a few weeks ago.

A charge of manslaughter is brought against John P. Boyd of Oakville in connection with an auto crash early last April on the Provincial Highway, east of Grafton, when Warner, of Wicklow was injured and died later in Cobourg Hospital.

Herbert Bigelow faces a charge in connection of alleged inciting to do bodily harm.

The civil docket is just as interesting with two jury and two non-jury cases listed.

There are two actions from Trenton—Gunter vs. Canadian National Railway and Fox vs. Canadian National Railway—where it is alleged a trench was negligently cut upon a street in the snow and ice and an accident resulted.

Mrs. Grant Massey has brought action against Hamilton Mutual Fire Insurance Co., for $2,475 insurance on four buildings in Haldimand which were burned last April. It is alleged a tenant left some time before the buildings were burned, leaving them vacant, and there is some controversy over the value of the buildings.

There is also an action for alimony—O'Connor vs. O'Connor.

Gordon vs. Latta in an action to recover the sum of $278.52 and $544.43 against the defendant for solicitor's lien on certain monies collected in the hands of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and a reference or taxation of the said bills of cost. Gordon and Elliott for plaintiff; Archibald Cochrane, K.C., for the defendant.

Imperial Oil Co., vs. Covert completes the list.

---Hundreds of BURTOL STORES operating in various countries and superseding the old Gasoline Cleaning Methods.

No Heat---

BURTOL Super-Cleaned Garments are NOT subjected to HEAT as in gasoline and other processes. HEAT hardens the fabrics and sets the stain and other spots. This trouble is entirely eliminated in the BURTOL Process in which NO HEAT is allowed to come into contact with Garments and in which they are deodorized by COLD FRESH AIR drawn through them as they are gently opened up in a specially designed drum, lined with a material that prevents the slightest injury or wear and tear.

After Being BURTOL Super-Cleaned, Ladies' and Men's Garments LOOK and FEEL Like NEW!

LABOR BIDDING FOR BIG GAINS ON WIDE FRONT

Reform League in Britain Plan to Have Candidate for Each of 1,386 Seats.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Oct. 19 (C.P.)—With the Labor forces making a great drive in London and hoping throughout the country to strengthen the gains they have made since the last general elections, voting takes place Nov. 1 in general municipal elections.

This year's municipal elections are on the "whole front." In cities and boroughs outside London one-third of the councillors retire every year. But in London members of the 28 borough councils retire as a body every third year, and this year they are retiring.

The Labor-Socialist forces are hoping for a great success in London. Last March the elections to the London county council gave them a majority on that body. This administers the larger services such as education and tramways.

The borough councils are entrusted with control of such matters as street lighting, cleansing, etc. At the present time Labor has a majority on only four borough councils — Bermondsey, Bedford, Greenwich and Poplar. It is the intention of the party to put a full strength of candidates in every London Borough.

Labor's chief opponents will be representatives of the Municipal Reform League, or, broadly speaking, the Conservatives. This party will produce a candidate for every one of the 1,386 seats to be filled in the metropolitan boroughs. Comparatively little is heard of Liberalism as a distinct political force in the municipal elections although a number of Liberals will seek re-election under the non-political name of Ratepayers' candidates.

Labor gained many successes throughout the country in the municipal elections of a year ago, notably in Liverpool, Sheffield and Leeds. Laborites of Leeds signalized their victory by entering upon an extensive program of slum clearance. In other cities Labor requires only a few more seats to secure a clear majority.

There are 12,000,000 voters on the rolls, but it is difficult for a party of any color to break the apathy of the electorate towards municipal elections. Unless there is some subject of lively local interest it is unusual for more than 30 per cent of the lectors to go to the polls.

In 1931, the year of the general elections and the sweeping victory of the National Government, the trend was reflected in the London municipal elections, when Labor lost 203 seats. In the municipal elections of last year, which did not include London, Labor gained 208 seats, many of them in Lancashire.

Probe To Resume End Of October

The famous price spread investigation conducted by Hon. H. H. Stevens, federal minister of trade and commerce, is scheduled to be resumed by the end of October. From result of the investigation, observers believe that a permanent board will be established to hear grievances of both workers and industrialists. Hon. H. H. Stevens is shown ABOVE.

PERMANENT CONCILIATORY BOARD BE RESULT OF INVESTIGATION

Probe Into Canadian Business at End of Present Month.

MANY OBSTACLES

With the Stevens investigation into price spreads and other industrial conditions scheduled to resume at the end of this month, Wilfrid Eggleston, noted Ottawa newspaperman, does a little investigating himself. The aims and trends of the inquiry, what it will and will not probe, are revealed in a series of two articles to appear exclusively in The Examiner.

By WILFRID EGGLESTON
Central Press Canadian Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—A "referee" for Canadian business, to see that the rules of the game in future are observed, and to weed out "starvation wages," inhumanly long hours, exploitation of the farmer and the fisherman—is this the goal toward which the Stevens' inquiry is hastening?

Many competent observers at Ottawa believe that such a recommendation will be the major outcome of the sensational inquiry, which resumes its searching analysis of Canadian business practice at the end of this month.

Hon. Harry Stevens, crusading and radical minister of trade and commerce, is the author of the idea. He believes that the dark revelations of sweatshop conditions and merciless exploitation of the primary producer call for the creation of a sort of national police board to see that similar conditions do not continue.

May Create Board

The "Brain Trust," consisting of a committee of eminent economists who have sifted and organized the evidence collected in the first phase of the inquiry, are said to have endorsed this suggestion in their confidential report to Mr. Stevens.

It may be called the "Federal Commerce Commission." It may be the "Fair Trade Board," or the "Board of Industrial Relations." Whatever the name may be, the idea will be the same:

The vision which the Ottawa sponsors of such an idea have before them is that of a powerful board, consisting of perhaps five members, located at Ottawa, and constituting a court of appeal to which any distressed employee, any victimized farmer, any exploited occupation, might seek redress and the improvement of conditions; a board with the widest powers of quick inquiry, and equally wide powers of discipline; an umpire, or mediator, to see that the game is fairly played between employer and employee or between farmer and distributor.

The architects of this proposed commission talk of a board representing all the varied interests in commercial and industrial life: one chosen for agriculture, one for the retail trade, one for labor, the fifth, perhaps, as an advocate for the consumer.

Critics Claim Obstacles

The report of the Stevens commission has still to be written, but informed circles in Ottawa are prepared to wager that some modification of the above commission will be prominently featured, when it does come down.

The critics of such a move—and Ottawa has never failed to produce critics, of everything from Daylight Saving to Inflation—say there are two or three insuperable obstacles to the creation of such a board:

One is the constitutional. They say it doesn't jibe with the B.N.A. Act. They remind people that we had a federal commerce commission in 1919, after the inquiries into the cost of living, but that it didn't last—was adjudged unconstitutional, ultra vires.

Another is the practical. Even if you had such a board, they say, it couldn't possibly keep a watchful eye on industry from Halifax to Vancouver. It couldn't hope to act as a mediator in disputes without displeasing one side or the other, or both. It would require—these people say—another thirty or forty thousand civil servants, investigating and enforcing the edicts of the "Fair Trade" board, for it to be effective.

More Powerful Government

These arguments, however, will probably not prevail. The constitutional bogey is not what it used to be. There has been a great tide of opinion toward a more powerful central government of recent years. The fact that Ottawa is having to foot the bill for so many expenses once deemed local or provincial, the need shown by economic depression for a strong federal directing force, the change of view in recent years of the privy council, all tend to the conviction that the proper sort of a federal commerce commission could now be set up without fear of a legal challenge. The British North America Act designates the federal government as the body with control over "trade and commerce." The fact that the province has exclusive control over civil and property rights has nothing to do with it, according to enthusiasts about such a commission.

The third difficulty is political. Can such a measure be carried through the House of Commons? Mr. Bennett goes back to parliament with a smaller army than he had, due to deaths and by-elections. He still has a majority of 20, but suppose the Liberals make good their threat to oppose to the bitter end any new legislation? Can the prime minister force a federal commerce commission down their throats?

If the Liberals oppose a constructive measure of this kind, it will be at their peril, say the advocates of it. They would be handing Mr. Bennett a highly useful election issue. Mr. Stevens would be able to tour the country campaigning for his "Federal Referee," arguing that he and his party had disclosed the appalling conditions, and now they were going to make a first-class job of cleaning up the mess. And what could the Liberals say to that?

Failing a dramatic move such as the creation of a Fair Trade Board, observers here believe that the Stevens commission will be forced to wind up its inquiry with only the pious hope that the industries found guilty of malpractice will undergo a change of heart and discipline their own offenders. Such a wishy-washy conclusion would be an anti-climax to the most spectacular probe into Canadian economic affairs since Confederation—and, incidentally, it would not do the party in power very much good on polling day.

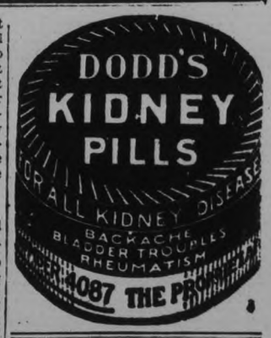
In his second article, which will appear in The Examiner to-morrow, Mr. Eggleston reveals what the Stevens commission will probe and what the public wants it to investigate.

THEY DON'T CALL HIM "TUBBY" NOW

Lost His Fat By Taking Kruschen

"I have been rather adverse to any advertised medicine," writes a correspondent, "but a friend of mine whom I had not seen for two years, visited me seven weeks ago, and I must tell you I was fairly amazed to see him. When I last saw him he was 218 lbs. I thought he had been ill, but he tells me that he never felt better in his life. I asked him how he lost his fat, because we used to call him 'Tubby.' He said, 'By taking Kruschen Salts regularly every morning.' I could hardly credit it, but knowing him well, I can believe him."—F. E.

The six salts of Kruschen assist the internal organs to throw off each day the wastage and poisons that encumber the system. Then, little by little, that urgly fat goes—slowly, yes—but surely. You feel wonderfully healthy, youthful, and energetic—more so than ever before in your life.



LINDSAY'S RINK STARTS MONDAY

Eldon Township Woman Dies at 100—Camp Workers Fined.

BABY BOY SCALDED.

LINDSAY, Oct. 19 (Examiner Correspondence) — The death occurred at Woodville on Wednesday of a pioneer resident of Eldon Township in the person of Mrs. William Hossack in her one hundredth year. The deceased was one of a family of nine born to Mr. and Mrs. Angus McIntyre, of Pirce, Scotland. They settled in Eldon Township, where Mrs. Hossack was born. In 1879 she married her deceased husband, and for the first twenty-five years of her married life lived in Guelph. After the death of her husband in 1912, deceased took up residence in Beaverton and later moved to Woodville. The late Mrs. Hossack was a staunch Presbyterian and for many years a prominent church worker. One sister, Mrs. Sarah Morrison, of Lorneville, survives.

Sam Knott, Indian and Balsam Lake guide, won the prize donated by the Fenelon Falls Anglers' Association for the largest maskinonge caught in these waters. The muskie weighed 33 pounds 8 ounces and measured 49 inches in length and 24 inches in girth.

James Bradburn, of Janetville had his car badly damaged this week. He was driving on the river road when his car struck a pile of loose gravel and turned over three times. At every turn it threw out one of the three occupants. The driver was uninjured, but Leslie Hall and Harry Latham sustained cuts and bruises.

Master Lorne Thurston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Thurston, of Dunsford was badly scalded about his body and legs this week. The little tot was playing on the floor beside the stove, when in some manner the teapot was overturned.

Three camp workers from Dorset appeared before Magistrate Gee yesterday to answer charges of consuming liquor in a place other than their private residence, having liquor illegally and drunkenness. On their way to camp after purchasing liquor, two of the number started a fight and interfered with the driver to such an extent that the car overturned. The two combatants got out of the car and continued the fight and finally resorted to stone throwing. One of the men appeared in court with his head in bandages. They were each heavily fined.

Work on Lindsay's new rink will commence on Monday. No contract will be let. It will be built by the Rink Committee with the assistance of a man who is an expert in his line.

Chicken-Duck Is Freak of Nature

VICTORIA, Oct. 19.—(CP)—Saturna Island in the Gulf of Georgia has contributed a chicken-duck to the sum total of world freaks. Its parents are allegedly a wild mallard and a white pekin drake.

The gosiin confounded its parents by hatching without webbed feet, but with legs and toes similar to those of a chicken. It swims with abandon and scratches like a hen.

J. R. Terry of the British Columbia Department of Agriculture vouches for the accuracy of the description.

BRITAIN NOT RETURNING TO THE GOLD STANDARD

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(AP)— There is no chance of Great Britain returning to the gold standard as a result of measures to be taken at today's meeting of gold bloc nations at Brussels, well-informed financial circles say.

England has officially proclaimed a determination to maintain the independence of the pound. This policy is expected to be supported as long as there is any possibility of currency fluctuations in other countries.

FOWL SUPPER AT LAKEFIELD

Three Hundred and Fifty Guests of St. Andrew's Ladies.

ANNIVERSARY CONCERT.

LAKEFIELD, October 16 (Examiner Correspondence). — The annual fowl supper held as part of the anniversary celebration of St. Andrew's Church was premier event of Tuesday evening, and was a great success. Supper was served from 5 to 8 o'clock, and about 350 partook of the delectable meal. The tables were decorated with late blooms which had been carefully protected from the frosts. The supper was served by a competent committee of the church people who saw to the needs of the patrons who filled the tables. St. Andrew's has become famous for its suppers, and this year was even a little the best yet. The supper was followed by an excellent program of local and outside talent, with Rev. R. J. Burton in the chair. The presence of a group from St. Paul's Choir, Peterborough, added several very delightful numbers.

Rev. Mr. Burton welcomed the visitors and expressed thanks to all who in any way assisted in making the anniversary such an outstanding success. A septette of young people from St. Paul's sang a pleasing selection of the English ballad type which made a hit with the audience, who enjoyed its delightful harmony. Miss Emma Lou Chenhall was the accompanist. The singers were Misses Cullen, Sedgewick, Pattison, and Kay, and Messrs. Stanley Willis, A. Sands, and G. Coleman. Little Miss Jean Millar, in a dainty poppy red frock, gave a bright little reading. Miss Mary Sedgewick sang very sweetly the ever-popular "Smilin' Through."

Rev. W. B. Walker of the Lakefield Baptist Church brought greetings from his congregation and gave a witty little speech with several anecdotes which brought down the house. Miss Olive Cullen gave a vocal selection, her sympathetic voice was heard to advantage. She is a former member of the Lakefield choir, and her return visits are always welcome ones. Little Virginia Shearer gave a tuneful Harry Lauder number, "The Wiggle-Waggle o' the Kilt," in full Highland uniform, glengarry bonnet, kilt, sporan, and all. Ed. Hill was heard to advantage in a very pleasing number. A trio of young ladies from St. Paul's sang unaccompanied, "The Old-fashioned Garden," an especially pleasing performance, the humming chorus was novel and effective.

Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., brought the greetings of the Lakefield United Church, offering good wishes and felicitations to the minister and congregation of St. Andrew's. Mr. Archer, after a few anecdotes in a lighter vein, ended seriously by the warning conveyed in some of the recent events in the world's news. The burning of the American ship Morro Castle, and the saddest feature was the entire absence of British tradition—"women and children first." The World's Series was spoiled by an incident which showed poor sportsmanship and the boat roll failed because fair play was a minus quantity. And lastly, there is the dangerous curve in our life's highway which has come through the legalized sale of beer and wine. Mr. Stanley Willis, an outstanding soloist and a prize-winner at the C.N.E. gave a fine number, "Give Me the Open Road," which was a real treat.

Max Warne of Peterborough, who assisted with the Sunday services, gave a violin solo which was a great treat. Miss Mary Blewett gave a reading in excellent style, and Miss Jessie Pattison, contralto, rendered "Mighty Lak' a Rose," a number well worth hearing. This brought to a close a successful program and added another anniversary service to the annals of the church history in Lakefied. It was four years ago on October 16 when the cornerstone of the new church was laid and the completed edifice, formally opened one year ago, is a monument to the west section of the village.

MURDUFF FUNERAL.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon of the late Sylvester Murduff from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fairbairn, Prospect Street, and was attended by many friends and neighbors. Rev. W. B. Walker of the Lakefied Baptist Church was in charge and spoke words of comfort and cheer to the bereaved family. Two favorite hymns were sung, and the service was a very impressive one in its dignified simplicity. Interment was made in the Lakefield Cemetery and six grandsons acted as pallbearers: Messrs. Elwood, Stewart, Clare, and Harold Murduff, Ves. O'Donnell, and Sherman Sweeting.

Mr. Murduff had been a resident of the village for fifty years, coming from Belleville to the village, and had made a large circle of friends, who appreciated his sterling virtues and his acts of kindness to those with whom he came in contact. Quiet and retiring, he will be very much missed in the community. His wife predeceased him seven years ago. He is survived by one son William of Peterborough, and four daughters, Mrs. Richard Fairbairn of Lakefield, Mrs. Fred Sweeting and Mrs. Aaron Sweetine of Smith, and Mrs. W. O'Donnell of Peterborough.

GIRL MISSING FROM HOME.

GALT, Ont.—Miss Gladys Cluny, 18, 12 Maple street, has been missing from her home since Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock and has not been seen since. Police can find no trace of her.

MECHANICS AT FORD SCHOOL

District Service Men Given Special Instructions in Travelling School.

TWO DAY LESSONS.

Servicing mechanics of the Ford agencies at Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Kirkfield, Norwood, Port Hope and Peterborough have been receiving special instructions from a group of the company's experts at the Hood and Cummings Motor Sales during the last two days.

They have been attending virtually a school on wheels, a Ford V-8 sedan delivery truck equipped for mechanical demonstrations in the most efficient method of servicing all Ford cars. It is supplied with tools of every description to illustrate modern methods developed in the Ford plants for major repair operations, and also for maintenance and adjustments. The two-day course included lessons in Ford engine construction. Special emphasis was given to the new Ford cylinder assembly exchange policy, under which the old practice of engine overhaul is replaced by purchase and installation of engines reconditioned at the factory.

STOVE PIPES REQUIRED

We have an urgent call for stove pipes for people who are moving from one house to another and have no pipes for their stove.

We have been asked also for two cots for babies, a high chair, a baby's crib and a mattress, the latter being urgently required also in a home where the mother makes every possible effort to keep the house in good condition, with very small funds and much illness.

In one of the home requiring a cot and high chair for the baby, both of these articles were taken in a recent seizure of household goods.

If any of these things are available, please telephone Miss McCarthy at The Examiner and they will be called for.

A LARGE POTATO

The Examiner window there is on display the largest potato brought into the office so far this Fall. It was grown by Robert J. Douglas of Westwood and weighs 3 lbs. 1½ oz. Can any gardener beat this one?

NAME OMITTED

In the obituary notice of the late Joseph C. Hughes, who died in St. John, N.B., last week we regret the omission of his wife, who survives. Mrs. Hughes was formerly Laura Dunbar of Peterborough and will have the sympathy of all her old friends in this district in her bereavement. Mrs. Hughes left to-day for her home in St. John, N.B., accompanied by her sister-in-law, Mrs. A. Ross of Chicago.

HOLD YOUR HORSES.

"I'll give you a clear enough answer if you'll hold your horses," a witness told counsel during the course of cross-examination in Magistrate's Court to-day.

"There are no horses to hold," the barrister reminded the witness, "and I'll thank you if you'll use less impertinence."

PRISONERS TRANSFERRED.

Five prisoners were yesterday transferred from the County Gaol to the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph. They were transported by automobile, and included: J. A. O'Brien, local lawyer, convicted for misappropriation of estate funds; Leon Breen of Havelock, sentenced for breaking and entering; Harold Sherwin, convicted of theft; and Jack Cameron and Fred Perrin, more recently sentenced for assaulting an aged police officer at Norwood

NEW BURTOL STORE IS OPENING HERE

Burtol Super-Cleaners Will Operate New Dry-cleaning Plant.

Announcement is made elsewhere in this issue of the new dry cleaning establishment, known as a Burtol Store, by the Burtol Super-Cleaners at 425 George Street, Peterborough. This store will feature the famous Burtol Super-Cleaning process which has proved so successful in numerous towns and cities of Ontario.

This Burtol Store will specialize in the super-cleaning and rejuvenation of Men's and Ladies' Garments, Furs, Hats, Gloves, Household Drapes, Curtains, etc. An important feature of the Burtol process is that no gasoline is used, no heat is applied to the garments and it is completely odorless. Each garment receives individual treatment and perfect satisfaction is guaranteed.

The Burtol was the first non-gasoline Dry Cleaning plant designed and built specially for operating in a store window. Doubtless this feature will prove an attraction for residents of Peterborough and surrounding district.

This new establishment is owned and operated by G. C. Staples, a citizen of Peterborough for the past twenty years.

You'll like it—morning, noon and night,
This "WONDER" Bread, not brown, not white.
In sandwich, toast, or just a slice,
You're sure to say it's extra-nice!

BROWN AND WHITE IN ONE LOAF

"Phil and I used to fight about bread. I liked white bread and he said brown was better for me — but now we get both in this new Wonder Cracked Wheat Loaf—and we both think it's great!"

"In our house it was the kiddies that wanted white bread—but you should see them at breakfast now, stowing away Cracked Wheat toast. They're crazy about it."

The loaf that sold itself!

No ballyhoo preceded the popularity of "Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread. Stocks' Bread man recommended it here and there to a good customer and left the rest to her own judgment. The result was startling. Before long, neighbor was saying to neighbor: "Have you tried the new 'Wonder' Cracked Wheat Bread?"

Nine out of ten were delighted when they tasted this white-brown loaf—this new idea in bread.

If you have been thinking bread doesn't taste good any more, just try a slice or two of this loaf. "Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread gives you the unmistakable white bread flavour and the elusive "wheaty" taste, and health-quality of brown bread. The texture is sponge-like . . . moist, but not doughy; firm, but tender.

In families where some like brown and some prefer white bread, there is waste. Parts of loaves of both kinds get stale and have to be discarded before they are entirely consumed. But because everybody likes "Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread, you buy only one kind, and it never gets a chance to get stale. Every slice is eaten. That's economy.

"Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread, toasted, simply makes breakfast. The wheat in it crackles on the toaster to tell you when it is ready and "Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread has countless wee hiding-places for the butter.

Sandwiches have a new meaning when they are made with ready-sliced "Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread. The taste of this new, white-brown bread-creation harmonizes with the flavour of every filling. That's one reason why it is called "Wonder" Bread.

Stop the Stocks Bread man as he passes your home—or telephone now. You'll find "Wonder" Cracked Wheat Bread is really two breads in one—and you'll like them both!

Now that the soup tureen has come into fashion again, and for a container of other things than soup, it is interesting to have recipes for some of the foods suited to serving in it. One excellent dish with a note of novelty is Mexican macaroni.

* * * * * * *

ITALIAN RISSOTTO

Boil rice until tender and drain. It must be flaky. Macaroni or spaghetti can be used if preferred.

* * * * * *

Sauce: ¼ cup butter melted in saucepan. Add 1 onion cut or chopped into rather small pieces. Brown slightly, remove from fire and add 2 skinned ripe tomatoes, cut into pieces or 1 cup canned tomato, or ¼ small can of Italian tomato paste and 2 tablespoons chopped sweet pepper.

* * * * * * *

Cover with water and return to fire. The water in which rice has been cooked, or the macaroni should be used. Simmer until thick and season highly with salt, pepper, and a little sweet basil, and thyme. Pour over rice, and put immediately into tureen and serve. This dish is richer if chicken livers, or giblets are cooked, chopped and added to the sauce before simmering. Use the water in which the giblets have been cooked in placed of the rice water for sauce. As this sauce must season the rice or macaroni, it must be highly seasoned. Grated cheese can be served separately to sprinkle on portions, or it can be sprinkled over the rissotto after it is in the turee.

* * * * * * *

MEXICAN MACARONI

3 cups macaroni broken into short lengths, 1 or 2 inches; ¼ cup butter; ¼ cup chopped sweet pepper; 1 cup stewed ripe tomatoes or canned tomatoes drained of most of liquid; 1¼ tablespoons chopped onion; 1¼ cups rich soup stock; 1 bay leaf, medium size; seasoning: salt, pepper, and a dash of cayenne pepper; 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

* * * * * * *

Cook macaroni in salted boiling water until tender. Melt butter and add chopped onion, stir until beginning to brown. Add chopped pepper and cook 5 minutes. Heat stock with bay leaf in it for 5 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Put these two preparations together and the other ingredients, except macaroni. Pour liquid preparation over hot macaroni drained of water. Serve piping hot in soup tureen. This is a good luncheon or supper dish.

* * * * * * *

RAGOUT OF CHICKEN

2 cups cooked chicken, fowl, or turkey cut into not too small pieces; canned chicken can be substituted. 2 tablespoons butter; 1 medium size onion; 1 cup chicken soup or white stock; 1 tablespoon boiled rice stirred into stock until grains are separate; salt and pepper to taste; 1 sprig parsley; 1 tablespoon minced celery; 1 cup cooked peas.

* * * * * * *

Combine all ingredients except parsley and peas. Put in covered saucepan, and simmer for ¾ hour. Chop parsley, and just before putting into tureen, add heated peas and parsley. This is a main dish.

Household Hints

Menu Hint.

Boiled Fish Potato Chips
Spanish Tomato Jelly
Buttered Beets
Date Roll Coffee

The tomato jelly will serve six. The date roll is a confection which is a delicious and unusual dessert. That same candy will be most welcome to the man or woman at college.

Today's Recipes.

Spanish Tomato Jelly.—Eight tomatoes, diced; one-fourth cup celery, chopped fine; one bay leaf, two tablespoons paprika, one onion, finely chopped; two tablespoons lemon juice, two cloves, two tablespoons agar. Mix one cup of mayonnaise to one cup chopped Roquefort cheese to make light in color. Soak agar in water to cover, twenty minutes. Cook tomatoes, onion, celery, bay leaf, cloves and paprika until tomatoes are soft. Add agar from water drained off, and cook a few minutes longer until agar is completely dissolved. Remove from stove. Add lemon juice and pour into individual molds. Serve on shredded lettuce, garnished with Roquefort cheese dressing and chopped parsley.

Date Roll.—Three cups sugar, one-fourth teaspoon cream of tartar, one cup milk, two-thirds cup of dates, one-half cup of nuts, one teaspoon vanilla. Mix sugar, cream of tartar and milk. Boil gently and without stirring until soft ball forms when portion is tested in cup of cold water. Pour into shallow dish, such as large platter. Let stand ten minutes. Using wooden spoon or large spatula, beat until candy is thick and creamy. Add rest of ingredients. Take up in hands and knead five minutes. Shape into roll one and one-half inches in diameter. Wrap with waxed paper. Store in ice box. Cut into thin slices, serve.

Removing Rust.

Lemon and salt, mixed, will help to remove the rust color from a garment which has been pressed with too hot an iron. Hold the material over steam while this mixture is on it.

Your Health

by DR LOGAN CLENDENING

That old falsity about two living as cheaply as one has a little grain of truth in it. Two in one family can live cheaper than two single people apart.

In four food plans, all having an adequate diet, but increasing in efficiency as the price increases, it will be noticed that the estimated cost for a family of four is never quite four times the estimate for a single person.

And the more efficient the diet, the greater is the saving when more than one is considered.

Thus the cheapest plan estimates 16 8-10 cents a day for the one person, and 67 cents for the family of four.

While the most efficient diet estimates 50 cents a day for the one person, and $1.83 a day for the family of four.

Most of the housewives with whom I have talked about these plans want to know exactly what articles are bought. In planning them it is not so much exactly the articles, as the classes of articles.

An adequate diet can be planned with this distribution of the food dollar:

1. Milk and cheese, 25 to 30 cents.
2. Fruit and vegetables, 20 to 25 cents.
3. Lean meat, fish and eggs, 10 cents.
4. Bread, flour, cereals, 20 cents.
5. Fats sugars, accessories, 20 cents.

These five classes of food stuffs must be represented for health's sake. But if cereals—bread, spaghetti, rice—are increased over meat and fresh vegetables—which is feasible and still healthful—the cost is greatly lessened.

Another way of reducing costs is to face monotony. And monotony in foods may not be pleasant, but at least it is not unhealthful.

Thrift in watching the fluctuations of food prices is naturally a great factor. Cabbage prices shift as much as 75 per cent. during the year, and potatoes 60 per cent. Eggs have an enormous seasonal variation, but eggs are not necessary; in fact, it might be a good thing to do without them for a while.

Prices are up in a period of inflation, down in a period of prosperity. "The consumer is likely to get the small end of the horn either way," says a prophet of the New Deal, Gove Hambridge. "In prosperous times prices may be so high that his purchasing power does not keep pace with his income. In a depression prices are low, but he has no money to spend. And there is nothing he can do about it—unless he tries to bring a social system in which the interests of the mass of consumers is put before all other interests."

OFFENSIVE AND DEFENSIVE HONOR VALUES.

Enough inquiries have been received to show the general interest felt in the subject of honor values, offensive and defensive. No single table of values ever can properly serve both purposes. Attempting that impossible feat is like trying to sit safely upon two widely separated stools, resulting in hitting only the floor.

Efficiency requires two tables of honor values. Defensive honor values against trump calls are termed "quick tricks", as they must usually be won on either the first or second rounds of those suits, before the declarer or dummy can trump the third round of the suit. An average deal distributes just 7¾ quick tricks to the 4 players. Count as quick tricks only the following honors in each of the 4 suits. A-K, 2; A-Q, 1¾; Ace, 1; K-Q, 1; guarded K, ¾. Do not count A-K-Q as probably worth more than 2 quick tricks. The A-J-10 has a quick trick value of only 1 trick, regardless of what any player argues.

An average deal distributes just twice as many probable honor tricks as quick tricks, or 15 honor tricks among the 4 players. These, however, retain their values only in the case of declarer and dummy. The defensive honor tricks reduce in value in the hands of senior and junior, to about 3¾ quick tricks, allowing about half the hands dealt to be worth 3-odd and the remaining about 4-odd.

The average playing values of honors held in suits not bid adversely are as follows: Ace, 1½ probable tricks; K, 1; Q, ¾; J, ½ and 10, ¼ trick. These values hold provided the Ace, K or Q are followed by at least 2 smaller cards. The J or 10 should be followed by at least 3 smaller cards, to probably retain the values given. To find the probable values of 2 or more honors of the same suit, add together their individual values already given. Thus K-J-3 averages to have a playing value of 1½ tricks, when held either by declarer or dummy.

The real value of the Ace is only 1 trick, but half the time it is held the side wins 1 trick more than it could if opponents held the Ace. Suppose dummy holds the K of a suit. If the declarer has the Ace, both Ace and K will win tricks. If declarer lacks the Ace, half the time dummy's K will win a trick and half the time that K will be killed by the opposing Ace. This ½ trick value of the Ace is termed its "promoting value". The average playing value of any honor is the sum of its normal value plus its promoting value. Every honor held by the declaring side, unless its suit is bid adversely, has some promoting value. The subject of honor values is very important, although understood by few players or writers.

"GLOOMY" DEAN INGE SMILES BEFORE "GOING ON THE DOLE"

'Religion Caught, Not Taught' He Tells Brother Preachers

LEAVING PULPIT

London.—Dean Inge, who now becomes Dr. Inge, upon retirement, will never be known as "The Gloomy Dean" among the clergymen he addressed at Church House, Westminster.

They will call him "The Cheerful Dean," since he had them laughing much of the time.

The size of his audience, he declared, surprised him. As Yorkshiremen would say: "They cum when yer go."

Dr. Inge explained: "Tis is my last meeting before I go on the dole." And here are other remarks which brought smiles:

Too much of a clergyman's time is now occupied by filling in forms.

The church can be filled by providing what are called bright services, topical sermons, and discreet advertising.

Religion is caught, not taught.

There is nothing in the teaching of the New Testament which suggests that there is likely to be an inconvenient crowd gathered at the narrow gates(a comment on th suggestion that poor attendances at church indicate the failure of Christianity.

Favors National Church

In more serious moments, Dr. Inge said:

"We cannot have a standardized orthodoxy to suit the learned professor and his kitchen maid. We must not try to make everybody wear the particular pair of spectacles which we find suit our own sight.

"The church has neglected that inmportant part of a clergyman's duty—consultation. It ought to be a matter of course for our people to come to us when in difficulty about their souls, just as they go to see a doctor when they are ill.

"Many people who ask for advice are in trouble about sex. This is a subject which the clergy should study carefully. I often find that the clergy are curiously ignorant on that delicate subject. I have heard of bad advice being given.

"The church ought to aim at being the church of the English people. Personally, I am in favor of a national church."

PRISON INMATES HAVE OWN SPORTING MEET

Long-Term Convict Nearly Puts Shot Over Wall

Maidstone.—The strangest sports meeting took place recently, but the public were not admitted. For the athletics were held in the grounds of Maidstone prison, and the competitors were all inmates.

Men convicted of every kind of crime spent a glorious day of freedom running, jumping and hurdling.

The sports were the first ever held in the gaol. The governor, Major Benjamin Grew, hopes to improve the health of the prisoners and keep them happy by these meetings.

Two hundred convicts took part. The master of ceremonies was Edmund Daniels, associate of Clarence Hatry, who was also there.

In the veterans' race two of the competitors were Hatry and Bernard Marks, a member of the fire-raising gang, who were sentenced to three years' penal servitude.

Marks won the race easily, Hatry being among the also rans.

Leopold Harris was unable to attend the sports as he is a hospital patient. But his brother, David, Loughborough Ball, Jarvis, and Gould were there as spectators.

A disappointment was the refusal of Baillie-Stewart, the "officer in the tower" to enter any of the events. It was expected that he would take part, but the lithe Scotchman only stood among the watchers.

The meeting proved that long-term prisoners are the most athletic. A man named Yates, serving a sentence of several years, won the putting the shot competition (he nearly put the shot over the prison walls), the hundred yards, and captured the winning relay race team from the printing department.

SIGNALMAN BLAMES SELF FOR DISASTER

First Lapse in 21 Years Results in Ten Deaths

Warrington.—"For some unaccountable reason my mind was a blank." William Bloor, signalman, in those words, took the whole blame for the deaths of ten people and the maiming of twenty-one others in a railway disaster at Winwick Junction.

It was his first mistake in twenty-one and a half years' service in that signal-box — thirty-two years altogether. Every eight-hour shift he had made nearly 3,000 operations. Nearly 20,000 passengers a day had passed his box in safety until . . .

Bloor, pale, with twitching nerves, gave his poignant evidence before white-haired Sir Samuel Brighouse, the Warrington coroner. Some of the jury had moist eyes.

They were only five minutes considering their verdict. It was "Death by misadventure" in all ten cases.

CAN'T FOOL POLICE WITH GARLIC SMELL

Istanbul.—Osman Effendi, a Turkish builder, found a strange way of hiding the corpse of a young woman he had murdered.

Osman had expected that the smell of the garlic would prevent his crime from becoming known.

SEE 1976 POPULATION SHORT BY 11 MILLIONS

Birth Rate in British Isles Steadily Falling, Medical Journal Claims

London.—Lancet paints this picture of England and Wales in 1976—11,000,000 fewer people in the country; frantic attempts to stop decline in the population; children's camps and free medical services for children; maternity leave for married wage-earning women; changes in the social attitude towards unmarried mothers.

The forecast, moreover, is accompanied by the statement that impending population changes can be accurately foretold.

"A steady fall in the birth rate during the last sixty years, together with the prolongation of the span of average life, results in the existence of fewer young and more old people in the country than formerly," is prophesied.

"The old people will begin ot die in increasing numbers in the near future. When this happens, the death rate will rise above the birth rate, and the population will, apart from the effects of migration, begin to decline. The population of England and Wales will be 40,213,500 in the year 1936, but in 1976, forty years later, it will have fallen to 28,656,600," the article concludes

SCOTT-PAINE RETIRES FROM RACING 'GAME'

Speed King "Has Had All the Breaks Any Man Can Expect"

Southampton. — After spending $300,000 on breaking records, including $140,000 on Miss Britain III., Mr. Hubert Scott-Paine, the British motorboat speed king, is to retire.

"You can carry on too long at the game," he said, "and I feel that I shall never be able to put up a better show than I have done."

Mr. Scott-Paine made the announcement at a luncheon in his honor on his return from his motorboat triumphs at Venice, and in doing so he almost broke down.

"I have quite made up my mind that I am through with the racing game," he said. "This is the last time——" his voice broke, he lowered his head, "this is the last time that I shall be worrying you to come along when I come back from abroad.

"I have had all the breaks that any man can expect to have, and I am going to give up now," he declared.

"I would like to have had another shot at the British International Trophy, but I am afraid it is not to be. I think I have a record which entitles me to retire from the sport."

THE "LITTLE BIRDIE" LOSES ITS APPEAL

"You can't fool me," says this little page at a fashionable London England, wedding . . . and his "not choosing" to be photographed threw some consternation into the wedding group, especially the flower girls, who were just aching to have their pictures taken. Weddings can't be held up so the flash was taken with one back toward the cameraman, but the crowd enjoyed a laugh.

KAYE DON SERVING HIS TERM IN ISLE OF MAN "BIG HOUSE"

Does Not Wish Wife to Visit Him in Prison

LONG HOURS IN CELL

London.—In the Isle of Man they call it the Big House. Fabulous stories are told about this prison to which Kaye Don was taken to serve his sentence of four months for manslaughter, his appeal having been dismissed.

It is said that the prisoners form bridge parties on the long winter nights, and that once a week they go to the pictures in the town of Douglas.

These stories are far from the truth. Unless Kaye Don, on the certificate of the prison doctor, remains in hospital during his sentence he will live much the life of a prisoner in an English prison.

To the ordinary hardened criminal prison life in the Isle of Man is no joke.

To a man sensitive by temperament, who has lived for many years in the public limelight, it will be four months of humiliation.

The island prison differs from other prisons only in its exterior. It is situated in the best residential part of Douglas. From the outside it looks like the home of a well-to-do resident.

It is true that each prisoner has his own bedroom—if you can call a cell a bedroom. But ,in English prisons each prisoner has his own cell.

It is the long hours in these cells in solitary confinement that form the hardest part of the punishment.

Douglas jail has one possible advantage over other prisons. It is sparsely populated.

At present there are five prisoners, including one man who is serving time for an assault and others for petty larceny.

Unless he remains in hospital Kaye Don will be treated like other prisoners. His sentence is without hard labor. This means that the work given him will be lighter.

There is no remission for good behaviour on a short term sentence.

The prison uniform is of fustian, a drab chocolate-colored cloth. Visitors are allowed once a week, and letters are received once a week.

It is doubtful if Kaye Don will receive any visitors other than his legal advisers. He will not let his young wife see him in prison.

ASSYRIAN REFUGEES LOCATE NEW HOME

Georgetown (British Guiana).—A plan to settle between 10,000 and 20,000 Assyrian refugees from Iraq was unanimously approved by the legislative council.

This action was taken on a proposal submitted by the secretary of state. The scheme originates in the petition of the Assyrian minority in Iraq to the League of Nations following the massacre of many of their numbers last year.

A scheme to settle the Assyrian refugees in Brazil was favorably reported on by commissioners of the league, but disapproved by the president of Brazil in June.

Members of the Brizilian Constituant Assembly objected to admission of the Assyrians, apparently on the ground of their warlike traditions.

Both the Iraq and the British government had offered to contribute to the expenses of settlement.

DEATH CLAIMS MAN WHILE 'ROBBING GOD'

Loughton.—" He was called to face his Maker while he was actually robbing God Himself."

With these dramatic words, Dr. P. B. Skeels, the coroner, concluded the inquest on Alfred Spingbett Noakes, the bell-ringer whose charred body was found among the debric of a fire-ruined church at Trapps Hill.

The verdict was felo de se.

Inspector William Bayley was asked for a theory as to what happened. He suggested that Noakes took a candle from the altar and placed it on the floor.

"Then he accidentally stepped back," the inspector said, "and the candle flame caught his trousers.

"He either fainted on seeing the flames or collapsed through shock.

"He fell, was knocked unconscious and the flames from his legs set fire to a seat."

The church had been newly varnished.

Noakes' widow told the court that he had served sentences for breaking into places of worship.

ASK FREE MUSHROOMS CITING 'ANCIENT RIGHTS'

Charge of Stealing Fungi Angers Villagers Whose Forbears Helped Selves

Yeovil. — A mushroom "war" rages in the historic little Somerset village of Montacute, where in the face of determined opposition by local farmers, the parishioners are claiming the right to go and gather the tender, succulent fungi just when and where they choose.

Montacute, so tradition says, owes its origin to King Canute. The local people are basing their claim to free mushrooms on the assertion that their forebears exercised the right to gather them from times immemorial.

The trouble began when the parish clerk, Reginald Taunton, and his brother, were prosecuted by a farmer and convicted of stealing mushrooms by picking them.

Indignant discussion among the villagers followed, and, as a result, William Inglett of Hyde Rd., agreed to act as their representative and go and pick mushrooms in a certain field "to establish the right."

He did so. Ernest F. Taylor, of Windmill Farm, the owner of the field, prosecuted him, and Mr. Inglett was called upon to justify his action before the magistrates.

He declared that for a period ot more than ten years mushrooms had been picked in this particular field, and that no mushroom spawn had ever been placed in it. His statements, he said, would be supported by every man, woman, and child in the village.

For the prosecution it was said that mushrooms were cultivated on the farm, 1,347 pounds having been sold last season.

During the hearing of the case a large number of Montacute residents who were in court became restive, and when one shouted, "I have no patience to sit here and listen to all these lies," the bench had the court cleared.

The bench decided to convict, but postponed sentence until a later date.

'GRANNIE' TREKS FAR ON THIRTY SHILLINGS

Woman, Aged 76, Travels 400 Miles in 18 Days

London.—Granni McGregor is 76. She has reached Lewisham from Kilmarnock, 400 miles away, after an 18-day walk, with occasional "lifts."

After staying with a niece since January, she felt that she would like to be among her old friends in London, so she packed a basket and set off by road with some of her pension money in her pocket.

"I just wanted to come, so I walked," she said, on arrival, smoothing her apron—she was just about to sit down to her Sunday dinner. "Four years ago I walked the same way, but I got to London quicker. Peopl, gave me more lifts—one gentleman drove me right from Chester to London—but this time the longest lift that I had was from Chesterfield to Nottingham.

"It cost me about thirty shillings for the trip," she said. "Mostly I ate bread and butter and fruit. Occasionally I had an egg. I did about twenty miles a day."

SALMON SKINS FOR BAGS

Portland, Ore.—Skins which once covered the silvery sides of Chinook salmon as they swam the briny deep, will, in the near future, dangle from miladY's arm in the form of smart purses and handbags, if the dream of C. F. Bogart, Victoria inventor, comes true. Bogart has started investigations as to the possibilities of saving salmon skins for tanning. He believes the skins may be tanned in such a manner that the scales will not fall off, providing a useful and ornamental material.

LOCH NESS MONSTER BRINGS GOOD TIMES TO HIGHLANDS

Shrewd Scots Make No Attempt to Trap "Beast"

CARS JAM GLENS

Inverness.—Loch Ness still holds its monstrous secret. No one yet can say what strange beast it is that lurks within its depths and to which attention was first drawn by the Daily Mail a year ago.

The longer the secret remains the more precious it becomes, for the Highlands are just finishing what truly deserves to be called their monster season. It has been the greatest on record.

The first traffic jams have been known in the frowning glens.

For the first time the world at large — apart from appreciative Britons and rich Americans — has been led to discover the glory of the Highlands.

Along the loch-side one is told frankly that the monster has been responsible for a bumper year.

The completion of the new Glen Alby road—that magnificent modern pass, which, skirting the northern shore of the loch, opens up the Highlands and Inverness to the motor traffic of Glasgow and the south—has synchronized with the monster's attraction.

Holiday-makers of all nations drawn by the monster lure, have converged on this part of the country.

In Fort Augustus every second house has become a tearoom. Its comfortable hotels, previously sacred to the angler and the motor tourist, have shared satisfactorily in the influx of business.

Visitors From Canada

At various points round the loch petrol pumps marshal their gay ranks and at the height of the season 1,000 cars a day filled with "monster spotters" passed along the roads, while hundreds were grouped on the shores.

A roadhouse visitors' book shows that visitors have come from New Zealand, Chicago, Siam, the Sudan, Ceylon, Johannesburg and other parts of South Africa, Paris, Ireland, Berlin, Gibraltar, the Punjab, Italy, Sydney and Melbourne, Australia; Hong Kong, Hamburg, Canada, Alexandria, south Persia, Tanganyika, Rangoon, Madras, Durban, Amsterdam, Vienna, Detroit and New Jersey.

The Dutch, the Germans and the Austrians were very serious about the monster. They came loaded with all available data on the subject. They tramped the loch-side for days, cross-questioning everybody.

The French indulged their racial scepticism saying "Let's see it first."

The Americans were genially wistful that the United States had not yet developed a monster, but promised one for next year.

On some occasions the car queues rivalled that of the week-end between London and the south coast.

Nothing has been done to trap the monster. The Highlanders shrewdly ask: "Why should there be?" They make no secret that he is more valuable to the Highlands in his natural habitation that he would be as a menagerie specimen.

Intense interest is shown, however, in the forthcoming visit of J. E. Williamson, an American naturalist, who may try to photograph the monster from under the water.

NEW BOOTS PROVE FATAL

Sheridan, Wyo.—A pair of new boots were the cause of an accident that took the life of Vincent F. Schemmer, 33, employee of an engineering company here. Hampered by their stiffness, he slipped and fell as he attempted to board a moving truck at Fort MacKenzie, near Sheridan. He was dragged several feet, incurring injuries from which he died twe hours later.

PLAN CLOSING ROADS FOR YOUNG TO PLAY

London.—The ministry of transport is considering the closing to all traffic of certain streets in London during certain hours so that children can play in them in safety. They will be narrow streets and culs-de-sac.

This was a suggestion made to the meeting of the home traffic advisory committee.

The experiment has already been carried out in Salford. Accidents to children playing in the road have decreased by more than 200 a year.

AUSTRALIA SATISFIED HOUSE IS CAPT. COOK'S

But Council Chairman Thinks Village Sold a "Pup"

Middlesborough—The villagers of Great Ayton, Yorkshire, are discussing with great interest the question whether they have been a party to perpetrating a hoax on the Victorian government, Australia.

They have at least been provided with an unexpected surprise by their own parish council, which has thrown doubt on the authenticity of the Captain Cook cottage that once stood in the village and is now being re-erected at Melbourne for the centenary celebrations to be attended by the Duke of Gloucester.

A few months ago the cottage where the explorer was said to have spent his boyhood came into the market. The Victorian government purchased it for $4,000.

The "Bombshell"

The cottage was demolished, and every brick, all doors, cupboards, old-fashioned lockers and screens, also the ivy which grew up one side of the dwelling were shipped to Australia at considerable expense.

The council's "bombshell" is an official declaration stating that the weight of evidence that Captain Cook lived in the demolished cottage seems to be so small that it is doubtful whether he ever visited it during his parents' residence there.

T Winn, chairman of the Great Ayton parish council, said that the village would not take any official part in the unveiling ceremony.

"I am of opinion," he said, "that the Victorian government was sold a 'pup'. It is the general opinion in the village that Captain Cook could not have lived in the cottage at all."

Informed of the doubts, Richard Linton, agent-general for Victoria, said that his government has a document showing that the house is the one wanted. "The official souvenir of the Captain Cook bi-centenary celebrations in the Cleveland district of Yorkshire in 1928 states that 'before sailing Cook visited his aged father at Great Ayton and his former employer at Whitby.'" he pointed out as further proof.

GOVERNMENT HINTS IRK LLOYD GEORGE, FARMER

Opposes Restriction of Production Merely to Raise Prices

Churt, Surrey.—Speaking "purely as a potato cultivator," Lloyd George criticized the government and Walter Elliot, the minister of agriculture,

The occasion was an exceedingly innocent one—at first sight! He had invited all the farmers in the neighborhood, about 300, to see the results of a demonstration of the use of artificial fertilizers on his farm.

With the rosy innocence of one of his prize pippins, he had invited them to see how by scientific methods he had managed to increase his yield of potatoes by five tons or $150 per acre.

He showed them his potatoes. He took them through his orchard and rhapsodized about his apples. "And now," said Farmer George (in effect), 'I'll tell you summat."

"I am opposed to the restriction of production merely to raise prices. It is stupid to talk about over-production when you are under-producing."

Then he turned on Mr. Elliot and said:

"Elliot has sent out a lot of papers about pigs and potatoes. I have read them, pondered over them until my head ached. I have done my best to understand them, but I haven't succeeded.

"When he told me that Black Berkshire pigs were no good. I killed mine on the spot. Sometimes I notice, guiltily, a black spot on some of my pigs, but even to oblige Mr. Elliot, I cannot extirpate that spot of original sin.

"He has told me that he does not like large potatoes; I prefer them myself, but even then I have had put in a special machine which makes every potato I sent to the market Elliot-proof."

The result of this eloquence was that representatives of the Surrey branch of the National Farmers' Union suggested that Lloyd George should be nominated for the potato marketing board!

HALE AND HEARTY AT 135 TURK OUTLIVES FOUR WIVES

Attributes Longevity to Exercise and Water Drinking

WALKS MILE DAILY

Istanbul.—Zaro Agha, the 160-year-old Turk, "the oldest man in the world," is dead, but a new star has arisen. He is Ahmet Bey, a white-bearded Turk from Brusa, near Istanbul, and he says he is 135. He was a friend of Zaro Agha and admired that Methuselah tremendously, although he cast doubts on his being as much as 160 years old.

Ahmet Bey has papers which go to prove that he was born in 1797, and he remembers perfectly the battle of Sevastopol, in which he took part. He was serving aboard a Turkish warship. In civil life he is a joiner, but he gave up working twenty years ago and is now living on charity plus a small allowance from the Brusa authorities.

This old warrior has definite ideas as to how he has been spared to live so long. "First of all," he says, "I believe in exercise. During the first seventy-five years of my life I used to take long walks and reckoned that I averaged at least twenty-two miles a day. Now I have had to reduce the length, but I still manage a mile or so and always feel the better for it.

Refrains From Liquor

"Then I have never tasted spirits or wine. I used to be fond of smoking, but I gave that up in 1850. Water is the thing. Whenever I went out for a walk, I used to make a practice of drinking water from springs. I have never been really ill, but I twice had colds in the head. How did I get over them? By drinking lots of cold water, of course.

"I don't mind what I eat—meat, fish, vegetables, fruit — and I take tea and coffee regularly. Then I never miss my sour milk (a Turkish dish), and am convinced that it leads to longevity."

A curious thing about Turkish centenarians is that they seem to marry many times, but their wives never seem to live very long. Zaro Agha had twelve or thirteen wives, but none of them was alive when he died a few weeks ago. Ahmet admits to four wives, and they, too, are all dead. Ahmet has had many children, including five sons, who were all killed in various wars. He also had several grandchildren alive and one great-grandson.

Doctors who have examined Ahmet say he is in good physical health. His teeth are in fine condition, but he is almost blind in one eye.

HURLS INK AT CRITIC WHO 'PANS' HER PLAY

"We Are Now Quits," Murmurs Girl, Contentedly

Melbourne.—A young woman walked up to a journalist in the South Australian parliament house at Adelaide and calmly emptied a bottle of ink over him.

"We are now quits—ink for ink," she announced with satisfaction.

When officials took the matter in hand she explained that the journalist, S. F. Downer, had written a criticism of a play which she had produced. She objected to the criticism—hence the bottle of ink.

The girl then disclosed that her name was Patricia Hackett. Her father was the late Sir John Winthrop Hackett, the millionaire who left three million dollars towards founding the University of Western Australia.

EATS AS MUCH AS 10 DOES 5 MEN'S WORK

Modern Gargantua's Son Inherits Father's Strength

Leningrad.—A modern Gargantua, who eats as much as ten normal men and works as a "human crane" in a Leningrad factory, is the latest discovery of a Soviet film director.

Alexei Glikin, the prospective new "film star," was considered so valuable to his factory, doing the work of five men and performing feats of strength that none of his companions could approach, that he was given ten food ration cards to satisfy his colossal hunger. He is now 37 years old, weighs 265 pounds and does not find that smoking or drinking impairs his strength.

He first discovered his unusual strength when, as a boy of 15, he lifted a great log of wood which none of his adult companions could budge. To handle the great packing cases and machinery with which he toys, he finds it necessary to have a monthly ration of 132 pounds of meat, 66 pounds of butter and lard, 264 pounds of bread and 14 pounds of sugar.

His two-year-old son is already taking after his father, for the youngster's favorite playthings are two heavy flat-irons. Doctors expect the little boy to inherit his father's strength.

BEAT MEN FOR POST

London—Miss S. M. Masel beat 823 men in the annual open competition for executive posts in the British civil service. She was 35th among 1,179 candidates. Women captured 10 of the 80 vacancies.

SPORT-LOVING YOUTH RULES OVER MILLIONS

Maharajah Is Educated in England — Has Jewels Worth $20,000,000

London.—The second richest man in the world—his jewels are valued at twenty million dollars—will be crowned a ruling prince of India when he reaches his majority—eighteen.

He is the Maharajah George Sindhia of Gwalior, head of the illustrious house of Sindhia, one of five great ruling princes entitled to be call'ed first-class sovereigns.

He has the power of life and death, receives the full royal salute of 21 guns, yet is a merry, sport-loving boy with the affection of his subjects in Gwalior, the key to India, which once almost wrested India from Britain.

So all India is preparing for the greatest coronation ceremony of all times. On that day a gray-haired Briton, Brigadier-General T. H. Keyes, who has been the boy prince's governor, will hand over his young charge to Lord Willingdon, the viceroy.

The maharajah was born during the war when the forces of his father, a general in the British army, were fighting with British troops on three fronts.

The late ruler's loyalty to the emperor was such that he called his two children George and Mary.

ACCUSED OF STEALING BELLS NATIVE DIES FROM FLOGGING

Woman, 50, Admitting Third Degree, Is Sent to Prison

"UNPLEASANT DUTY"

Nairobi — Frail fifty-year-old Mrs. Helen Eugenie Selwyn, the English-woman accused of the murder of an African native, was found guilty of manslaughter. She was sentenced to twelve months imprisonment.

The judge, when summing up, suggested that the facts did not amount to murder. The jury, in bringing in their verdict, recommended her to mercy.

Mrs. Selwyn, the widow of a Liverpool man who settled here as a farmer, was charged, together with four of her native servants, in connection with the death of a Suk native named Keyen, who died after being flogged at Mrs. Selwyn's direction.

PEER'S SISTER, AGE 70 STARTS HOTEL CHAIN

Belgrade.—A peer's sister is to enter the hotel industry at the age of nearly seventy. She is Miss Annie J. Dickinson, sister of Lord Dickinson of Painswick, Gloucester.

Miss Dickinson, who will be 70 next month, plans to found a chain of tiny hotels throughout the lesser-known districts of Jugoslavia, in Bosnia, Herzegovina, Montenegro, South Serbia, and among the islands of the Dalmatian coast.

"Several reasons have prompted me to launch this idea," she said. "First, the lack of knowledge among British artists, writers, and professional people of the most beautiful parts of this country, and secondly the need of clean, comfortable, but cheap guest-houses in places not yet touched by tourism."

CHILD, 3, KILLS MOTHER

Salt Lake City.—Tiny fingers that clutched a strange object beneath Mrs. Clarence L. Merrill's pillow sent a bullet through her heart. Mrs. Merrill, 21, wife of a special policeman, kissed her son, Douglas, three, as she lay on her bed. The child's hands closed on a revolver she kept for protection during her husband's absence and unwittingly pulled the trigger. An emergency operation failed to save her life.

WAR SETTLES WHO IS STRONGEST MILITARY SENSE DECLARES KERR

F. E. Kerr Addresses Members of Local Council of Women.

TRY TO INCITE PEOPLE.

"More deaths, more dividends; more blood, more bonuses; each screaming shell brings more money to the shareholders. The attitude of the munition-makers might be stated in the words: 'I don't care who is having a whack at who, provided we get the order'....

"Poisonous gases will be used to such an extent that the concern of the soldier on the battlefield will be, not for what the enemy is doing at his front, but rather what he is doing behind to the civilian population....

"War does not settle the justice or injustice of things, nor who was right or wrong. It settles only who was the strongest, in a military sense."

F. E. Kerr, principal of the King George School, speaking to the members of the Local Council of Women at their meeting yesterday in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., pointed out some of the aspects of modern warfare.

He took much of his material from Beverley Nicholls' book, "Cry Havoc!", from the pamphlets issued by the League of Nations Society, and from the United Church publication, the "New Outlook."

He spoke of the heartlessness of those who make money from the business of manufacturing and selling instruments of death, referred to the case of one firm of British munition-makers who supplied wares to fourteen different countries at the same time, and to the cupidity of the famous Sir Basil Zaharoff, who made a profit of a billion dollars in the Great War, on a total business of seven billions. He mentioned the French firm of armament-manufacturers who supplied both Germany and France with munitions, and to the fact that munitions made by British firms were bought and used by Turkish artillery men to kill British, Australian and New Zealand troops.

Poison Gas

Poisonous gases used in warfare could be divided into three classes: 1st, the types, such as chlorine and phosgene, breathed into the lungs which were now considered obsolete as they could be diverted to a certain extent by the use of gas masks; 2nd, various poisonous arsenical smoke gases, like Lewisite, with a sufficient quantity of which London's population could be wiped out in three hours, and causes temporary madness in the victim and dissolves the lung tissues, thus drowning the subject in his own blood; 3rd, a gas which will probably be used in future wars in large quantities among the civilian population, as it causes an embarassing temporary blindness lasting forty-eight hours, and also brings with it acute pain; 4th, blistering gas, like mustard gas, which, if left for five minutes on a coat sleeve, will eat through and cause a painful skin blister lasting six weeks.

"Why do we not see motion-pictures of men with their chins blown off and the tops of their heads caved in? Why do we not see pictures of men such as are entombed in the Westminster Hospital at London, Ontario, where all are insane war casualties and where, when attacks of nervous frenzy come upon them, they are sprayed for hours with water, through a cotton covering, the only way in which they can be calmed down eventually."

Mr. Kerr said that a part of the tactics of war, to be found in many manuals of instruction for officers, was the method of inflaming the hatred of soldiers by telling them lies in the way of abominable stories of outrages committed by the enemy, including their nurses. In this way, the soldiers of any nation could be made to feel that nothing was too vile to commit on enemy women, in retaliation.

"And don't believe all the stories you hear about preparations for war. Many of them are hatched by armament-making firms to incite people to equip more extensively for war.

Referring to the increase in armaments and other war preparations made recently by Japan, Germany, France, Russia and Poland, Mr. Kerr said: "Common sense men admit that to prepare for war is to beget war and that the race of death. Lord Grey of Falloden said: 'Great armaments lead inevitably to war.'

Lack of Neighbors Good Fortune

"Someone has said that Canada is the most fortunate nation on the globe, because she has no neighbors on north, east or west, and her southerly neighbors are friendly.

"All lose in a war. Nobody wins. Canada, who was involved in the last war to a lesser extent than many nations, lost 51,000 men and suffered 175,000 wounded, while her debt increased over two billions during the war and the end is not yet in sight. Part of the present depression is due to the war and pension costs and loss of trade.

"And, although the League may not have been as successful as we might hope for, after all, it is still our one hope. It takes two people to make a quarrel, and the same is true in international affairs. So, when representatives of quarrelsome nations can meet together and discuss things, they have a chance to come to a settlement of the dispute."

An introduction to Mr. Kerr's thoughtful and interesting address was very effectively afforded by a brief talk by the convenor of the League of Nations' committee, Mrs. H. H. Graham, who said that her committee might better be termed a committee on Peace Education.

"We realize now that the League lacks prestige. Europe now seethes with rumors of war and I don't know that anyone has much faith in the League to prevent war.

"Canadians went into the war with high motives, but they were misguided into thinking that it was a war to end wars. And even now, militarism still rules the minds of many, through the propaganda of the armament-makers. We should resolve not to be again the dupes and tools of these people.

"There is a great difference between patriotism and a selfish nationalism. We need to think in terms of internal peace. "Let the League become an agent of peace, not an ineffective preventive of war," as a writer on this subject has said."

The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. B. W. Harvey, who expressed appreciation of the address by Mr. Kerr and Mrs. Graham's talk.

A brief insight into the workings of the Well Babies' Clinic was afforded by Mrs. Joseph Mills, who spoke of the splendid service to the community given by the Clinic, which is now co-ordinated with the officers of the recently-appointed Medical Officer of Health, and which is hampered to a great extent by lack of funds to carry on the work.

1,200 Miners Won Battle To Death For Wage Increase

The top of the mine at Pecs, Hungary, where nearly 1,200 miners won a demand for higher wages by threatening suicide while starving behind a barricade in the bowels of the earth, is shown ABOVE. Owners were reported to have agreed with government officials to eliminate a wage cut, to raise the working time from two to three days a week and to pay a bonus of $3 a week to tide the miners and their families over the winter. Government and trade union officials were reported fearful that the entombed men, without food or water for five days, would be close to death.

Chicken Supper Held By Madoc Anglicans

MADOC, Oct. 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—The annual chicken supper of St. John's Anglican Church was held on Wednesday evening, with a splendid supper served in the Masonic Hall. The tables were beautifully arranged and gay with flowers. Although supplies were abundant and everything well planned, the continuous flow of the guests rendered it necessary to set the tables twice and part of them the third time. All were duly cared for and a half-past eight all were duly seated for the program following.

Greetings were gracefully extended and addresses were given by the pastors of neighboring churches. Rev. C. Brazil of Bannockburn, Rev. McConnell of Stirling, Rev. G. W. Rivers of Trinity United Church, and Rev. Canon Swayne of Bonarlaw were called on by the presiding chairman, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, and two short plays were well presented: "Two Can Live," by the Madoc Young People; H. Mulholland as Senior Partner; A. Broad as Junior Partner, and Miss Jean Phillips and Jean Nickle as pretty stenographers.

The Tweed boys gave a skit, "Too Many Cooks," in which four young men try their luck at cake making with laughable results.

The financial results of the evening were most gratifying to all concerned.

FREIGHTER IS REFLOATE

HELIGOLAND — The United States freighter Topa Topa, which went aground several miles off Heligoland yesterday, was refloated today after all-night work. Five tugboats then attempted to tow her to Hamburg, 90 miles away despite a heavy sea. A great part of the cargo of cotton was placed on the tug boats.

KEEPING HEAD SAVES INJURY

When Floor Collapses Man Urges Audience to Remain Calm.

BANQUET HALL.

PENDLETON, Oct. 19 (GP).—Reacting to the presence of mind of one of their number, 300 people last night were saved from serious injury and perhaps death when the floor of the hall in which they were banquetting sagged beneath their weight. That a panic did not occur was due to the coolness and resource of W. M. Cockburn, Carp, who, when the floor began to creak, stood on his chair and pleaded with the crowd to remain where they were rather than make a rush for the door.

Crackling Noise

The occasion of the gathering was the annual dinner following the contests of the Eastern Counties Ploughmen's Association. The banquetters, gathered on the upper floor of the Pendleton Dairy, were listening to F. Larose of Plantagenet, announcing the winners when there was a muffled, crackling noise in the hall. Everything was stilled for a few moments, then murmurs broke out among the gathering. The floor was giving way.

Some started to move towards the exit, and there was every evidence the door would soon be jammed. Immediately Mr. Cockburn rose. He counselled those present to move cautiously from the centre of the floor, advice that was sustained by Cecil McAllister, president of the dairy, who had made an examination of the basement.

The 3-inch iron pillar, one of two supports holding the cross-beams supporting the upper floor, had buckled, giving an ominous sag to the floor.

Hon. Paul Leduc, Provincial Mines Minister, who was chief guest at the banquet, addressed the crowd later, congratulating them on the orderly manner in which they had made their exit.

Successful Banquet

Following the match about 150 people sat down to a banquet prepared by the ladies of the United Church, Omemee.

Wesley Wilson, president of the Plowman's Association, was in the chair, and after all had done justice to the repast a delightful porgram was presented. Miss Helen Reddick and Harvard Reddick sang two duets, entitled "Play to Me, Gypsy," and "Speak to Me, of Love."

The chairman then called upon John Hutton to present the Eckhart prize, a silver tea service, to Fred Webster of Woodville.

After a hearty vote of thanks to Wesley Wilson, the banquet closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Nobody Felt Like Singing on Wash-day . . . until SURPRISE SOAP was made

• How much labour there was over the wash-tubs of half a century ago. And how glad women were to learn that Surprise Soap washed clothes so thoroughly, and with so much less rubbing.

• The ingredients of Surprise Soap are skilfully blended to give rich, lasting suds that remove all the dirt with very little effort. Yet Surprise is entirely safe for even the daintiest and most fragile garments.

• Surprise Soap goes further. The hard, golden bar can be depended upon for economy. It lathers quickly, and dissolves so completely that rinsing is made an easier task. And it washes thoroughly, leaving garments fragrant and really clean.

"Quality First" was the policy adopted when the first bar of Surprise Soap was made in St. Stephen, N.B., 49 years ago. This policy has never been altered and the quality has improved with advancing knowledge, keeping pace with modern requirements.

DUFFERIN PARK, noted for its suicide turns claimed another victim on Tuesday when Jockey Frankie Dougherty was unseated by Dunlin's Lad shortly after the start of the race. He was rushed to Grace Hospital, making the third jockey to be carried there in the first three days of the meeting. Mr. Orpen sees they have the best of care and looks after them well, which is more than can be said of some of the larger tracks where all they do is provide free ambulance service. Conny Smythe's Lady Marlboro is developing into a nice two-year old. She is easily the leader in this division for the Fall racing.

Deedle, fresh from Canada turned in a winning effort at Narragansett on Tuesday, but the Americans apparently were wise to the fact he was a good thing as he only paid $5.20. At this same track it will only be a matter of a few days until one called Isaiah cracks down in front. This one is a real speedster. Zombro is another at the same place who is expected to cop a distance event. He finished second to Stop Gap in his last efftrt which was a dandy.

MISS CAREFUL is down at Laurel these days days and has been showing wonderful form in recent trials, so don't let her get away on you. Steelhead is also there and raring to go. No mistakes will be made with this one, when the proper time comes. Down at Empire City is our old friend Shoot who was knocking them dizzy up around Windsor two years ago. We hear he is back in tip top form, so that means he will lead the parade from now on with great regularity. Don't Blush is another at this same place who is waiting for the right spot and it won't be long now.

This horse Golden Oriole seems to be the champion second horse of Canada. He has finished second in all his recent races but one of these days he will move up a notch. Indian Dance is an old Dufferin favorite, but up to the present has done nothing at this meeting. Miss Gormley is another that has a liking for the sharp corners and will probably be saying (how do you do) to the judges before the week is over. Dufferin has enjoyed midsummer weather for every day of the meeting so far, and if it keeps up, Mr. Orpen will not need any red ink when he is balancing up this meeting. The new betting pavi lion in the centre field is doing a wonderful business and relieves the congestion in the regular betting shed. The free crowd are still allowed in each day except Saturdays, after the running of the fifth race.

Fred Miller Wins From Jimmy Walsh

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Oct. 19 (AP)—England's best featherweights are discovering these days just why Freddie Miller holds National (United States) Boxing Association recognition as world champion in the division.

Continuing his successful invasion of the British Isles last night, the Cincinnati southpaw battered out an easy 12-round decision over Jimmy Walsh of Chester.

Miller demonstrated his superiority over the Briton from start to finish, rocked him time and again with left hooks and raised a bad welt over Walsh's eye. The American was cautioned twice in the fifth for hitting with an open glove. Walsh put up a game fight most of the way but tired fast in the later rounds.

PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL'S PLACE IN AMERICAN SPORT SECURE AFTER LONG YEARS

Enjoyed Less Struggle Than Major league Baseball to Gain Big Time Favor—Athletes Better Dressed Than Most College Gridders.

Professional football's place in the American mosaic of sport today is solid and secure. It is established as a legitimate and progressive form of public entertainment.

But a few short years ago professional football occupied no such respectable plane and its prospects of ever attaining such a place was exceedingly remote.

For years professional football struggled along in the face of public indifference. It enjoyed a vogue only in isolated districts where there was little or no first rate college football.

It existed only as a stop-gap in a public entertainment programme, such as the travelling carnival, the circus and showboats filled a certain need in rural districts which had not legitimate drama.

To-day professional football is figuratively "on Broadway" with its name in electric lights.

• • • • • • •

Baseball Went Many Years Before Being Recognized

Professional football arrived with much less struggle than its bigger and older brother, big league baseball.

Baseball had to go along many years before it was recognized and established as a major entertainment program.

The lessons earned from the history of baseball's climb to respectability and the status of an industry helped to establish professional football much earlier.

The thing which established professional football as a major sport was the stabilizing of the league by the entry of capital and business brains. Professional football was put upon its feet not by enthusiasm of the football fan but by hard headed business men.

They stabilized professional football by making it attractive not only for the spectator but for the players as well.

• • • • • • •

Earnings Compare Favorably With Major Leaguers

Professional football teams today are better dressed and equipped than most college teams. The earnings of its stars compare favorably with the earnings of major league baseball stars. Calculated upon the basis of the time spent in performing, most professional football stars are higher paid than major league baseball stars.

Because of the shortness of the season as compared to professional baseball's season, the earnings of professional football teams probably never will approach that of big league baseball teams, but the time is coming when they will rival the income of some of the larger colleges.

It was this opportunity for profit which drew good management and able promotion to the professional football field and established it firmly as a big league game.

• • • • • • •

Pro Game Built for Spectator, Not the Player

Until that happened it was not an attractive profession to the college trained athlete. Football coaching offered a more attractive and profitabl career that the uncertainties of professional football, but once the pro game was established upon a sound foundation, the better college stars were attracted to it.

The result was better teams and better entertainment for the public. There was sensible promotion behind it, too. The professional game was built for the spectator, not the player. It was such a pleasing spectacle that college football, in self defense, had to open up its game and attempt to attain some of the more entertaining features of the pro game.

College football today is as different from the college football of last season as it was from professional football. A glance at the football scores, a review of the upsets and an analysis of the play-by-play accounts of college football will disclose there is more scoring and more opportunities for scoring than ever have existed.

That is the first fruit of the influence of the professional game upon college football.—Detroit Times.

Pat Malone Of Cubs Wishes To Be Traded

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 19—Big "Pat" Malone, the "bad boy" of the Chicago Cubs, is telling the home folks he doesn't know where he'll be pitching baseball next year.

"Anywhere, just as long as it isn't with Chicago," he said today to his friends. "They didn't give me a 'break' last season."

Winner of fourteen games while losing seven, Perce, as he is known in Altoona, said Manager Charley Grimm held him on the bench for the last four weeks of the season. He added that his contract called for a bonus of $250 for every game he won over fifteen.

Malone said he knew the Cubs are "dickering around," and that he had heard he might go to St. Louis in exchange for Southpaw Bill Hallahan.

TORONTO COACH WELL PLEASED WITH KELLY LAD

Leafs' Veteran (Kid) Line Will Carry as Much Weight as Ever on Wings.

DAVE KERR UNSIGNED.

Frank Patrick to Take Jean Pusie Under His Wing in Bruin Camp.

(By the Canadian Press)

Under the sympathetic guidance of Frank Patrick, one Jean Pusie, itinerant wrestler, boxer and hockeyist of parts, is pointing toward stardom in hockey's big time.

A failure with New York Rangers, Pusie's performed with London Tecumsehs last season. Now Patrick, who managed him when he was a sensation in Vancouver, has taken him under his wing and expects to make good the future he predicted for him when he sold Pusie to Rangers.

The new Boston manager considers the big French-Canadian defenceman, one of the most dangerous players in the game, with an extraordinarily fast and accurate shot. He plans using him for penalty shots.

Pusie and other aspiring young defencemen had better figure out a way to stop Canadiens' new line if they wish to stay up in the National League, Newsy Lalonde announced yesterday he expects Wildor Larochelle and Pete Lepine to team up with Aurel Joliat.

The trio will replace last year's Morenz-Joliat-Gagnon line, broken up by trades. Larochelle and Lepine have been working well with Joliat in practice at Saint John and Lalonde has just about decided on the combination.

So far no reports of holdout trouble have disturbed the Habitant's New Brunswick encampment but other clubs are having plenty of it.

Doc Romnes and Taffy Abel joined Lorne Chabot and Paul Thompson among Chicago's discontented pack last night. Hawks are working out without the quartet and club officials claim they have made their best offer.

Dave Kerr, who was expected to compete with Alex Connell for the Montreal Maroon goalie's berth, is another who has refused to sign at the figure offered him. He is in Toronto and has indicated he will not join Tommy Gorman's team in training at Winnipeg this week.

Toronto Leafs have only two of their stars—Frank Clancy and Happy Day—signed but all have reported at the Galt training camp and Conny Smythe expects little difficulty in coming to terms with them soon.

The Leafs 'kid' line will carry as much weight on the wings this season as ever. Charlie Conacher weighed in at 198 yesterday and Harvey Jackson at 196. Red Horner at 192 and Busher Hollett at 184 are other heavy men in the camp.

When the Torontonians stripped for action Smythe was particularly pleased with the physical setup of "Pep" Kelly, Toronto amateur. "He's a regular pocket Hercules and one of the best build men I've seen since the late Shorty Horne," the Toronto manager commented.

Dick Irvin, Leaf coach, hopes to develop a new kid line from Kelly, Art Jackson and Nick Metz. They played together last season on the St. Michael's college team that won the Memorial Cup.

Heir To Net Minding Job With Hawks

JOE STARKE

This acrobatic netminder learned his goal tending under able tutelage of the peerless Charlie Gardiner in Chicago Black Hawks nets. With the great "Chuck's" tragic death and Chicago's inability to meet Lorne Chabots salary demands, Starke may fill his former mentor's position. As an understudy he showed up well, but will have to battle "Porky" Levine, Kansas City Pla-Mors' shutout expert, for the big time job.

INTERPROVINCIAL AND O.R.F.U. TO MEET IN EASTERN PLAY-OFF

Both Groups Not in Favor of Going West for Dominion Final.

MAY START TROUBLE.

TORONTO, Oct. 19 (C.P.) — Any hopes Western Canadians held of viewing a Dominion Senior rugby final for the Grey Cup were washed away to-day by the fathers of the game. These hopes had sprung from the annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby Football Union last year when delegates favored giving the West a view of the annual rugby classic.

At a special session last night the executive of the union ruled the Grey Cup battle would be staged in the East again this season. A motion to this effect was unanimously passed.

In the face of the Intercollegiate Union's decision against competing in the C.R.U. playdowns and the fact the Interprovincial and O.R.F.U. held little favor for the Western jaunt, the executive decided the Western victors must move eastward if they wish to enter the final.

Not in Favor

The motion said the Interprovincial Union did not see its way clear to go West "and the O.R.F.U. are unable to declare themselves as only one team in that union might possibly be able to make a trip West."

With the Intercollegiate squads out of the play-offs, the winners of the Interprovincial and O.R.F.U. will meet in a sudden-death game for the Eastern crown. The victors of this game will then meet the West in the final.

Out of last year's annual C.R.U. meeting came reports, now described as erroneous, that to the West would go the Dominion final. It was explained that such a decision had not been made, as before delegates could take such a step they would have to obtain approval of their leagues.

Johnson Picks 'em

NEW YORK, Oct. 19. (AP). A toss-up race in the National Hockey League this season was forecast by Ching Johnson, husky defense man of New York Rangers.

Johnson thinks the Rangers Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings will be in the thick from the start. What Chicago Black Hawks will do without "Chuck" Gardiner remains to be seen, he says.

JOHN TOPS LIST IN BOYS' NAMES

Joan Running Strong Among Girls and Lots of Elizabeth Annes.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 18. (CP).—The list of Christian names compiled from Public School records shows rather surprisingly that the name John is a very easy winner in popularity. Seventy years ago John was only fifth on the list, but now his total nearly doubles that of his runner-up, Peter. Thirty years ago Peter did not appear in the lists of more prominent names at all. This, of course, was before Sir James Barrie lifted him out of obscurity. With him came Michael, who now ties with Anthony, well up in the lists but a long, long way behind John.

Girls' names, in particular, seem to come in cycles so that in time it begins to be possible to guess to within a year or two the ages of their owners. At one school there is a junior certificate class to-day in which 1 out of 13 children are called Joan. A year or two later came Rosemary, Pamela and Penelope, followed in close succession by an innumerable host of little girls called Elizabeth Anne. And now, just emerging from perambulators to walk unsteadily down the garden path, come Jenifer and Lillian. So the cycles go until we are back again with the Sallies and Mary Janes that our mothers shrank from, but which our daughters fal on with glee.

HAMAS LOGICAL TITLE OPPONENT SAYS CHAMPION

Steve Has Already Defeated Schmeling and Lasky in Garden's Eliminations.

THREATENS TO QUIT.

(By PAUL ZIMMERMAN)

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 19.—Max Baer was in a fighting mood to-day because he thinks Madison Square Garden is on the wrong track in its quest for a suitable heavyweight opponent for the title but in New York come June.

The world's champion heavyweight came here with his manager, Ancil Hollman, to work out the details of his motion picture but instead talked only of boxing.

"I don't like the way the Garden is going about getting a suitable opponent for me in June," said Baer. "And furthermore, if Jimmy Johnston doesn't have a suitable opponent for me in June, well, then I'll fight for someone else who get one, either in New York, Philadelphia or any place else with Jack Dempsey as promoter."

Baer said Steve Hamas already had defeated Max Schmeling and Art Lacky in the Garden's elimination bouts, "and now they're talking about matching the two losers and having me meet the winner of a bout between them."

"Now, I ask you, what would the public think of that?

"I don't care who I fight, all I want is the fellow that the public thinks has a chance to beat me. It looks to me as though Hamas has eliminated everybody but old Satchel Feet Carnera, and I don't care which one of these two guys I fight.

"As far as the rest of the heavyweights are concerned my kid brother, Buddy, can lick them?"

"Why doesn't the Garden go ahead and put Hamas up against Carnera?. Didn't. he. beat both Schmeling and Lasky?" asked Hoffman.

"The contract reads:," Hoffman added, 'That the Garden must pick an opponent suitable to us, for that June date. If it doesn't have one by that time we can't do business with it, that's all."

A fine group of swimmers has been formed at the 'Y' and under the expert coaching of Ross Thompson the class is making rapid progress in speed and style. The group formed a club this week with the following officers: Honorary president, Charles Cummer; president, Vern Janeway; vice president, Bill Gerow; secretary-treasurer, Jack Bennett; coach, Ross Thompson; and manager, Doug Loomis. Coaching periods in the pool are held each Monday and Thursday evenings between 8 and 9 o'clock, and the swimmers are preparing enthusiastically for a number of special swimming programs that will be held soon.

The annual meeting of the Central League has been set for November 17 and will probably be held in Belleville. The executive has received a written invitation from the Belleville club stating that it was anxious to act as hosts for the big pow wow. Last year the annual meeting was here and two years ago it was held in Kingston. So it appears very likely that this meeting will be held in Belleville, although it has not been decided definitely.

• • • • • • •

Newt. Thompson, secretary of the league, was in the city last night coming here to make an address to the Y's Men's Club in which organization he has been most active for years. He did not miss the opportunity to hold a little conference on important matters with Max Swanston, president of C.O.B.L. From all indications the annual meeting may develop into a lively session.

• • • • • • •

One important announcement that may result from the annual meeting is that Napanee will join the league. The executive has been bending its efforts to induce Ernie Gibbard to enter his team in the senior loop for several years. He has consistently refused to do so, but always indicated that his final aim was to have his squad in the Central loop. Last year he stated that when his club won the intermediate A championship he would possibly accept the C.O.B.L.'s invitation. Well, Napanee won that championship.

• • • • • • •

A ceremony of utmost importance to the Petes at the annual meeting will be the presentation to the local team of that historic old mug, the Johnston Cup, emblematic of the league championship. It's a long, long time since this trophy, significant of the premier sport award in Central Ontario and donated by a local man, Art Johnston, has come to its home town.

• • • • • • •

More players will sit in at this annual meeting than at any other in the history of the league. Previously each club was invited to send its league representative and one player, but to this session the clubs will be invited to have present two representatives and two players.

• • • • • • •

With everything set for the league's big pow wow, the local club should lose no time in holding its session to clean up the season's business and line up any matters that it desires to have discussed at the general meeting. Other clubs have been busy in this direction, according to reports.

• • • • • • •

Things have been active in a baseball way around Belleville. "Speedy" St. Louis, pitcher with Kingston Ponies, has moved his residence to Belleville where he is employed with an oil company and seems to find the scenery so delightful that he will remain at least through next summer. Other baseball talent in these parts may line up with the Nationals for next season.

• • • • • • •

Word received via grapevine wireless relates that there may be an upheaval in regard to the Nationals' management before next season swings around. New interests, armed with plenty of finances, are anxious to take over the management. Providing the old management remains in control "Peeney" Mills will probably be manager of the team next season, but if the other parties take hold "Peeney" will likely drop out altogether.

• • • • • • •

Peterborough rugby fans can rest assured that the intermediate O.R.F.U. game in Belleville tomorrow is going to be properly handled by a capable official. Coach Bamforth, of the P.C.I. seniors, after much urging by the Petes has consented to referee the contest. The locals were dissatisfied with the refereeing furnished in the two former games, the officials being too lenient with the rough stuff.

• • • • • • •

Both the intermediate squad and P.C.I. senior team raced through peppy practices yesterday and reported themselves to be in first class shape for the big double clash with the Quinte squads tomorrow. Jack Hope's knee injury has responded to treatment and he was booting the pigskin smartly in drill last night. A factor that makes the Petes more optimistic about the outcome is the knowledge that "Mick" Magee, their captain, will again be in the lineup. Magee is a fiery player whose big forte is taking advantage of any breaks. He will play on the half line, while Hope will go up into outside wing when he is not doing service as punter.

Gordon Monkman, manager of Witaker's, will tender the Whitaker Cricket Club a dinner at the Paragon Tea Room on Monday evening. The Whitaker cricketers had an active season and did much to develop young players in the great old game.

MAJOR BALL LOOPS DISAGREE ON POST-SEASON EXHIBITIONS

National League Against Barnstorming Ban as Suggested by American.

CAN BE CURTAILED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—While not giving three cheers for the extra-curricular activities of big league baseball players, John A. Heydler, President of the National League, is inclined to doubt that club-owners in the older of the two major circuits will place a ban on post-season barnstorming.

Such action has been advocated by President Harridge of the American League, who proposes to bring it up at the annual meeting of both leagues in New York in December. Harridge cited the head injury suffered by Jimmie Foxx of Philadelphia Athletics in an exhibition game in Winnipeg and the reported soreness of Paul ("Daffy") Dean's arm from ceaseless twirling as reasons for such a curb.

May Not Discuss It

Heydler said the National League is not likely to discuss barnstorming at its annual meeting unless the matter is brought up at the joint session of the leagues. Even then there is some doubt that the head of the national circuit will encourage a ban.

"For the present, I can't see that it is a serious or grave matter" Heydler said, "and unless a proposal for such a ban is forthcoming from the American League at the annual joint meeting I am inclined to believe that our league will not touch the matter."

Already Restricted

Heydler pointed out that the National League already has restricted post-season activities to a greater extent than has the American. Last year it refused to permit any of its players to accompany American League players on a tour of the Orient.

Barnstorming is governed in the laws of major league baseball and in the players' contracts. In each case the exhibition period expires Oct. 31, except where special permission is granted for something on the order of the tour through the Far East.

Heydler hinted that there may be a disposition on the part of some owners to limit the barnstorming period to Oct. 15, as the regular season now ends Sept. 30.

Rowe And His Edna Back In Eldorado

ELDORADO, Ark., Oct. 19. (A.P.) — El Dorado's pride of the major leagues, Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe, was back at home to-day, resting for the exhibition game here next Tuesday when the city will officially welcome its native son.

Rowe and his bride, the former Edna Mary Skinner, reached El Dorado last night after driving 600 miles from Evansville, Ind., where they visited Pete Fox and his wife.

The Detroit hurling ace plans to spend a great portion of his time hunting and fishing after the celebration Tuesday. He said the question of a contract for next year has not been mentioned and will not be brought up until about the middle of January.

This is one of the first additions to his sextette Manager Roach predicted would be forthcoming.

The annual mid-season string of super-inflammable football explosives is to be set off to-morrow at Toronto, Montreal and Kingston and when the pieces are picked up late in the afternoon the intercollegiate and Ontario divisions will have distinct leaders—barring deadlocks—and the Big Four may find itself in for a finish fight.

Queen's and University of Toronto will settle the halfway leadership of the intercollegiate with the high-powered blue team now definitely favored to score a third straight victory. Under normal toss-up affair at Kingston but this week's fraternity row cost the Tricolor five players, including two star linesmen, How Hamlin and Bill Glass.

Field Full Squad

The Blues may go no heavy scoring against a team that wields great defensive weapons but at least Warren Stevens will send out a full-strength squad. McGill goes to London for a game with the winless Western Mustangs. The intercollegiate cellar awaits the loser.

The Sarnia-St. Michael's College game in Toronto stands out as one of the few headline battles the O.R.F.U. has staged in three seasons. The Imperials copped titles in runaway fashion in other years, batting down one and all with scarcely any effort. This may be just another race but it doesn't look like it to-day.

The Irish schoolboys, packing a fine defensive line and aerial attack, have kept pace with Imperials by winning their first two scheduled games, thus building up a reputation that Sarnia can only break down on the field. St. Mike's are confident they will make it close for the champions.

AMERICAN TEAM LEADING BY 990

Invaders Start Fifth and Final Round With Lead for First Time.

60 BOARDS REMAIN.

LONDON, October 19 (A.P.). — The British and United States teams battling for the Schwab Bridge Trophy squared off to-day for the fifth and final round with the invaders in the lead for the first time.

Ely Culbertson and his teammates held an advantage of 990 points, with a total of 74,050 to England's 73,060. A rally late last night gave the Americans their belated credit balance. Sixty boards remained to be played.

The American captain praised the performance of his British opponents, saying "with one more year of practice and a slight rearrangement of members of the team, I can predict that the days of American bridge supremacy are approaching an end."

QUEEN MARY BEATS KING GEORGE 4-1

J. McGregor is Outstanding Scorer in School Soccer Tangle.

Queen Mary increased their standing in the Public School Soccer League yesterday afternoon, when they played their postponed game at the Oval, defeating King George by four goals to one. T. McGregor was the outstanding goal scorer. Hawkes and A. Northcott starred for east city boys.

First Half

Both teams opened up with an excellent brand of combination. King George travelled down into the Queen Mary goal to have the better of the exchanges. They worked right in on Nieman who was beat if it hadn't been for Robson falling back in time to prevent a tally. But they were rewarded a little later when A. Northcott slipped the ball past the Queen Mary custodian for the first counter. The East City boys held on to the lead until a few minutes before the interval, when Robson repulsed an attack at his own goal and dribbled his way towards Robinson's charge to register the equaliser Half time—King George 1, Queen Mary 1.

West Enders Take Lead

On resuming, East City boys carried the attack into the Queen Mary goal to find Robson blocking them in front of goal. He punted clear upfield where McGregor trapped the ball and wormed his way towards goal to put his team ahead. From a scrimmage in front of goal, the same player picked the far corner of the goal for third counter King George broke through the defense but lacked finish in front of goal. Keller relieved the pressure to send Hamilton away down the right wing. He evaded the full back to place McGregor in possession who made the count, Queen Mary 4, King George 1.

King George—D. Robinson, goal; R. Scriver and D. Eason, full backs; A. Cooper, G. Hawkes and G. Bocock, halves; D. Ralph, R. Ball, E. Partington, A. Northcott and F. Gandy, forwards; subs., D. Delong and E. Eason.

Queen Mary—A. Nieman, goal; S. Botnick and R. Crary, full backs; O. Keller, J. Robson and E. Routley, halves; B. Hamilton, C. Nicholls, D. Mortimer, J. Merrett and J. McGregor, forwards.

Referee—J. Isle.

BETHANY, Mo.—Even though he did bet on Detroit, Jack Lincoln, cafe operator, figures that he's even now for the world series.

Dizzy and Daffy Dean, of St. Louis and largely responsible for Lincoln's $2.50 loss, stopped at his place for lunch on their post-season exhibition jaunt.

A crowd gathered and Daffy, seeking to get away as soon as possible, fled leaving his hat.

CHAPTER 8

Baffled, the inspector arose. Mrs. Reeves accompanied him and the reporter to the door. Blade was already half way down the stairs when Lee tried his last shot. "But if you loved him, Mrs. Reeves——"

Her voice cut in on his like a whip. "I loved him, inspector. That is enough for the moment. Please go, now." It was a new experience for Lee. She was dismissing him like any servant. He nodded his head uncertainly and followed Blade.

"I'll go now, all right—but I'll be back, lady," he muttered under his breath.

He caught up with Tim and waited for the young fellow's comment on his dismissal. But evidently Tim had not heard.

The driver who lounged near the car started to climb behind the wheel but Lee shook his head. "Beat it back upstairs," he ordered. "It's the first apartment to the right. A woman in a lavender dress will open the door for you. Get a good look at her while you're up there. Tell her the inspector is sorry to bother her again but that he left a small notebook on the table near where he was sitting. Let her bring the notebook to you. And keep your big fingers off the part that she holds. Bring it down here to me."

When the man had disappeared he turned to Tim. "She lied, Tim," he announced gravely.

"I know it," replied the reporter in an inattentive manner.

"That looks pretty suspicious."

"I know it, but hell, man, she didn't kill her husband. She told you she loved him," the reporter burst out.

So Tim had heard, after all. The inspector let the conversation lag.

In a minute, the detective returned carrying a small notebook gingerly. "It's a blank one," the inspector explained to Tim as he wrapped it carefully in a pocket handkerchief and stowed it in an inside pocket.

"You'd recognize her again in street clothes?" he asked, turning to the detective. The man nodded.

"Stick around here then and follow her. Report anything you find out, directly to me at headquarters."

"You drive, Tim," he finished, getting in beside the driver's seat. "I want to think."

The drive back to the English House was silent and swift. Even the college students, who were connoisseurs of the art of speedy transportation, stopped to note the car with approval. Lee didn't notice. In the early days, he had remonstrated with Tim and had even at one time refused to permit him behind the wheel when there was an officer in the car. "You'll kill somebody some day and get the department mixed up in it," he had declared.

But Tim had never killed anyone and there had been occasions when Tim at the wheel of a police car had meant the difference between success and failure for the department.

Sergeant Brown was back on the door when they halted at the English House. "The other two guys are in there," he told the inspector. "I left James and Murphy with 'em. Doc Holmes says he'll send his report over to you by noon."

The inspector nodded and started toward the door of the seminar room with Tim.

"By the way, inspector," called Brown. "The other reporters are here. They're back talking to Dan now. When they found out Blade was here, they said they wanted a statement right away." The reporters' demand had been more urgently expressed than that, but Brown, like a good underling, had tempered it for his superior's ears.

He might as well not have bothered. Lee knew without being told what the reporters had said.

"Tell them," he exploded, "that we're having a garden party in here and that the Duchess of York is pouring tea." And he slammed the door of the seminar room behind himself and a grinning Tim.

Dr. Wilson, who had been sitting with bowed head, his face covered by a long, slender hand, jerked up at the sound. The Turner girl and Jamieson didn't move. One of the men who had come since the inspector had left, whirled about from the window where he had been standing.

Tim looked at them pityingly. The fear on the faces of all but one of the group was distressingly naked. He knew better than the inspector the atmosphere in which they lived, a cloistered quietness in which people talked and wrote a great deal, with intellectual violence. But with violent action they were completely unfamiliar. The death of the man upstairs left them like children in a dark hallway where bugaboos lurked in each shadow. What they feared they didn't know, but that made it all the more terrible. They faced the inspector as children approach an open doorway through which light pours into the dark.

Then a voice said, quietly amused, resuming a conversation which the inspector's entry had interrupted, "But my dear woman, why make this a scene out of 'Hamlet'? I can only be Conan Doyle, and probably not very good Conan Doyle at that."

The speaker sat straddling a chair before Miss Edwards, his chin resting on his arms folded across its back. A bantering smile curled his lips and his nostrils quivered delicately as if savoring the woman's discomfiture. He watched her behind deep-set black eyes that were steady and hard, but her attention had gone from him to the inspector. He stood up, running firm, blunt fingers through dark, unruly hair to draw it back from his eyes.

With outstretched hand, he approached the inspector. "My name's Walker. You got me out of bed and I haven't had any coffee so I probably shan't be very pleasant. But I'll be honest. That's one of my charms, my outspoken honesty." He chuckled at the puzzled look the inspector gave him and walked away toward the man at the window.

"Go pay your respects to the inspector, doctor," he urged, tapping him on the arm. The man who shrank away from his touch was past middle age and a little stooped as if he had spent too many hours at a desk. His hair, slightly gray, was parted carefully and brushed smoothly to his head. He wore nose-glasses on a black ribbon and took them off as he spoke to the detective, showing a pair of blue eyes with the graveness of a child's.

"As you probably surmised, inspector, I am Dr. Henderson," he said quietly.

Lee nodded and smiled at him. "Then we're all here, aren't we? If you'll just collect about the table, we'll get busy."

"And Mrs. Reeves?" asked Dr. Wilson. "How did she take the news?"

"Very quietly," answered Lee.

"I wonder, inspector, if you'd mind my 'phoning my wife now so that she can go over. I don't like to think of that poor child alone." Dr. Wilson made the request pleadingly.

It was on the tip of Lee's tongue to tell him that the poor child was very able to get along alone but he refrained. The professor's face seemed to have aged five years since he arrived that morning and the process wasn't pretty to see.

He granted the request in gentler tones than he ordinarily used. But he sent the detective from the door with the professor.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, October 20

An interesting and pleasant day is predicted from the ruling planetary directions. There is prospect of short journeys or changes, possibly necessitated by property interests or in connection with elderly persons or institutions. Personal correspondence may bring pleasure or promote these favorable business matters, but it would be wise to be quite circumspect in all writings.

Those whose birthday it is may find an unexpected change in their affairs, with a change, journey or rearrangement of matters which have been static or congested.

A child born on this day should be talented, industrious, popular and fairly successful.

CANADA'S UNSOLVED MYSTERIES

No. 6—Winnipeg's Big Payroll Robbery

By SAM G. ROSS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

(Copyright, 1934, by The Canadian Press)

WINNIPEG, Oct. 19 (C.P.)—Five men loitered in the entrance to the Winnipeg Electric Railway Chambers just as officers were beginning the day's work Aug. 15, 1925.

One minute later and Winnipeg was given its greatest payroll robbery which to-day still stands on police records as an unsolved mystery crime. The five grabbed $87,478 in loot and faded away.

Carefully planned and carefully executed, the robbery was carried out within a minute while clerks, stenographers and business executives paraded into the building to start their labors for the day.

When Richard Shaw and Leslie Montgomery, carrying the payroll of the Winnipeg Electric Company which operates Winnipeg's street railway, stepped out of the car they arrived in, the five quickly fell into position.

While two guarded nearby entrances, two others stepped up with loaded guns to halt Shaw and Montgomery. The fifth slipped into the car they arrived in and jammed a revolver against the ribs of Sydney Krowler, chauffeur.

Shaw was ordered to stop, but when he attempted to race into the office 12 feet ahead he was clubbed with the butt of a bandit's gun. The robber pair grabbed the satchels and raced into the car. The two bandit-guards joined them. Krowler was ordered to "drive like hell."

Several blocks away the car was halted and Krowler was ordered out. One of the bandits took the wheel and sped away. But they never left the city in the car. It was found but no trace of the bandits or the loot was uncovered. Trails led many ways.

Police took up the trail from the scene of the robbery. They had Krowler guide them along the route he had taken the five and their loot. Out into country points they followed leads, all without success. They are still searching, but the clues are meagre.

EASY JOB FOR ENUMERATORS

Work of Listing Voters in City Proceeded Smoothly and Swiftly With Public's Aid.

HUMAN SIDELIGHTS.

"When we ask them their occupations, nearly all try to make their jobs sound bigger than they are," one of the army of enumerators at work in the city told a reporter this morning. He was giving some of the human sidelights on his task.

"A fellow will tell you he is a carpenter when everyone knows he doesn't even know how to handle a hammer," the enumerator said. "It's just human nature, I guess."

Asked if he encountered any trouble in the way of suspicious or taciturn people, the canvasser said his work had proceeded swiftly and smoothly. "We had very little trouble. Fearing that they would be assessed with a poll tax, a few householders hesitated to give the names of young fellows living in the houses but, on the whole, we found the occupants quite eager and ready to answer our questions. Most people had heard we were coming and were looking for us."

"Nearly everyone asked us when the election was to be held — as though we knew any more about that than they did! And they wanted to know, of course, who the candidates were. Quite a few women were still in doubt about their franchise and wanted to know if women had a vote."

Discovery that the city relief list totals represent only a portion of the local unemployed, impressed deeply the enumerator whose beat was in the northwest section of the city. "There are a great many unemployed people who do not figure on the relief lists," he said. "Some have small resources on which they are trying to struggle through to better times and others are just too proud to accept public relief. The real number of unemployed is amazing. In visits to fifty houses containing approximately 150 votes we found as high as 40 men in those houses out of work."

Most of the 104 enumerators who started canvassing the city in pairs on Monday have now finished their canvasses, an official in the local election registrar's office said today. The men are now busy making seven copies of their lists as required by law. All copies must be turned in by tomorrow.

Work of the enumerators in the rural section of the riding is progressing swiftly. The rural canvassers are being allowed three extra days in the preparation of their lists.

Third Kidnap Note Mailed In Hamilton

NAPANEE, Ont., Oct. 19.—(C.P.) The third note received by John Daly, 74 year old tea merchant, threatening the kidnapping of his daughter Celestine if ransom were not paid, was reported to-day to have been mailed in Hamilton.

Official confirmation of the report was lacking, however. Police referred all questions to Crown Attorney Kenneth S. Ham and beyond denying receipt of a fourth letter by Daly he would divulge no information.
